(2) The Local Government may by general or special order in the official Gazette direct at what place or places the Court of Session shall hold its sitting, and may from time to time rescind or alter any order so made; but until such order be made, the Courts of Session shall hold their sittings as heretofore.

(3) The Local Government, by like order, may also declare that, in the case of any district in which the trial of any offence is to be by jury, the trial of the offence shall, if the Judge, on application made to him or of his own motion, so directs, be by jurors summoned from a special jury list, and may revoke or alter such order.

(4) When the accused is charged at the same trial with several offences of which some are and some are not triable by jury he shall be tried by jury for such of those offences as are triable by jury, and by the Court of Session, with the aid of the jurors as assessors, for such of them as are not triable by jury.

Provided that, subject to the right of objection hereinafter mentioned, the same jury may try, or the same assessors may aid in the trial of, as many accused persons successively as the Court thinks fit.

Trial by same jury or assessors of several offenders in succession.

273. (1) In trials before the High Court, when it appears to the High Court, at any time before the commencement of the trial of the person charged, that any charge or any portion thereof is clearly unsustainable, the Judge may make on the charge an entry to that effect.

Entry on sustainable charges.

(2) Such entry shall have the effect of staying proceedings upon the charge or portion of the charge, as the case may be.

Effect of entry.

C.—Choosing a Jury.

274. (1) In trials before the High Court the jury shall consist of nine persons.

Number of jury.

(2) In trials by jury before the Court of Session the jury shall consist of such uneven number, not being less than three, or more than nine, as the Local Government, by order applicable to any particular district or to any particular class of offences in that district, may direct.

fourthly, in any district for which the Local Government has declared that the trial of certain offences may be by special jury, the jurors shall in any case in which the Judge so directs, be chosen from the special jury list prescribed in section 325.

277. (1) As each juror is chosen, his name shall be called aloud, and, upon his appearance, the accused shall be asked if he objects to be tried by such juror.

Names of jurors to be called.

(2) Objection may then be taken to such juror by the accused or by the prosecutor, and the grounds of objection shall be stated:

(g) his inability to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or when such evidence is interpreted the language in which it is interpreted;

(h) any other circumstance which, in the opinion of the Court, renders him improper as a juror.

Decision of objection.

279. (1) Every objection taken to a juror shall be decided by the Court, and such decision shall be recorded and be final.

Supply of place of juror against whom objection allowed.

Provided that no objection to such juror or other person is taken under section 278 and allowed.

Foreman of jury.

280. (1) When the jurors have been chosen, they shall appoint one of their number to be foreman.

(2) The foreman shall preside in the debates of the jury, deliver the verdict of the jury, and ask any information from the Court that is required by the jury or any of the jurors.

(3) If a majority of the jury do not, within such time as the Judge thinks reasonable, agree in the appointment of a foreman, he shall be appointed by the Court.

Swearing of jurors.

281. When the foreman has been appointed, the jurors shall be sworn under the Indian Oaths Act, 1873.

Procedure when juror ceases to attend.

282. (1) If, in the course of a trial by jury, at any time before the return of the verdict, any juror, from any sufficient cause, is prevented from attending throughout the trial, or if any juror absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, or if it appears that any juror is unable to understand the language in which the evidence is given, or, when such evidence is interpreted, the language in which it is interpreted, a new juror shall be added, or the jury shall be discharged and a new jury chosen.

(2) In each of such cases the trial shall commence anew.

283. The Judge may also discharge the jury whenever the prisoner becomes incapable of remaining at the bar.

D.—Choosing Assessors.

Assessors how chosen.

284. When the trial is to be held with the aid of assessors, two or more shall be chosen, as the Judge thinks fit, from the persons summoned to act as such.

Procedure when assessor is unable to attend.

285. (1) If, in the course of a trial with the aid of assessors, at any time before the finding, any assessor is, from any sufficient cause, prevented from attending throughout the trial, or absents himself, and it is not practicable to enforce his attendance, the trial shall proceed with the aid of the other assessor or assessors.

(2) If all the assessors are prevented from attending, or absent themselves, the proceedings shall be stayed, and a new trial shall be held with the aid of fresh assessors.

E.—Trial to Close of Cases for Prosecution and Defence.

Opening case for prosecution.

286. (1) When the jurors or assessors have been chosen, the prosecutor shall open his case by reading from the Indian Penal Code or other law the description of the offence charged, and stating shortly by what evidence he expects to prove the guilt of the accused. XLV of

287. The examination of the accused duly recorded by or before the committing Magistrate shall be tendered by the prosecutor and read as evidence.

Procedure after examination of witnesses for prosecution.

289. (1) When the examination of the witnesses for the prosecution and the examination (if any) of the accused are concluded, the accused shall be asked whether he means to adduce evidence.

(2) If he says that he does not, the prosecutor may sum up his case; and, if the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, it may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(3) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is no evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court may then, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, record a finding, or, in a case tried by a jury, direct the jury to return a verdict, of not guilty.

(4) If the accused, or any one of several accused, says that he means to adduce evidence, and the Court considers that there is evidence that he committed the offence, or if, on his saying that he does not mean to adduce evidence, the prosecutor sums up his case and the Court considers that there is evidence that the accused committed the offence, the Court shall call on the accused to enter on his defence.

Defence.

290. The accused or his pleader may then open his case, stating the facts or law on which he intends to rely, and making such comments as he thinks necessary on the evidence for the prosecution. He may then examine his witnesses (if any) and after their cross-examination and re-examination (if any) may sum up his case.

Right of accused to examination and summoning of witnesses.

291. The accused shall be allowed to examine any witness not previously named by him, if such witness is in attendance; but he shall not, except as provided in sections 211 and 231, be entitled of right to have any witness summoned, other than the witnesses named in the list delivered to the Magistrate by whom he was committed for trial.

Prosecutor's right of reply.

292. If the accused, or any of the accused, has stated, when asked under section 289, that he means to adduce evidence, the prosecutor shall be entitled to reply. But if the accused does not then so state, the prosecutor shall not be entitled to reply.

View by jury or assessors.

293. (1) Whenever the Court thinks that the jury or assessors should view the place in which the offence charged is alleged to have been committed, or any other place in which any other transaction material to the trial is alleged to have occurred, the Court shall make an order to that effect, and the jury or assessors shall be conducted in a body, under the care of an officer of the Court, to such place, which shall be shown to them by a person appointed by the Court.

(2) Such officer shall not except with the permission of the Court, suffer any other person to speak to, or hold any communication with, any of the jury or assessors, and, unless the Court otherwise directs, they shall, when the view is finished, be immediately conducted back into Court.

When juror or assessor may be examined.

294. If a juror or assessor is personally acquainted with any relevant fact, it is his duty to inform the Judge that such is the case, whereupon he may be sworn, examined, cross-examined and re-examined in the same manner as any other witness.

Jury or assessors to attend at adjourned sitting.

295. If a trial is adjourned, the jury or assessors shall attend at the adjourned sitting, and at every subsequent sitting, until the conclusion of the trial.

Locking up jury.

296. The High Court may, from time to time, make rules as to keeping the jury together during a trial before such Court lasting for more than one day; and, subject to such rules, the presiding Judge may order whether and in what manner the jurors shall be kept together under the charge of an officer of the Court, or whether they shall be allowed to return to their respective homes.

F.—Conclusion of Trial in cases tried by Jury.

Charge to jury.

297. In cases tried by jury, when the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court shall proceed to charge the jury, summing up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and laying down the law by which the jury are to be guided.

Duty of Judge.

298. (1) In such cases it is the duty of the Judge—

(a) to decide all questions of law arising in the course of the trial, and especially all questions as to the relevancy of facts which it is proposed to prove, and the admissibility of evidence or the propriety of questions asked by or on behalf of the parties; and, in his discretion, to prevent the production of inadmissible evidence, whether it is or is not objected to by the parties;

(b) to decide upon the meaning and construction of all documents given in evidence at the trial;

(c) to decide upon all matters of fact which it may be necessary to prove in order to enable evidence of particular matters to be given;

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions.—Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 299-306.)

(d) to decide whether any question which arises is for himself or for the jury, and upon this point his decision shall bind the jurors.

(2) The Judge may, if he thinks proper, in the course of his summing up, express to the jury his opinion upon any question of fact, or upon any question of mixed law and fact, relevant to the proceeding.

Illustrations.

(a) It is proposed to prove a statement made by a person not being a witness in the case, on the ground that circumstances are proved which render evidence of such statement admissible.

It is for the Judge, and not for the jury, to decide whether the existence of those circumstances has been proved.

(b) It is proposed to give secondary evidence of a document the original of which is alleged to have been lost or destroyed.

It is the duty of the Judge to decide whether the original has been lost or destroyed.

Duty of jury.

299. It is the duty of the jury—

(a) to decide which view of the facts is true and then to return the verdict which under such view ought, according to the direction of the Judge, to be returned;

(b) to determine the meaning of all technical terms (other than terms of law) and words used in an unusual sense which it may be necessary to determine, whether such words occur in documents or not;

(c) to decide all questions which according to law are to be deemed questions of fact;

(d) to decide whether general indefinite expressions do or do not apply to particular cases, unless such expressions refer to legal procedure or unless their meaning is ascertained by law, in either of which cases it is the duty of the Judge to decide their meaning.

Illustrations.

A is tried for the murder of B.

It is the duty of the Judge to explain to the jury the distinction between murder and culpable homicide, and to tell them under what views of the facts A ought to be convicted of murder, or of culpable homicide, or to be acquitted.

It is the duty of the jury to decide which view of the facts is true, and to return a verdict in accordance with the direction of the Judge, whether that direction is right or wrong, and whether they do or do not agree with it.

(b) The question is whether a person entertained a reasonable belief on a particular point.—whether work was done with reasonable skill or due diligence.

Each of these is a question for the jury.

Retirement to consider.

300. In cases tried by jury, after the Judge has finished his charge, the jury may retire to consider their verdict.

Except with the leave of the Court, no person other than a juror shall speak to, or hold any communication with, any member of such jury

Delivery of verdict.

301. When the jury have considered their verdict the foreman shall inform the Judge what is their verdict, or what is the verdict of a majority.

Procedure where jury differ.

302. If the jury are not unanimous, the Judge may require them to retire for further consideration. After such a period as the Judge considers reasonable, the jury may deliver their verdict, although they are not unanimous.

Verdict to be given on each charge.
Judge may question jury.

303. (1) Unless otherwise ordered by the Court, the jury shall return a verdict on all the heads of charge on which the accused is tried, and the Judge may ask them such questions as are necessary to ascertain what their verdict is.

Questions and answers to be recorded.

(2) Such questions and the answers to them shall be recorded.

Amending verdict.

304. When by accident or mistake a wrong verdict is delivered, the jury may, before or immediately after it is recorded, amend the verdict, and it shall stand as ultimately amended.

Verdict in High Court when to prevail

305. (1) When in a case tried before a High Court the jury are unanimous in their opinion, or when as many as six are of one opinion and the Judge agrees with them, the Judge shall give judgment in accordance with such opinion.

(2) When in any such case the jury are satisfied that they will not be unanimous, but six of them are of one opinion, the foreman shall so inform the Judge.

Discharge of jury in other cases.

(3) If the Judge disagrees with the majority, he shall at once discharge the jury.

(4) If there are not so many as six who agree in opinion, the Judge shall, after the lapse of such time as he thinks reasonable, discharge the jury.

Verdict in Court of Session when to prevail.

306. (1) When in a case tried before the Court of Session the Judge does not think it necessary to express disagreement with the verdict of the jurors or of a majority of the jurors, he shall give judgment accordingly.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VI.—Proceedings in Prosecutions.—Chapter XXIII.—Of Trials before High Courts and Courts of Session.—Sections 307-311.)

(2) If the accused is acquitted, the Judge shall record judgment of acquittal. If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

Procedure where Sessions Judge disagrees with verdict.

307. (1) If in any such case the Sessions Judge disagrees with the verdict of the jurors, or of a majority of the jurors, on all or any of the heads of charge on which the accused has been tried, and is clearly of opinion that it is necessary for the ends of justice to submit the case to the High Court, he shall submit the case accordingly, recording the grounds of his opinion, and, when the verdict is one of acquittal, stating the offence which he considers to have been committed.

(2) Whenever the Judge submits a case under this section, he shall not record judgment of acquittal or of conviction on any of the charges on which the accused has been tried, and subject thereto it shall, after considering the entire evidence and after giving due weight to the opinions of the Sessions Judge and the jury, either remand the accused to custody or admit him to bail.

(3) In dealing with the case so submitted the High Court may exercise any of the powers which it may exercise on an appeal: but it may acquit or convict the accused of any offence of which the jury could have convicted him upon the charge framed and placed before it, and, if it convicts him, may pass such sentence as might have been passed by the Court of Session.

G.—Re-trial of Accused after Discharge of Jury.

Re-trial of accused after discharge of jury.

308. Whenever the jury is discharged the accused shall be detained in custody or on bail (as the case may be), and shall be tried by another jury, unless the Judge considers that he should not be re-tried, in which case the Judge shall make an entry to that effect on the charge, and such entry shall operate as an acquittal.

H.—Conclusion of Trial in Cases tried with Assessors.

Delivery of opinions of assessors.

309. (1) When, in a case tried with the aid of assessors, the case for the defence and the prosecutor's reply (if any) are concluded, the Court may sum up the evidence for the prosecution and defence, and shall then require each of the assessors to state his opinion orally, and shall record such opinion.

(2) The Judge shall then give judgment, but in doing so shall not be bound to conform to the opinions of the assessors.

Judgment.

(3) If the accused is convicted, the Judge shall pass sentence on him according to law.

I.—Procedure in Case of Previous Conviction.

Procedure in case of previous conviction.

310. In the case of a trial by jury or with the aid of assessors, where the accused is charged with an offence committed after a previous conviction, for any offence, the procedure laid down in sections 271, 286, 305, 306 and 309 shall be modified as follows:—

(a) the part of the charge stating the previous conviction shall not be read out in Court, nor shall the accused be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge unless and until he has either pleaded guilty to, or been convicted of, the subsequent offence:

(b) if he pleads guilty to, or is convicted of, the subsequent offence, he shall then be asked whether he has been previously convicted as alleged in the charge:

(c) when the trial is held with the aid of assessors, judgment in writing need not be given until the question of previous conviction has been disposed of:

(d) if he answers that he has been so previously convicted, the Judge may proceed to pass sentence on him accordingly; but, if he denies that he has been so previously convicted, or refuses to, or does not, answer such question, the jury, or the Court and the assessors (as the case may be), shall then hear evidence concerning such previous conviction, and in such case (where the trial is by jury) it shall not be necessary to swear the jurors again.

When evidence of previous conviction may be given.

311. Notwithstanding anything in the last preceding section, evidence of the previous conviction may be given at the trial for the subsequent offence, if the fact of the previous conviction is relevant under the provisions of the Indian Evidence Act, 1872. [Act X of 1882, s. 310, last para.] I of 1872.

326. (1) The Sessions Judge shall ordinarily, three days at least before the day which he may from time to time fix for holding the sessions, send a letter to the District Magistrate requesting him to summon as many persons named in the said revised list or the said special list as seem to the Sessions Judge to be needed for trials by jury and trials with the aid of assessors at the said sessions, the number to be summoned not being less than double the number required for any such trial.

(2) The names of the persons to be summoned shall be drawn by lot in open Court, excluding those who have served within six months unless the number cannot be made up without them; and the names so drawn shall be specified in the said letter.

Power to summon another set of jurors or assessors.

327. The Court of Session may direct jurors or assessors to be summoned at other periods than the period specified in section 326, when the number of trials before the Court renders the attendance of one set of jurors or assessors for a whole session oppressive, or whenever for other reasons such direction is found to be necessary.

Form and contents of summons.

328. Every summons to a juror or assessor shall be in writing, and shall require his attendance as a juror or assessor, as the case may be, at a time and place to be therein specified.

When Government or Railway servant may be excused.

329. When any person summoned to serve as a juror or assessor is in the service of Government or of a Railway Company, the Court to serve in which he is so summoned may excuse his attendance if it appears on the representation of the head of the office in which he is employed, that he cannot serve as a juror or assessor, as the case may be, without inconvenience to the public.

Court may excuse attendance of juror or assessor.

330. (1) The Court of Session may, for reasonable cause, excuse any juror or assessor from attendance at any particular session.

Court may relieve special jurors from liability to serve again as jurors for twelve months.

(2) The Court of Session may, if it shall think fit, at the conclusion of any trial by special jury, direct that the jurors who have served on such jury shall not be summoned to serve again as jurors for a period of twelve months. [Act X of 1882, s. 330 A.]

List of jurors and assessors attending.

331. (1) At each session the said Court shall cause to be made a list of the names of those who have attended as jurors and assessors at such session.

(2) Such list shall be kept with the list of the jurors and assessors as revised under section 324.

(3) A reference shall be made in the margin of the said revised list to each of the names which are mentioned in the list prepared under this section.

Penalty for non-attendance of juror or assessor.

332. (1) Any person summoned to attend as a juror or as an assessor who, without lawful excuse, fails to attend as required by the summons, or who, having attended, departs without having obtained the permission of the Court, or fails to attend after an adjournment of the Court after being ordered to attend, shall be liable by order of the Court of Session to a fine not exceeding one hundred rupees.

(2) Such fine shall be levied by the District Magistrate by attachment and sale of any moveable property belonging to such juror or assessor within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court making the order.

(3) For good cause shewn, the Court may remit or reduce any fine so imposed.

(4) In default of recovery of the fine by attachment and sale, such juror or assessor may, by order of the Court of Session, be imprisoned in the civil jail for the term of fifteen days, unless such fine is paid before the end of the said term.

(2) But it may, from time to time, in the case of the High Court at Fort William with the consent of the Governor General in Council, and in all other cases with the consent of the Local Government, hold sittings at such other places within the local limits of its appellate jurisdiction as the High Court appoints.

(1) In the case of any offence triable exclusively by the Court of Session or High Court, the District Magistrate a Presidency Magistrate, any Magistrate of the first class inquiring into the offence, or, with the sanction of the District Magistrate, any other Magistrate, may, with the view of obtaining the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, the offence under inquiry, tender a pardon to such person on condition of his making a full and true disclosure of the whole of the circumstances within his knowledge relative to such offence, and to every other person concerned, whether as principal or abettor, in the commission thereof.

(2) Every person accepting a tender under this section shall be examined as a witness in the case.

(3) Such person, if not on bail, shall be detained in custody until the termination of the trial by the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

(4) Every Magistrate, other than a Presidency Magistrate, who tenders a pardon under this section, shall record his reasons for so doing; and, when any Magistrate has made such tender and examined the person to whom it has been made, he shall not try the case himself, although the offence which the accused appears to have committed may be triable by such Magistrate.

Power to direct tender of pardon.

338. At any time after commitment, but before judgment is passed, the Court to which the commitment is made may, with the view of obtaining on the trial the evidence of any person supposed to have been directly or indirectly concerned in, or privy to, any such offence, tender, or order the committing Magistrate or the District Magistrate to tender, a pardon on the same condition to such person.

Commitment of person to whom pardon has been tendered.

339. (1) Where a pardon has been tendered under section 337 or section 338, and any person who has accepted such tender has, either by wilfully concealing anything essential or by giving false evidence, not complied with the condition on which the tender was made, he may be tried for the offence in respect of which the pardon was so tendered, or for any other offence of which he appears to have been guilty in connection with the same matter.

(2) The statement made by a person who has accepted a tender of pardon may be given in evidence against him when the pardon has been withdrawn under this section.

(3) No prosecution for the offence of giving false evidence in respect of such statement shall be entertained without the sanction of the High Court.

341. If the accused, though not insane, cannot be made to understand the proceedings, the Court may proceed with the inquiry or trial; and, in the case of a Court other than a High Court, if such inquiry results in a commitment, or if such trial results in a conviction, the proceedings shall be forwarded to the High Court with a report of the circumstances of the case, and the High Court shall pass thereon such order as it thinks fit.

Power to examine the accused.

342. (1) For the purpose of enabling the accused to explain any circumstances appearing in the evidence against him, the Court may, at any stage of any inquiry or trial, without previously warning the accused, put such questions to him as the Court considers necessary, and shall, for the purpose aforesaid, question him generally on the case after the witnesses for the prosecution have been examined, and before he is called on for his defence.

(2) The accused shall not render himself liable to punishment by refusing to answer such questions, or by giving false answers to them; but the Court and the jury (if any) may draw such inference from such refusal or answers as it thinks just.

(3) The answers given by the accused may be taken into consideration in such inquiry or trial, and put in evidence for or against him in any other inquiry into, or trial for, any other offence which such answers may tend to show he has committed.

(4) No oath shall be administered to the accused.

No influence to be used to induce disclosures.

343. Except as provided in sections 337 and 338, no influence, by means of any promise or threat or otherwise, shall be used to an accused person to induce him to disclose or withhold any matter within his knowledge.

Power to postpone or adjourn proceedings.

344. (1) If, from the absence of a witness, or any other reasonable cause, it becomes necessary or advisable to postpone the commencement of, or adjourn, any inquiry or trial, the Court may, if it thinks fit, by order in writing, stating the reasons therefor, from time to time, postpone or adjourn the same on such terms as it thinks fit, for such time as it considers reasonable, and may by a warrant remand the accused if in custody:

Procedure when Magistrate cannot pass sentence sufficiently severe.

349. (1) Whenever a Magistrate of the second or third class, having jurisdiction, is of opinion, after hearing the evidence for the prosecution and the accused, that the accused is guilty, and that he ought to receive a punishment different in kind from, or more severe than, that which such Magistrate is empowered to inflict, or that he ought to be required to execute a bond under section 106 or that he should be dealt with under section 561, he may record the opinion and submit his proceedings, and forward the accused, to the District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate to whom he is subordinate.

(2) The Magistrate to whom the proceedings are submitted may, if he thinks fit, examine the parties and recall and examine any witness who has already given evidence in the case, and may call for and take any further evidence, and shall pass such judgment, sentence or order in the case as he thinks fit, and as is according to law:

Provided that he shall not inflict a punishment more severe than he is empowered to inflict under sections 32 and 33.

(2) Nothing in this section applies to cases in which proceedings have been stayed under section 346.

Detention of offenders attending Court.

351. (1) Any person attending a Criminal Court, although not under arrest or upon a summons, may be detained by such Court for the purpose of examination for any offence of which such Court can take cognizance and which, from the evidence, may appear to have been committed, and may be proceeded against as though he had been arrested or summoned.

(2) When the detention takes place in the course of an inquiry under Chapter XVIII, or after a trial has been begun, the proceedings in respect of such person shall be commenced afresh and the witnesses re-heard.

Courts to be open.

352. The place in which any Criminal Court is held for the purpose of inquiring into or trying any offence shall be deemed an open Court, to which the public generally may have access, so far as the same can conveniently contain them:

(3) In cases in which the evidence is not taken down in writing by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge, he shall, as the examination of each witness proceeds, make a memorandum of the substance of what such witness deposes; and such memorandum shall be written and signed by the Magistrate or Sessions Judge with his own hand, and shall form part of the record.

(4) If the Magistrate or Sessions Judge is prevented from making a memorandum as above required, he shall record the reason of his inability to make it.

360. (1) As the evidence of each witness taken under section 356 or section 357 is completed, it shall be read over to him in the presence of the accused, if in attendance, or of his pleader, if he appears by pleader, and shall, if necessary, be corrected.

Procedure in regard to such evidence when completed.

(2) If the witness deny the correctness of any part of the evidence when the same is read over to him, the Magistrate or Sessions Judge may, instead of correcting the evidence, make a memorandum thereon of the objection made to it by the witness, and shall add such remarks as he thinks necessary.

(3) If the evidence be taken down in a language different from that in which it has been given, and the witness does not understand the language in which it is taken down, the evidence so taken down shall be interpreted to him in the language in which it was given, or in a language which he understands.

361. (1) Whenever any evidence is given in a language not understood by the accused, and he is present in person, it shall be interpreted to him in open Court in a language understood by him.

All evidence so taken down shall be signed by the Magistrate and shall form part of the record.

386. Whenever an offender is sentenced to pay a fine, the Court passing the sentence may, in its discretion, issue a warrant for the levy of the amount by distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to the offender, although the sentence directs that, in default of payment of the fine, the offender shall be imprisoned.

Effect of such warrant.

388. (1) When an offender has been sentenced to fine only, and to imprisonment in default of payment of the fine, and the Court issues a warrant under section 386, it may suspend the execution of the sentence of imprisonment and may release the offender on his executing a bond with or without sureties, as the Court thinks fit, conditioned for his appearance before such Court on the day appointed for the return to such warrant, such day not being more than fifteen days from the time of executing the bond; and in the event of the fine not having been realized the Court may direct the sentence of imprisonment to be carried into execution at once.

391. (1) When the accused is sentenced to whipping in addition to imprisonment in a case which is subject to appeal, the whipping shall not be inflicted until fifteen days from the date of the sentence, or, if an appeal be made within that time, until the sentence is confirmed by the Appellate Court; but the whipping shall be inflicted as soon as practicable after the expiry of the fifteen days, or, in case of an appeal, as soon as practicable after the receipt of the order of the Appellate Court confirming the sentence.

(2) The whipping shall be inflicted in the presence of the officer in charge of the jail, unless the Judge or Magistrate orders it to be inflicted in his own presence.

Whipping not to be inflicted if offender not in fit state of health.

394. (1) The punishment of whipping shall not be inflicted unless a medical officer, if present, certifies, or if there is not a medical officer present, unless it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is in a fit state of health to undergo such punishment.

Stay of execution.

(2) If, during the execution of a sentence of whipping, a medical officer certifies, or it appears to the Magistrate or officer present, that the offender is not in a fit state of health to undergo the remainder of the sentence, the whipping shall be finally stopped.

Procedure if punishment cannot be inflicted under section 394.

(1) In any case in which, under section 394, a sentence of whipping is, wholly or partially, prevented from being executed, the offender shall be kept in custody till the Court which passed the sentence can revise it; and the said Court may, at its discretion, either remit such sentence, or sentence the offender in lieu of whipping, or in lieu of so much of the sentence of whipping as was not executed, to imprisonment for any term not exceeding twelve months, which may be in addition to any other punishment to which he may have been sentenced for the same offence.

(2) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to inflict imprisonment for a term exceeding that to which the accused is liable by law, or that which the said Court is competent to inflict.

Execution of sentences on escaped convicts.

396. (1) When sentence is passed under this Code on an escaped convict, such sentence, if of death, fine or whipping, shall, subject to the provisions hereinbefore contained, take effect immediately, and if of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, shall take effect according to the following rules, that is to say:—

(2) If the new sentence is severer in its kind than the sentence which such convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect immediately.

(3) When the new sentence is not severer in its kind than the sentence the convict was undergoing when he escaped, the new sentence shall take effect after he has suffered imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, as the case may be, for a further period equal to that which, at the time of his escape, remained unexpired of his former sentence.

EXPLANATION.—For the purposes of this section—

(a) a sentence of transportation or penal servitude shall be deemed severer than a sentence of imprisonment;

(b) a sentence of imprisonment with solitary confinement shall be deemed severer than a sentence of the same description of imprisonment without solitary confinement; and

(c) a sentence of rigorous imprisonment shall be deemed severer than a sentence of simple imprisonment with or without solitary confinement.

Sentence on offender already sentenced for another offence.

397. When a person already undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation is sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, such imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation to which he has been previously sentenced:

Provided that if he is undergoing a sentence of imprisonment, and the sentence on such subsequent conviction be one of transportation, the Court may, in its discretion, direct that the latter sentence shall commence immediately, or at the expiration of the imprisonment to which he has been previously sentenced.

Saving as to sections 396 and 397.

398. (1) Nothing in section 396 or section 397 shall be held to excuse any person from any part of the punishment to which he is liable upon his former or subsequent conviction.

(2) When an award of imprisonment in default of payment of a fine is annexed to a substantive sentence of imprisonment, or to a sentence of transportation or penal servitude for an offence punishable with imprisonment, and the person undergoing the sentence is after its execution to undergo a further substantive sentence, or further substantive sentences, of imprisonment, transportation or penal servitude, effect shall not be given to the award of imprisonment in default of payment of the fine until the person has undergone the further sentence or sentences.

CHAPTER XXIX.

OF SUSPENSIONS, REMISSIONS AND COMMUTATIONS OF SENTENCES.

Power to suspend or remit sentences.

401. (1) When any person has been sentenced to punishment for an offence, the Governor General in Council, or the Local Government, may at any time, without conditions or upon any conditions which the person sentenced accepts, suspend the execution of his sentence or remit the whole or any part of the punishment to which he has been sentenced.

(2) Whenever an application is made to the Governor General in Council or the Local Government for the suspension or remission of a sentence, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government, as the case may be, may require the presiding Judge of the Court before or by which the conviction was had or confirmed to state his opinion as to whether the application should be granted or refused, together with his reasons for such opinion.

(3) If any condition on which a sentence has been suspended or remitted is, in the opinion of the Governor General in Council or of the Local Government, as the case may be, not fulfilled, the Governor General in Council or the Local Government may cancel the suspension or remission, and thereupon the person in whose favour the sentence has been suspended or remitted may, if at large, be arrested by any police-officer without warrant and remanded to undergo the unexpired portion of the sentence.

(4) The condition on which a sentence is suspended or remitted under this section may be one to be fulfilled by the person in whose favour the sentence is suspended or remitted, or one independent of his will.

(5) Nothing herein contained shall be deemed to interfere with the right of Her Majesty to grant pardons, reprieves, respites or remissions of punishment.

(6) The Governor General in Council and the Local Government may by general rules or special orders give directions as to the suspension of sentences, and the conditions on which petitions should be presented and dealt with.

Power to commute punishment.

402. The Governor General in Council, or the Local Government, may, without the consent of the person sentenced, commute any one of the following sentences for any other mentioned after it:—

Person once convicted or acquitted not to be tried for same offence.

403. (1) A person who has once been tried by a Court of competent jurisdiction for an offence and convicted or acquitted of such offence shall, while such conviction or acquittal remains in force, not be liable to be tried again for the same offence, nor on the same facts for any other offence for which a different charge from the one made against him might have been made under section 236, or for which he might have been convicted under section 237.

(2) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence may be afterwards tried for any distinct offence for which a separate charge might have been made against him on the former trial under section 235, sub-section 1.

(3) A person convicted of any offence constituted by any act causing consequences which, together with such act, constituted a different offence from that of which he was convicted, may be afterwards tried for such last-mentioned offence, if the consequences had not happened, or were not known to the Court to have happened, at the time when he was convicted.

(4) A person acquitted or convicted of any offence constituted by any acts may, notwithstanding such acquittal or conviction, be subsequently charged with, and tried for, any other offence constituted by the same acts which he may have committed, if the Court by which he was first tried was not competent to try the offence with which he is subsequently charged.

(5) Nothing in this section shall affect the provisions of section 26 of the General Clauses Act, 1897, or of section 188 of this Code.

EXPLANATION.—The dismissal of a complaint, the stopping of proceedings under section 249, the discharge of the accused or any entry made upon a charge under section 273, is not an acquittal for the purposes of this section. X of 1897.

Illustrations.

(a) A is tried upon a charge of theft as a servant and acquitted. He cannot afterwards, while the acquittal remains in force, be charged with theft as a servant, or, upon the same facts with theft simply, or with criminal breach of trust.

(b) A is tried upon a charge of murder and acquitted. There is no charge of robbery; but it appears from the facts that A committed robbery at the time when the murder was committed; he may afterwards be charged with, and tried for, robbery.

(c) A is tried for causing grievous hurt and convicted. The person injured afterwards dies. A may be tried again for culpable homicide.

(d) A is charged before the Court of Session and convicted of the culpable homicide of B. A may not afterwards be tried on the same facts for the murder of B.

(e) A is charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, voluntarily causing hurt to B. A may not afterwards be tried for voluntarily causing grievous hurt to B on the same facts, unless the case comes within paragraph 3 of the section.

(f) A is charged by a Magistrate of the second class with, and convicted by him of, theft of property from the person of B. A may be subsequently charged with, and tried for, robbery on the same facts.

(g) A, B and C are charged by a Magistrate of the first class with, and convicted by him of, robbing D. A, B and C may afterwards be charged with, and tried for, dacoity on the same facts.

(h) A is charged on the same facts with two different offences and is convicted of the one and acquitted of the other. The Appellate Court may convict him of the offence of which he has been acquitted and acquit him of the offence of which he has been convicted.

407. (1) Any person convicted on a trial held by any Magistrate of the second or third class, or any person sentenced under section 349 by a Sub-divisional Magistrate of the second class, may appeal to the District Magistrate.

Transfer of appeals to first class Magistrate.

(2) The District Magistrate may direct that any appeal under this section, or any class of such appeals, shall be heard by any Magistrate of the first class subordinate to him and empowered by the Local Government to hear such appeals, and thereupon such appeal or class of appeals shall be presented to such subordinate Magistrate, or, if already presented to the District Magistrate, shall be transferred to such subordinate Magistrate. The District Magistrate may withdraw from such Magistrate any appeal or class of appeals so presented or transferred.

Appeal from sentence of Assistant Sessions Judge or Magistrate of the first class.

Provided as follows:—

(a) when in any case an Assistant Sessions Judge or a District Magistrate passes any sentence which is subject to the confirmation of the Court of Session, every appeal in such case shall lie to the High Court, but shall not be presented until the case has been disposed of by the Court of Session;

Proviso to sections 413 and 414

415. An appeal may be brought against any sentence referred to in section 413 or section 414 by which any two or more of the punishments therein mentioned are combined, but no sentence which would not otherwise be liable to appeal shall be appealable merely on the ground that the person convicted is ordered to find security to keep the peace.

EXPLANATION.—A sentence of imprisonment in default of payment of fine is not a sentence by which two or more punishments are combined within the meaning of this section.

Saving of sentences on European British subjects.

416 Nothing in sections 413 and 414 applies to appeals from sentences passed under Chapter XXXIII on European British subjects.

Appeal on behalf of Government in case of acquittal.

Appeal on what matters admissible.

418 An appeal may lie on a matter of fact as well as a matter of law, except where the trial was by jury, in which case the appeal shall lie on a matter of law only.

EXPLANATION.—The alleged severity of a sentence shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be a matter of law.

Petition of appeal

419 Every appeal shall be made in the form of a petition in writing presented by the appellant or his pleader, and every such petition shall (unless the Court to which it is presented otherwise directs) be accompanied by a copy of the judgment or order appealed against, and in cases tried by a jury, a copy of the heads of the charge recorded under section 367.

420. If the appellant is in jail, he may present his petition of appeal and the copies accompanying the same to the officer in charge of the jail, who shall thereupon forward such petition and copies to the proper Appellate Court.

421. (1) On receiving the petition and copy under section 419 or section 420, the Appellate Court shall peruse the same, and, if it considers that there is no sufficient ground for interfering, it may dismiss the appeal summarily :

Provided that no appeal presented under section 419 shall be dismissed unless the appellant or his pleader has had a reasonable opportunity of being heard in support of the same.

(2) Before dismissing an appeal under this section, the Court may call for the record of the case, but shall not be bound to do so.

Notice of appeal.

422 If the Appellate Court does not dismiss the appeal summarily, it shall cause notice to be given to the appellant or his pleader, and to such officer as the Local Government may appoint in this behalf, of the time and place at which such appeal will be heard, and shall, on the application of such officer, furnish him with a copy of the grounds of appeal ; and, in cases of appeals under section 417, the Appellate Court shall cause a like notice to be given to the accused.

Powers of Appellate Court in disposing of appeal.

423 (1) The Appellate Court shall then send for the record of the case, if such record is not already in Court. After perusing such record, and hearing the appellant or his pleader, if he appears, and the Public Prosecutor, if he appears, and, in case of an appeal under section 417, the accused, if he appears, the Court may, if it considers there is no sufficient ground for interfering, dismiss the appeal, or may—

(d) make any consequential or incidental order that may be just or proper.

(2) Nothing herein contained shall authorise the Court to alter or reverse the verdict of a jury, unless it is of opinion that such verdict is erroneous owing to a misdirection by the Judge, or to a misunderstanding on the part of the jury of the law as laid down by him.

Judgments of subordinate Appellate Courts.

424. The rules contained in Chapter XXVI as to the judgment of a Criminal Court of original jurisdiction shall apply, so far as may be practicable, to the judgment of any Appellate Court other than a High Court:

Provided that, unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused shall not be brought up, or required to attend, to hear judgment delivered.

425. (1) Whenever a case is decided on appeal by the High Court under this chapter, it shall certify its judgment or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order appealed against was recorded or passed. If the finding, sentence or order was recorded or passed by a Magistrate other than the District Magistrate, the certificate shall be sent through the District Magistrate.

(2) The Court to which the High Court certifies its judgment or order shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the judgment or order of the High Court; and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

Suspension of sentence pending appeal. Release of appellant on bail.

426. (1) Pending any appeal by a convicted person, the Appellate Court may, for reasons to be recorded by it in writing, order that the execution of the sentence or order appealed against be suspended and, if he is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond.

(2) The power conferred by this section on an Appellate Court may be exercised also by the High Court in the case of any appeal by a convicted person to a Court subordinate thereto.

(3) When the appellant is ultimately sentenced to imprisonment, penal servitude or transportation, the time during which he is so released shall be excluded in computing the term for which he is so sentenced.

Arrest of accused in appeal from acquittal.

427. When an appeal is presented under section 417, the High Court may issue a warrant directing that the accused be arrested and brought before it or any subordinate Court, and the Court before which he is brought may commit him to prison pending the disposal of the appeal, or admit him to bail.

Appellate Court may take further evidence or direct it to be taken.

428. (1) In dealing with any appeal under this chapter, the Appellate Court, if it thinks additional evidence to be necessary, shall record its reasons, and may either take such evidence itself, or direct it to be taken by a Magistrate, or, when the Appellate Court is a High Court, by a Court of Session or a Magistrate.

(2) When the additional evidence is taken by the Court of Session or the Magistrate, it or he shall certify such evidence to the Appellate Court, and such Court shall thereupon proceed to dispose of the appeal.

(3) Unless the Appellate Court otherwise directs, the accused or his pleader shall be present when the additional evidence is taken; but such evidence shall not be taken in the presence of jurors or assessors.

(4) The taking of evidence under this section shall be subject to the provisions of Chapter XXV as if it were an inquiry.

429. When the Judges composing the Court of Appeal are equally divided in opinion, the case, with their opinions thereon, shall be laid before another Judge of the same Court, and such Judge, after such examination and such hearing (if any) as he thinks fit shall deliver his opinion, and the judgment or order shall follow such opinion.

Finality of orders on appeal.

430 Judgments and orders passed by an Appellate Court upon appeal shall be final, except in the cases provided for in section 417 and Chapter XXXII.

Abatement of appeals

431. Every appeal under section 417 shall finally abate on the death of the accused, and every other appeal under this chapter shall finally abate on the death of the appellant.

CHAPTER XXXII.

OF REFERENCE AND REVISION.

Reference by Presidency Magistrate to High Court.

432 A Presidency Magistrate may, if he thinks fit refer for the opinion of the High Court any question of law which arises in the hearing of any case pending before him, or may give judgment in any such case subject to the decision of the High Court on such reference and, pending such decision, may either commit the accused to jail, or release him on bail to appear for judgment when called upon.

(Part VII.—Of Appeal, Reference and Revision.—Chapter XXXII.—Of Reference and Revision.—Sections 433-439.)

Disposal of case according to decision of High Court.

433. (1) When a question has been so referred the High Court shall pass such order thereon as it thinks fit, and shall cause a copy of such order to be sent to the Magistrate by whom the reference was made, who shall dispose of the case conformably to the said order.

Direction as to costs.

(2) The High Court may direct by whom the costs of such reference shall be paid.

Power to reserve questions arising in original jurisdiction of High Court.

434. (1) When any person has, in a trial before a Judge of a High Court consisting of more Judges than one and acting in the exercise of its original criminal jurisdiction, been convicted of an offence, the Judge, if he thinks fit, may reserve and refer for the decision of a Court consisting of two or more Judges of such Court any question of law which has arisen in the course of the trial of such person, and the determination of which would affect the event of the trial.

Procedure when question reserved.

(2) If the Judge reserves any such question, the person convicted shall, pending the decision thereon, be remanded to jail, or, if the Judge thinks fit, be admitted to bail; and the High Court shall have power to review the case, or such part of it as may be necessary, and finally determine such question, and thereupon to alter the sentence passed by the Court of original jurisdiction, and to pass such judgment or order as the High Court thinks fit.

Power to call for records of subordinate Courts.

435. (1) The High Court or any Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, or any Sub-divisional Magistrate empowered by the Local Government in this behalf, may call for and examine the record of any proceeding before any subordinate Criminal Court situate within the local limits of its or his jurisdiction for the purpose of satisfying itself or himself as to the correctness, legality or propriety of any finding, sentence or order recorded or passed, and as to the regularity of any proceedings of such subordinate Court.

(2) If any Sub-divisional Magistrate acting under sub-section (1) considers that any such finding, sentence or order is illegal or improper, or that any such proceedings are irregular, he shall forward the record, with such remarks thereon as he thinks fit, to the District Magistrate.

(3) Orders made under sections 143 and 144 and proceedings under section 176 are not proceedings within the meaning of this section.

(4) If an application under this section has been made either to the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, no further application shall be entertained by the other of them.

Power to order commitment.

436. When, on examining the record of any case under section 435 or otherwise, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate considers that such case is triable exclusively by the Sessions Judge, and that an accused person has been improperly discharged by the subordinate Court, the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may cause him to be arrested, and may thereupon, instead of directing a fresh inquiry, order him to be committed for trial upon the matter of which he has been, in the opinion of the Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, improperly discharged:

(a) that the accused has had an opportunity of showing cause to such Judge or Magistrate why the commitment should not be made;

(b) that, if such Judge or Magistrate thinks that the evidence shows that some other offence has been committed by the accused, such Judge or Magistrate may direct the subordinate Court to inquire into such offence.

Power to order inquiry.

437. On examining any record under section 435 or otherwise, the High Court or the Sessions Judge may direct the District Magistrate by himself or by any of the Magistrates subordinate to him to make, and the District Magistrate may himself make, or direct any subordinate Magistrate to make, further inquiry into any complaint which has been dismissed under section 203, or into the case of any accused person who has been discharged or released under section 169, or the District Magistrate may himself deliver judgment and pass sentence or direct the subordinate Magistrate to deliver judgment and pass sentence on a person convicted under section 561.

Report to High Court.

438. The Sessions Judge or District Magistrate may, if it or he thinks fit, on examining under section 435 or otherwise the record of any proceeding, report for the orders of the High Court the results of such examination, and, when such report contains a recommendation that a sentence be reversed, may order that the execution of such sentence be suspended, and, if the accused is in confinement, that he be released on bail or on his own bond.

High Court's powers of revision.

439. (1) In the case of any proceeding the record of which has been called for by itself or, which has been reported for orders, or which otherwise comes to its knowledge, the High Court may, in its discretion, exercise any of the powers conferred on a Court of Appeal by sections 195, 423, 426, 427 and 428, or on a Court by section 338, and may enhance the sentence; and, when the Judges composing the Court of Revision are equally divided in opinion, the case shall be disposed of in manner provided by section 429.

(2) No order under this section shall be made to the prejudice of the accused unless he has had an opportunity of being heard either personally or by pleader in his own defence.

(3) Where the sentence dealt with under this section has been passed by a Magistrate acting otherwise than under section 34, the Court shall not inflict a greater punishment for the offence which, in the opinion of such Court, the accused has commited, than might have been inflicted for such offence by a Presidency Magistrate or a Magistrate of the first class.

(4) Nothing in this section applies to an entry made under section 273, or shall be deemed to authorise a High Court to convert a finding of acquittal into one of conviction.

(5) Where under this Code an appeal lies and no appeal is brought, no proceedings by way of revision shall be entertained, and, except as provided by this Code, no proceedings by way of appeal or revision shall be entertained.

Optional with Court to hear parties.

440. No party has any right to be heard either personally or by pleader before any Court when exercising its powers of revision:

Provided that the Court may, if it thinks fit, when exercising such powers, hear any party either personally or by pleader, and that nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect section 439, sub-section 2.

Statement by Presidency Magistrate of grounds of his decision to be considered by High Court.

441. When the record of any proceeding of any Presidency Magistrate is called for by the High Court under section 435, the Magistrate may submit with the record a statement setting forth the grounds of his decision or order and any facts which he thinks material to the issue; and the Court shall consider such statement before over-ruling or setting aside the said decision or order.

High Court's order to be certified to lower Court or Magistrate.

442. When a case is revised under this chapter by the High Court, it shall, in manner hereinbefore provided, certify its decision or order to the Court by which the finding, sentence or order revised was recorded or passed, and the Court or Magistrate to which the decision or order is so certified shall thereupon make such orders as are conformable to the decision so certified and, if necessary, the record shall be amended in accordance therewith.

PART VIII.

SPECIAL PROCEEDINGS.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

CRIMINAL PROCEEDINGS AGAINST EUROPEANS AND AMERICANS.

Magistrates who may inquire into and try charges against European British subjects.

443. No Magistrate, unless he is a Justice of the Peace, and (except in the case of a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate) unless he is a Magistrate of the first class and an European British subject, shall inquire into or try any charge against an European British subject.

Sessions Judge to be an European British subject.

Assistant Sessions Judge to have held office for three years and to be specially empowered.

444. No Judge presiding in a Court of Session, except the Sessions Judge, shall exercise jurisdiction over an European British subject unless he himself is an European British subject; and if he is an Assistant Sessions Judge, unless he has held the office of Assistant Sessions Judge for at least three years, and has been specially empowered in this behalf by the Local Government.

Cognizance of offence committed by European British subject.

445. Nothing in section 443 or section 444 shall prevent any Magistrate from taking cognizance of an offence committed by any European British subject in any case in which he could take cognizance of a like offence if committed by another person:

Provided that, if he issues any process for the purpose of compelling the appearance of an European British subject accused of an offence, such process shall be made returnable before a Magistrate having jurisdiction to inquire into or try the case.

Sentences which may be passed by provincial Magistrates.

446. Notwithstanding anything contained in section 32 or section 34, no Magistrate other than a District Magistrate or Presidency Magistrate shall pass any sentence on an European British subject other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to three months, or fine which may extend to one thousand rupees or both, and a District Magistrate shall not pass any such sentence other than imprisonment for a term which may extend to six months, or fine which may extend to two thousand rupees, or both.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings.—Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 447-451.)

When commitment to be to Court of Session and when to High Court.

447. (1) When an European British subject is accused of an offence before a Magistrate, and such offence cannot, in the opinion of such Magistrate, be adequately punished by him, and is not punishable with death or with transportation for life, such Magistrate shall, if he thinks that the accused ought to be committed, commit him to the Court of Session, or, in the case of a Presidency Magistrate, to the High Court.

(2) When the offence which appears to have been committed is punishable with death or with transportation for life, the commitment shall be to the High Court.

Trial of offences of which one is, and the others are not, punishable with death or transportation for life.

448. Where any person committed to the High Court under section 447 is charged with several offences of which one is punishable with death or transportation for life and the others with a less punishment, and the High Court considers that he should not be tried for the offence punishable with death or transportation, the High Court may nevertheless try him for the other offences.

Sentences which may be passed by Court of Session.

449. (1) Notwithstanding anything contained in section 31, no Court of Session shall pass on any European British subject any sentence other than a sentence of imprisonment for a term which may extend to one year, or fine, or both.

Procedure when Sessions Judge finds his powers inadequate.

(2) If, at any time after the commitment and before signing judgment the presiding Judge thinks that the offence which appears to be proved cannot be adequately punished by such a sentence, he shall record his opinon to that effect and transfer the case to the High Court. Such Judge may either himself bind over, or direct the committing Magistrate to bind over, the complainant and witnesses to appear before the High Court.

Jury or assessors before High Court or Court of Session.

450. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a High Court or Court of Session, if, before the first juror is called and accepted, or the first assessor is appointed as the case may be, any such subject requires to be tried by a mixed jury, the trial shall be by a jury of which not less than half the number shall be Europeans or Americans or both Europeans and Americans.

(2) When any such trial before a Court of Session would in the ordinary course be with the aid of assessors, the European British subject accused, or, where there are several European British subjects accused, all of them jointly, may, instead of claiming to be tried by a mixed jury under sub-section (1), require that not less than half the number of the assessors shall be Europeans or Americans or both Europeans and Americans.

Right of European British subject to claim jury before District Magistrate.

451. (1) In trials of European British subjects before a District Magistrate, any such subject may, in a summons-case before he is heard in his defence under section 244, or in a warrant-case before he enters on his defence under section 256, claim that the trial shall be by a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450. [Act X of 1882, s. 451.

(2) If a claim is made under sub-section (1) in a summons-case at the time when the Magistrate proceeds under section 244 to hear the accused, or in a warrant-case at the time when the Magistrate calls upon the accused under section 256 to enter upon the defence, the Magistrate shall forthwith issue the necessary orders for the trial by a jury as aforesaid.

(3) If such a claim is made at an earlier stage of the proceedings, the Magistrate shall issue such orders whenever it appears to him from the evidence recorded that there will be a sufficient case to go before a jury.

(4) In every such case the Magistrate shall notwithstanding anything contained in section 242, before issuing any orders as aforesaid, frame a formal charge.

(5) The provisions of sections 211, 216, 217 219 and 220 shall, so far as may be, apply for the purpose of securing the attendance of the complainant, the accused and the witnesses at every trial to be held under this section.

(6) The provisions of this Code relating to the procedure in a trial by jury before a Court of Session shall, as nearly as may be, apply to every trial under this section as if the District Magistrate were a Sessions Judge and the accused had been committed to his Court for trial.

(7) All Courts may construe any of the provisions referred to in sub-section (5) or sub-section (6), in so far as they are made applicable by those sub-sections, with such verbal alterations not affecting the substance as may be necessary or proper to adapt the same to the matter before them.

(8) Nothing in this section shall affect the power of the Magistrate to commit an accused person for trial under section 347 or section 147.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings.—Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 452-457.)

Act X of 1882, s. 451 B.

(9) If an accused person claims to be tried by jury under this section and in the opinion of the District Magistrate there is reason to believe that a jury composed in manner prescribed by section 450 cannot be constituted for the trial before himself, or cannot be so constituted without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable, he may, instead of issuing orders for the trial before himself under this section transfer the case for trial to such other District Magistrate or to such Sessions Judge as the High Court may, from time to time, by rules made by it in this behalf and approved by the Local Government, or by special order, direct.

Transfer to another Court in certain cases.

(10) When a case is transferred under this section to a Sessions Judge or District Magistrate, he shall with all convenient speed try it with the same powers (including the power of commitment) and according to the same procedure as if he were a District Magistrate acting under this section.

452. In any case in which an European British subject is accused jointly with a person not being an European British subject, and such European British subject is committed for trial before a High Court or Court of Session, such subject and person may be tried together, and the procedure on the trial shall be the same as it would have been had the European British subject been tried separately:

Trial of European British subject and Native jointly accused.

Provided that, if the European British subject requires under section 450 to be tried by a mixed jury, or by a mixed set of assessors, and the person not being an European British subject requires that he shall be tried separately, the latter person shall be tried separately in accordance with the provisions of Chapter XXIII.

When Native may claim separate trial.

453. (1) When any person claims to be dealt with as an European British subject, he shall state the grounds of such claim to the Magistrate before whom he is brought for the purposes of the inquiry or trial; and such Magistrate shall inquire into the truth of such statement, and allow the person making it a reasonable time within which to prove that it is true, and shall then decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If any such person is convicted by such Magistrate and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Magistrate's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

Procedure on claim of person to be dealt with as European British subject.

(2) When any such person is committed by the Magistrate for trial before the Court of Session, and such person before such Court claims to be dealt with as an European British subject such Court shall, after such further enquiry, if any, as it thinks fit, decide whether he is or is not an European British subject, and shall deal with him accordingly. If he is convicted by such Court and appeals from such conviction, the burden of proving that the Court's said decision was wrong shall lie upon him.

(3) When the Court before which any person tried decides that he is not an European British subject, such decision shall form a ground of appeal from the sentence or order passed in such trial.

454. (1) If an European British subject does not claim to be dealt with as such by the Magistrate before whom he is tried or by whom he is committed, or if, when such claim has been made before, and disallowed by, the committing Magistrate, it is not again made before the Court which such subject is committed, he shall be held to have relinquished his right to be dealt with as such European British subject and shall not assert it in any subsequent stage of the same case.

Failure to plead status a waiver.

(2) Unless the Magistrate has reason to believe that any person brought before him is not an European British subject, the Magistrate shall ask such person whether he is such a subject or not.

455. Where a person who is not an European British subject is dealt with as such under this chapter, and does not object, the inquiry, commitment, trial or sentence (as the case may be) shall not, by reason of such dealing, be invalid.

Trial under this chapter of person not an European British subject.

456. When any European British subject is unlawfully detained in custody by any person, such European British subject or any person on his behalf may apply to the High Court which would have jurisdiction over such European British subject in respect of any offence committed by him at the place where he is detained or to which he would be entitled to appeal from any conviction for any such offence, for an order directing the person detaining him to bring him before the High Court to abide such further order as it may pass.

Right of European British subject unlawfully detained to apply for order to be brought before High Court.

457. The High Court, if it thinks fit, may, before issuing such order, inquire, on affidavit or otherwise, into the grounds on which it is applied for, and grant or refuse such application; or

Procedure on such application

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings.—Chapter XXXIII.—Criminal Proceedings against Europeans and Americans.—Sections 458-463.—Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Section 464.)

it may issue the order in the first instance, and, when the person applying for it is brought before it, it may make such further order in the case as it thinks fit, after such inquiry (if any) as it thinks necessary.

Territories throughout which High Court may issue such orders.

458. The High Court may issue such orders throughout the territories within the local limits of its appellate criminal jurisdiction, and such other territories as the Governor General in Council may direct.

Application of Acts conferring jurisdiction on Magistrates or Courts of Session.

459. (1) Unless there is something repugnant in the context, all enactments heretofore or hereafter made by the Governor General in Council, which confer on Magistrates or on the Court of Session jurisdiction over offences, shall be deemed to apply to European British subjects, although such persons be not expressly referred to therein.

(2) Nothing in his section shall be deemed to authorise any Court to exceed the limits prescribed by this chapter as to the amount of punishment which it may inflict on an European British subject, or to confer jurisdiction on any Magistrate or any Judge presiding in a Court of Session, not being a Justice of the Peace.

Jury for trial of Europeans or Americans.

460. In every case triable by jury or with the aid of assessors, in which an European (not being an European British subject) or an American is the accused person, or one of the accused persons, not less than half the number of jurors or assessors shall, if practicable and if such European or American so claims, be Europeans or Americans.

Jury when European or American charged jointly with one of another race.

461. Whenever an European or American is charged before the Court of Session jointly with a person not an European or American and in compliance with a claim made under section 460 is tried by a jury, or with the aid of a set of assessors, of which at least one-half consists of Europeans and Americans, the latter person shall, if he so claims, be tried separately.

Summoning and empanelling jurors under section 450, 451, or 460.

462 (1) When a trial is to be held before the Court of Session in which the accused person, or one of the accused persons, is entitled to be tried by a jury constituted under the provisions of section 450 or section 460, or before the Court of a District Magistrate or Sessions Judge proceeding under section 451, the Court shall, three days at least before the day fixed for holding such trial, cause to be summoned, in the manner hereinbefore prescribed, as many European and American jurors as are required for the trial.

(2) The Court shall also, at the same time, in like manner, cause to be summoned the same number of other persons named in the revised list, unless such number of such other persons has been already summoned for trials by jury at that session.

(3) From the whole number of persons returned the jurors who are to constitute the jury shall be chosen by lot in the manner prescribed in section 276, until a jury containing the proper number of Europeans or Americans, or a number approaching thereto as nearly as practicable, has been obtained:

Provided that, in any case in which the proper number of Europeans and Americans cannot otherwise be obtained, the Court may, in its discretion, for the purpose of constituting the jury, summon any person excluded from the list on the ground of his being exempted under section 320.

Conduct of criminal proceedings against European British subjects, etc.

463. Criminal proceedings against European British subjects, Europeans not being European British subjects, and Americans, before the Court of Session and High Court, shall, except as otherwise expressly provided, be conducted according to the provisions of this Code.

CHAPTER XXXIV.

LUNATICS.

Procedure in case of accused being lunatic.

464. (1) When a Magistrate holding an inquiry or a trial has reason to believe that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate shall inquire into the fact of such unsoundness, and shall cause such person to be examined by the Civil Surgeon of the district or such other medical officer as the Local Government directs, and thereupon shall examine such Surgeon or other officer as a witness, and shall reduce the examination to writing.

(2) If such Magistrate is of opinion that the accused is of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, he shall postpone further proceedings in the case.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings.—Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Sections 465-471.)

Procedure in case of person committed before Court of Session or High Court being lunatic.

465. (1) If any person committed for trial before a Court of Session or a High Court appears to the Court at his trial to be of unsound mind and consequently incapable of making his defence, the jury, or the Court with the aid of assessors, shall, in the first instance, try the fact of such unsoundness and incapacity, and, if satisfied of the fact, shall pass judgment accordingly, and thereupon the trial shall be postponed.

(2) The trial of the fact of the unsoundness of mind and incapacity of the accused shall be deemed to be part of his trial before the Court.

(3) For purposes of record, the Court may examine such witnesses and take such evidence as it may think fit in manner provided by section 512 of this Code, and any evidence so taken or received shall have the like effect as by that section provided.

Release of lunatic pending investigation or trial.

466. (1) Whenever an accused person is found to be of unsound mind and incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, if the case is one in which bail may be taken, may release him on sufficient security being given that he shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, and for his appearance when required before the Magistrate or Court or such officer as the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf.

Custody of lunatic.

(2) If the case is one in which bail may not be taken or if sufficient security is not given, the Magistrate or Court shall report the case to the Local Government, and the Local Government may order the accused to be confined in a lunatic asylum or other suitable place of safe custody, and the Magistrate or Court shall give effect to such order.

Resumption of inquiry or trial.

467. (1) Whenever an inquiry or a trial is postponed under section 464 or section 465, the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, may at any time resume the inquiry or trial, and require the accused to appear or be brought before such Magistrate or Court.

(2) When the accused has been released under section 466, and the sureties for his appearance produce him to the officer whom the Magistrate or Court appoints in this behalf, the certificate of such officer that the accused is capable of making his defence shall be receivable in evidence.

Procedure on accused appearing before Magistrate or Court.

468. (1) If, when the accused appears or is again brought before the Magistrate or the Court as the case may be, the Magistrate or Court considers him capable of making his defence, the inquiry or trial shall proceed.

(2) If the Magistrate or Court considers the accused person to be still incapable of making his defence, the Magistrate or Court shall again act according to the provisions of section 464 or section 465, as the case may be.

When accused appears to have been insane.

469. When the accused appears to be of sound mind at the time of inquiry or trial, and the Magistrate is satisfied from the evidence given before him that there is reason to believe that the accused committed an act which, if he had been of sound mind, would have been an offence, and that he was at the time when the act was committed, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the Magistrate shall proceed with the case, and, if the accused ought to be committed to the Court of Session or High Court, send him for trial before the Court of Session or High Court, as the case may be.

Judgment of acquittal on ground of lunacy.

470. Whenever any person is acquitted upon the ground that, at the time at which he is alleged to have committed an offence, he was, by reason of unsoundness of mind, incapable of knowing the nature of the act alleged as constituting the offence, or that it was wrong or contrary to law, the finding shall state specifically whether he committed the act or not.

Person acquitted on such ground to be kept in safe custody.

471. (1) Whenever such judgment states that the accused person committed the act alleged, the Magistrate or Court before whom or which the trial has been held shall, if such act would, but for the incapacity found, have constituted an offence, order such person to be kept in safe custody in such place and manner as the Magistrate or Court thinks fit, and shall report the case for the orders of the Local Government.

(2) The Local Government may order such person to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other suitable place of safe custody.

Power of Governor General in Council to order criminal lunatics confined by order of Local Government to be removed from one province to another.

(3) The Governor General in Council may by general or special order direct that any person whom the Local Government has ordered under this chapter to be confined in a lunatic asylum, jail or other place of safe custody shall be removed from the place where he is confined to any lunatic asylum, jail or other place of safe custody in British India.

Power of Local Government to relieve Inspector General of certain functions.

(4) The Local Government may empower the officer in charge of the jail in which a person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or this section to discharge all or any of the functions of the Inspector General of Prisons under section 472, section 473 or section 474.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(Part VIII.—Special Proceedings.—Chapter XXXIV.—Lunatics.—Sections 472-475. —Chapter XXXV.—Proceedings in case of certain Offences affecting the Administration of Justice.—Sections 476-478.)

Lunatic prisoners to be visited by Inspector General.

472. When any person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, the Inspector General of Prisons, if such person is confined in a jail, or the visitors of the lunatic asylum, or any two of them, if he is confined in a lunatic asylum, may visit him in order to ascertain his state of mind; and he shall be visited once at least in every six months by such Inspector General or by two of such visitors as aforesaid; and such Inspector General or visitors shall make a special report to the Local Government as to the state of mind of such person.

Procedure where lunatic prisoner is reported capable of making his defence.

473. If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466, and such Inspector General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their opinion, such person is capable of making his defence, he shall be taken before the Magistrate or Court, as the case may be, at such time as the Magistrate or Court appoints, and the Magistrate or Court shall deal with such person under the provisions of section 468; and the certificate of such Inspector General or visitors as aforesaid shall be receivable as evidence.

Procedure where lunatic confined under section 466 or 471 is declared fit to be discharged.

474. (1) If such person is confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471, and such Inspector General or visitors shall certify that, in his or their judgment, he may be discharged without danger of his doing injury to himself or to any other person, the Local Government may thereupon order him to be discharged, or to be detained in custody, or to be transferred to a public lunatic asylum if he has not been already sent to such an asylum; and, in case it orders him to be transferred to an asylum, may appoint a Commission, consisting of a judicial and two medical officers.

(2) Such Commission shall make formal inquiry into the state of mind of such person, taking such evidence as is necessary, and shall report to the Local Government, which may order his discharge or detention as it thinks fit.

Delivery of lunatic to care of relative.

475. (1) Whenever any relative or friend of any person confined under the provisions of section 466 or section 471 desires that he shall be delivered over to his care and custody, the Local Government, upon the application of such relative or friend, and on his giving security to the satisfaction of such Government that the person delivered shall be properly taken care of and shall be prevented from doing injury to himself or to any other person, may order such person to be delivered to such relative or friend.

(2) Whenever such person is so delivered, it shall be upon condition that he shall be produced for the inspection of such officer and at such times as the Local Government directs.

(3) The provisions of sections 472 and 474 all, mutatis mutandis, apply to persons delivered under the provisions of this section; and the certificate of the inspecting officer appointed under this section shall be receivable as evidence.

CHAPTER XXXV.

PROCEEDINGS IN CASE OF CERTAIN OFFENCES AFFECTING THE ADMINISTRATION OF JUSTICE.

Procedure in cases mentioned in section 195.

476. (1) When any Civil, Criminal or Revenue Court is of opinion that there is ground for inquiring into any offence referred to in section 195, and committed before it or brought under its notice in the course of a judicial proceeding, such Court, after making any preliminary inquiry that may be necessary, may send the case for inquiry or trial to the nearest Magistrate of the first class, and may send the accused in custody, or take sufficient security for his appearance, before such Magistrate; and may bind over any person to appear and give evidence on such inquiry or trial.

(2) Such Magistrate shall thereupon proceed according to law, and as if upon complaint made, and may, if he is authorised under section 192 to transfer cases, transfer the inquiry or trial to some other competent Magistrate.

(3) Proceedings under this section shall not be questioned by way of revision under Chapter XXXII or otherwise.

Power of Court of Session as to such offences committed before itself.

477. (2) For the purposes of an inquiry under this section the Civil or Revenue Court may, subject to the provisions of section 443, exercise all the

484. When any Court has under section 480 adjudged an offender to punishment for refusing or omitting to do anything which he was lawfully required to do, or for any intentional insult or interruption, the Court may, in its discretion, discharge the offender or remit the punishment on his submission to the order or requisition of such Court, or on apology being made to its satisfaction.

Imprisonment or committal of person refusing to answer or produce document.

485. If any witness or person called to produce a document before a Criminal Court refuses to answer such questions as are put to him or to produce any document in his possession or power which the Court requires him to produce, and does not offer any reasonable excuse for such refusal, such Court may, for reasons to be recorded in writing, sentence him to simple imprisonment, or by warrant under the hand of the presiding Magistrate or Judge commit him to the custody of an officer of the Court, for any term not exceeding seven days, unless in the meantime such person consents to be examined and to answer, or to produce the document. (2) Such allowance shall be payable from the date of the order, or if so ordered from the date of the complaint.

Enforcement of order.

(3) If any person so ordered wilfully neglects to comply with the order, any such Magistrate may, for every breach of the order, issue a warrant for levying the amount due in manner hereinbefore provided for levying fines, and may sentence such person, for the whole or any part of each month's allowance remaining unpaid after the execution of the warrant, to imprisonment for a term which may extend to one month or until payment:

Provided that, if such person offers to maintain his wife on condition of her living with him, and she refuses to live with him, such Magistrate may consider any grounds of refusal stated by her, and may make an order under this section notwithstanding such offer, if he is satisfied that there is just ground for so doing.

(4) No wife shall be entitled to receive an allowance from her husband under this section if she is living in adultery, or if, without any sufficient reason, she refuses to live with her husband, or if they are living separately by mutual consent.

(2) If it appears to such officer or Court at any stage of the investigation, inquiry or trial, as the case may be, that there are not reasonable grounds for believing that the accused has committed such offence, but that there are sufficient grounds for further inquiry into his guilt, the accused shall, pending such inquiry, be released on bail, or, at the discretion of such officer or Court, on the execution by him of a bond without sureties for his appearance as hereinafter provided.

(3) Any Court may, at any subsequent stage of any proceeding under this Code, cause any person who has been released under this section to be arrested, and may commit him to custody.

499. (1) Before any person is released on bail or released on his own bond, a bond for such sum of money as the police-officer or Court, as the case may be, thinks sufficient shall be executed by such person, and, when he is released on bail, by one or more sufficient sureties conditioned that such person shall attend at the time and place mentioned in the bond, and shall continue so to attend until otherwise directed by the police-officer or Court, as the case may be.

CHAPTER XL.

OF COMMISSIONS FOR THE EXAMINATION OF WITNESSES.

When attendance of witness may be dispensed with.

503. (1) Whenever, in the course of an inquiry, a trial or any other proceeding under this Code, it appears to a Presidency Magistrate, a District Magistrate, a Court of Session or the High Court that the examination of a witness is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate or Court may dispense with such attendance and may issue a commission to any District Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such witness resides, to take the evidence of such witness.

Issue of commission, and procedure thereunder.

(2) When the witness resides in the territories of any Prince or Chief in India in which there is an officer representing the British Indian Government, the commission may be issued to such officer.

Parties may examine witnesses.

505. (2) Any such party may appear before such Magistrate or officer by pleader, or, if not in custody, in person, and may examine, cross-examine and re-examine (as the case may be) the said witness.

Power of provincial Subordinate Magistrate to apply for issue of commission.

506. Whenever, in the course of an inquiry or a trial or any other proceeding under this Code before any Magistrate other than a Presidency Magistrate or District Magistrate, it appears that a commission ought to be issued for the examination of a witness whose evidence is necessary for the ends of justice, and that the attendance of such witness cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case, would be unreasonable, such Magistrate shall apply to the District Magistrate, stating the reasons for the application; and the District Magistrate may either issue a commission in the manner hereinbefore provided or reject the application.

Record of evidence in absence of accused.

512. Any such deposition may, on the arrest of such person, be given in evidence against him on the inquiry into or trial for the offence with which he is charged, if the deponent is dead or incapable of giving evidence or his attendance cannot be procured without an amount of delay, expense or inconvenience which, under the circumstances of the case would be unreasonable.

CHAPTER XLII.

PROVISIONS AS TO BONDS.

Deposit instead of recognizance.

513. When any person is required by any Court or officer to execute a bond, with or without sureties, such Court or officer may, except in the case of a bond for good behaviour, permit him to deposit a sum of money or Government promissory notes to such amount as the Court or officer may fix, in lieu of executing such bond.

Procedure on forfeiture of bond.

514. (1) Whenever it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court by which a bond under this Code or under any rule made under section 401 has been taken, or of the Court of a Presidency Magistrate or Magistrate of the first class, or, when the bond is for appearance before a Court, to the satisfaction of such Court, that such bond has been forfeited, the Court shall record the grounds of such proof, and may call upon any person bound by such bond to pay the penalty thereof, or to show cause why it should not be paid.

(2) If sufficient cause is not shown and the penalty is not paid, the Court may proceed to recover the same by issuing a warrant for the attachment and sale of the moveable property belonging to such person or his estate if he be dead.

(3) Such warrant may be executed within the local limits of the jurisdiction of the Court which issued it; and it shall authorise the distress and sale of any moveable property belonging to such person without such limits, when endorsed by the District Magistrate or Chief Presidency Magistrate within the local limits of whose jurisdiction such property is found.

(4) If such penalty be not paid and cannot be recovered by such attachment and sale, the person so bound shall be liable, by order of the Court which issued the warrant, to imprisonment in the civil jail for a term which may extend to six months.

CHAPTER XLIII.

OF THE DISPOSAL OF PROPERTY.

Order for disposal of property regarding which offence committed.

517. (1) When an inquiry or a trial in any Criminal Court is concluded, the Court may make such order as it thinks fit for the disposal of any document or other property produced before it regarding which any offence appears to have been committed, or which has been used for the commission of any offence or the title to which is doubtful or in dispute.

(2) When a High Court or a Court of Session makes such order and cannot through its own officers conveniently deliver the property to the person entitled thereto, such Court may direct that the order be carried into effect by the District Magistrate.

(3) When an order is made under this section in respect of property the title to which is doubtful or in dispute, and in a case in which an appeal lies, such order shall not (except when the property is live-stock or is subject to speedy and natural decay) be carried out until the period allowed for presenting such appeal has passed, or, when such appeal is presented within such period, until such appeal has been disposed of.

EXPLANATION.—In this section the term "property" includes, in the case of property regarding which an offence appears to have been committed, not only such property as has been originally in the possession or under the control of any party, but also any property into or for which the same may have been converted or exchanged, and anything acquired by such conversion or exchange, whether immediately or otherwise.

Order may take form of reference to District or Subdivisional Magistrate.

518. In lieu of itself passing an order under section 517, the Court may direct the property to be delivered to the District Magistrate or to a Subdivisional Magistrate, who shall in such cases deal with it as if it had been seized by the police and the seizure had been reported to him in the manner hereinafter mentioned.

Payment to innocent purchaser of money found on accused.

Stay of order under section 517, 518 or 519.

520. Any Court of appeal, confirmation, reference or revision may direct any order under section 517, section 518 or section 519, passed by a Court subordinate thereto, to be stayed pending consideration by the former Court, and may modify, alter or annul such order and make any further orders that may be just.

Destruction of libellous and other matter.

521. (1) On a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 292, section 293, section 501 or section 502, the Court may order the destruction of all the copies of the thing in respect of which conviction was had, and which are in the custody of the Court or remain in the possession or power of the person convicted. XLV of 1860.

(2) The Court may, in like manner, on a conviction under the Indian Penal Code, section 272, section 273, section 274 or section 275, order the food, drink, drug or medical preparation in respect of which the conviction was had to be destroyed. XLV of 1860.

Power to restore possession of immoveable property.

522. (1) Whenever a person is convicted of an offence attended by criminal force, and it appears to the Court that by such force any person has been dispossessed of any immoveable property, the Court may, if it thinks fit, order such person to be restored to the possession of the same.

(2) No such order shall prejudice any right or interest to or in such immoveable property which any person may be able to establish in a civil suit.

Procedure by police upon seizure of property taken under section 51 or stolen.

523. Procedure where no claimant appears within six months.

524. (1) If no person within such period establishes his claim to such property, and if the person in whose possession such property was found is unable to show that it was legally acquired by him, such property shall be at the disposal of the Government, and may be sold under the orders of the Presidency Magistrate, District Magistrate or Sub-divisional Magistrate, or of a Magistrate of the first class empowered by the Local Government in this behalf.

CHAPTER XLIV.

OF THE TRANSFER OF CRIMINAL CASES.

High Court may transfer case or itself try it.

526. (1) Whenever it is made to appear to the High Court—

(a) that a fair and impartial enquiry or trial cannot be had in any Criminal Court subordinate thereto, or

(b) that some question of law of unusual difficulty is likely to arise, or

(c) that a view of the place in or near which any offence has been committed may be required for the satisfactory inquiry into or trial of the same, or

(d) that an order under this section will tend to the general convenience of the parties or witnesses, or

(e) that such an order is expedient for the ends of justice,

it may order—

(i) that any offence be inquired into or tried by any Court not empowered under sections 177 to 184 (both inclusive), but in other respects competent to inquire into or try such offence;

(ii) that any particular criminal case or appeal, or class of such cases or appeals, be transferred from a Criminal Court subordinate to its authority to any other such Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction;

(iii) that any particular criminal case or appeal be transferred to and tried before itself; or

(iv) that an accused person be committed for trial to itself or to a Court of Session.

(2) When the High Court withdraws for trial before itself any case from any Court other than the Court of a Presidency Magistrate, it shall, except as provided in section 267, observe in such trial the same procedure which that Court would have observed if the case had not been so withdrawn.

(3) The High Court may act either on the report of the lower Court, or on the application of a party interested, or on its own initiative.

(4) Every application for the exercise of the power conferred by this section shall be made by motion which shall, except when the applicant is the Advocate General, be supported by affidavit or affirmation.

Notice to Public Prosecutor of application under this section.

(6) Every accused person making any such application shall give to the Public Prosecutor notice in writing of the application, together with a copy of the grounds on which it is made; and no order shall be made on the merits of the application unless at least twenty-four hours have elapsed between the giving of such notice and the hearing of the application.

(7) Nothing in this section shall be deemed to affect any order made under section 197.

[Act X of 1882, s. 526A.]

Adjournment on application under this section.

(8) If, in any criminal case or appeal, before the commencement of the hearing, the Public Prosecutor, the complainant or the accused notifies to the Court before which the case or appeal is pending his intention to make an application under this section in respect of the case, the Court shall (unless it is of opinion that the application is made for the purpose of delay or otherwise prejudicing the course of justice) exercise the powers of postponement or adjournment given by section 344 in such a manner as will afford a reasonable time for the application being made and an order being obtained thereon, before the accused is called on for his defence, or, in the case of an appeal, before the hearing of the appeal.

Power of Governor General in Council to transfer criminal cases and appeals.

527. (1) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the Gazette of India, direct the transfer of any particular criminal case or appeal from one High Court to another High Court, or from any Criminal Court subordinate to one High Court to any other Criminal Court of equal or superior jurisdiction subordinate to another High Court, whenever it appears to him that such transfer will promote the ends of justice, or tend to the general convenience of parties or witnesses.

The Court to which such case or appeal is transferred shall deal with the same as if it had been originally instituted in, or presented to, such Court.

District or Subdivisional Magistrate may withdraw or refer cases.

528. (1) Any District Magistrate or Subdivisional Magistrate may withdraw any case from, or recall any case which he has made over to, any Magistrate subordinate to him, and may inquire into or try such case himself, or refer it for inquiry or trial to any other such Magistrate competent to inquire into or try the same.

(q) tries an offender summarily; or his proceedings shall be void.

Proceedings in wrong place.

531. No finding, sentence or order of any Criminal Court shall be set aside merely on the ground that the inquiry, trial or other proceeding in the course of which it was arrived at or passed took place in a wrong sessions division, district, subdivision or other local area, unless it appears that such error has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

The Code of Criminal Procedure, 1898.

(1) If any Magistrate or other authority purporting to exercise powers duly conferred, which were not so conferred, commits an accused person for trial before a Court of Session or High Court, the Court to which the commitment is made may, after perusal of the proceedings, accept the commitment if it considers that the accused has not been injured thereby, unless, during the inquiry and before the order of commitment, objection was made on behalf either of the accused or of the prosecution to the jurisdiction of such Magistrate or other authority.

(2) If such Court considers that the accused was injured, or if such objection was so made, it shall quash the commitment and direct a fresh inquiry by a competent Magistrate.

Non-compliance with provisions of section 164 or 364.

533. (1) If any Court before which a confession or other statement of an accused person recorded under section 164 or section 364 is tendered in evidence finds that any of the provisions of either of such sections have not been complied with by the Magistrate recording the statement, it shall take evidence that such person duly made the statement recorded; and, notwithstanding anything contained in the Indian Evidence Act, 1872, section 91, such statement shall be admitted if the error has not injured the accused as to his defence on the merits.

(2) The provisions of this section apply to Courts of Appeal and Revision.

534. An omission to ask any person whether he is an European British subject, in a case to which the second clause of section 454 applies, shall not affect the validity of any proceeding.

(2) If the Court of appeal or revision thinks that a failure of justice has been occasioned by an omission to frame a charge, it shall order that a charge shall be framed, and that the trial be re-commenced from the point immediately after the framing of the charge.

(b) of the want of any sanction required by section 195, or

(c) of the omission to revise any list of jurors or assessors in accordance with section 324, or (d) of any misdirection in any charge to a jury; unless such error, omission, irregularity, want or misdirection has in fact occasioned a failure of justice.

Illustration.

A Magistrate being required by law to sign a document signs it by initials only. This is purely an irregularity, and does not affect the validity of the proceeding.

Distress not illegal nor distrainer a trespasser for defect or want of form in proceedings.

538. No distress made under this Code shall be deemed unlawful, nor shall any person making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, writ of distress or other proceedings relating thereto.

(2) An offender, when apprehended on any such warrant, shall, if not brought forthwith before the Court having power to sentence him, be brought before a Magistrate, and that Court or Magistrate may either remand him by warrant until the time at which he was required by his recognizance to appear for judgment, or until the sitting of a Court having power to deal with his original offence, or may admit him to bail with a sufficient surety conditioned on his appearing for judgment.

(3) The offender, when so remanded, may be committed to a prison, either for the place in or for which the Court remanding him acts, or for the place where he is bound to appear for judgment, and the warrant of remand shall order that he be brought before the Court before which he was bound to appear for judgment, or to answer as to his conduct since his release.

(2) If such conviction be set aside on appeal or otherwise, such order for police supervision shall become void.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

It has been usual to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure at the end of successive decades. Thus the first Code of Criminal Procedure Act, XXV of 1861, was succeeded by Act X of 1872 and the latter was followed by Act X of 1882.

Since 1882 there have been passed sixteen Acts all relating to Criminal Procedure and many of them expressly amending the Code of 1882.

Act III of 1884.
" X of 1886.
" V of 1887.
" XIV of 1887.
" I of 1889.
" V of 1889
" XIII of 1889.
" III of 1891.
" IV of 1891.
" X of 1891.
" XII of 1891.
III of 1894.
" X of 1894.
IV of 1895.
V of 1896.
XIII of 1896.

In addition to this, several matters have been brought to the notice of the Government of India in regard to necessary amendments of the law, which have been deferred until the periodical amendment of the Code shall have been undertaken. The Law Reports also have shown many defects and difficulties in administering the law and occasionally contradictory interpretations by the High Courts in giving it effect.

On these considerations the Government, of India have determined again to consolidate and amend the law relating to Criminal Procedure. Such alterations as have been made in the present law are printed in italics, and the material amendments it is proposed to introduce are referred to in the notes on clauses given below. Where changes have been made in the numbering of existing sections, their former numbers have been given on the margin.

Notes on Clauses.

Clause 1.—It is proposed to enable a Local Government, with the sanction of the Governor General in Council, to extend such portions of the Code as may be necessary to the police of Presidency-towns in addition to those already expressly extended, as some inconvenience has been felt from the restriction imposed by the present law.

Clause 3.—As Joint Sessions Judges and Additional Sessions Judges indicate the same class of judicial officers, it is proposed to abandon the former term.

Clause 4.—The definitions have been arranged alphabetically.

(1) The definition of "accused" has been extended so as to include all persons against whom proceedings may be taken or are sought to be taken under the Code, as for instance, proceedings taken for security for good behaviour or to keep the peace, which closely resemble trials for specific offences to which at present the expression is limited.

The alteration of the definitions of "inquiry (m)" and "trial (j)" restores the definitions of those terms under the former Code of 1872 so as to distinguish between an inquiry and a trial.

The alterations in the other definitions call for no special mention, but certain definitions given in the Code of 1882 are omitted, as they are now included in the General Clauses Act, 1897.

Clause 5.—The amendment makes section 5 more complete so as to make the Code apply to proceedings before the police (investigations), as well as to inquiries and trials which are proceedings before judicial officers.

Clause 10.—This amendment, which has been suggested by the Punjab Government, will enable a Local Government to appoint an additional District Magistrate for a term not exceeding three months to meet an emergency which may require the entire attention of the District Magistrate.

Clause 17 (4).—This is intended to provide for unforeseen accidents which may incapacitate a Sessions Judge.

Clause 21 (c).—It is here proposed to give the Chief Presidency Magistrate the same general powers of control over other Presidency Magistrates as are now vested in a District Magistrate over other Magistrates in the District.

Clause 23.—It is proposed to give the Government of Bengal sole power to appoint Justices of the Peace for Calcutta as is now exercised by the Governments of Madras and Bombay in respect of those Presidency-towns. The power conferred under previous Codes concurrently on the Governor General in Council has not been exercised for many years and need not be retained.

Clause 28.—This amendment is merely a matter of drafting to remedy an inaccuracy of expression brought to notice.

Clause 29.—This amendment will make the section correspond more accurately with the last portion of Schedule II to which it relates.

Clauses 31 and 34.—It is proposed to give an Additional Sessions Judge the same powers as a Sessions Judge in regard to passing orders on a reference from an Assistant Sessions Judge.

Clause 35.—The amendments are calculated to make the law more clear in respect of the difference between separable offences dealt with under section 71, Indian Penal Code, and distinct offences for which separate and additional sentences may be passed beyond the ordinary powers of a Magistrate.

Clause 40.—An illustration has been added to explain more clearly the proper interpretation of this section.

Clause 41.—As many powers may be conferred on Subordinate Magistrates by a District Magistrate, it is proposed to enable such a Magistrate to withdraw all or any of such powers in the same manner as the law now empowers a Local Government.

Clause 42.—This amendment merely reproduces section 128, and will more conveniently in one place set out the obligations of the public to assist a Magistrate and Police-officer on their demand.

Clause 44.—The new clause is necessary in regard to the giving of information of offences committed or intended to be committed in Native States, especially on the borderland of British India.

Clause 54, para. (1), last clause.—This repeats a portion of section 566, which for completeness it is proposed to insert here also.

Para. (3).—This addition has been suggested by the Government of Bombay and is necessary in consequence of the case of Empress v. Bojjigan, I. L. R., 5 Mad. 22, in which it was held that a village-chowkidar was not a Police-officer competent within the terms of this section to arrest without a warrant, and that therefore an escape from such custody, not being from lawful custody, was no offence.

Clause 57.—This section has been recast at the instance of the Government of India and with the approval of the Local Governments so as to provide a procedure which may be applicable to the case of a person resident in a Native State who is accused of having committed a non-cognizable offence in British India.

Clause 61.—This amendment is intended to show that the period of detention in police custody commences from the time that the person arrested is put in charge of a regular police-officer and not of a village police-officer, otherwise the term of lawful detention will have expired in many cases before it has been possible to commence a police investigation.

Clause 69.—This amendment provides for service of summons on a company or other body corporate in such cases as public nuisances under Chapter X.

Clauses 83, 85 and 86.—"District Superintendent of Police" has been added to these sections as matters falling within them properly come before him and need not come only before a Magistrate.

Clause 88, para. (4).—It is here proposed to give discretionary power to sell live stock or property of a perishable nature which may have been attached.

Para. (7).—The inconvenience of not providing for the summary adjudication of claims to property attached has been shown in several reported cases, and there is no reason why a Magistrate should not in this respect have the same power as a Civil Court. Hence this amendment.

Clause 96, para. (2).—The insertion of the words "or parcel or other thing" is intended to authorise search-warrants for postal parcels.

Clause 102.—This amendment will make a search-warrant more effective by enabling the search of a person in or about the place on whom there may be reasonable suspicion that any article sought for is concealed.

Clause 106.—As reported cases have been contradictory in regard to the exercise of powers under this section, the doubt has been removed by expressly extending it to Courts of Appeal or Revision. The words "by threatening injury to person or property," which occur after the words "criminal intimidation," have been omitted.

Clause 107.—The amendments express more clearly what has been the general interpretation of this section and what its scope should be.

Clause 109.—In this provision the period of six months has been raised to twelve, which brings the period into accord with that fixed by section 107 of the present Code.

Clause 110.—These amendments have been proposed to make this section more complete. They are taken from clause 2 of the Habitual Offenders Bill, which it is proposed to abandon. Sub-clause (f) reproduces a part of the corresponding section of the Code of 1872, as its omission has been found to be inconvenient.

Clause 117, para. (2).—This amendment will enable a Magistrate in one proceeding to deal with two or more persons associated in the same matter which is under inquiry relating to security for good behaviour or to keep the peace.

Clause 118.—The provisos are intended to admit of an order for police supervision (see clause 565) being passed where that is deemed more appropriate than an order requiring security.

Clause 122.—It is here proposed, by omitting the words "for good behaviour," to extend the power of refusing any surety to cases of security to keep the peace.

Clause 123.—It is proposed to omit the last portion of the first clause and by the addition of another clause to deprive the Superintendent of a Jail of the power of determining the sufficiency of security tendered and thereupon releasing the particular person from prison, as this is inconsistent with section 122 and the Superintendent is not a proper person to determine such a matter. The second clause provides the course to be taken when security is tendered to the Superintendent.

Clause 124.—It is first proposed to limit the exercise of these powers in Presidency-towns to the Chief Presidency Magistrate and next to enlarge the operation of the section to mitigation of the particular order.

Clause 125.—This is merely an extension of the present law in regard to security to an order for police supervision.

Clause 133.—It is proposed to extend to all persons acting under Chapter IX the same protection as is now given only to a Magistrate in regard to requiring the sanction of the Governor General in Council before they can be prosecuted for anything purporting to have been done while so acting. The words "under military law" have been omitted as being unnecessary.

Clause 144.—It is proposed to give a Chief Presidency Magistrate power to act under this section.

Clause 145.—As much inconvenience and difficulty has been experienced in acting under this section in consequence of the expression "tangible immoveable property" substituted in the present law for the terms previously used, it is proposed to revert to the latter; and as the collection of rent is generally the means by which possession of land is asserted and maintained, and is a fruitful source of dispute generally resulting in a breach of the peace, it is proposed to extend the section to such matters.

Reported cases have shown that the time of the possession to be determined by the order of the Magistrate is doubtful. This is now made clear.

It is also proposed to declare that, unless either of the parties has at the hearing disputed the Magistrate's finding that there was a dispute likely to cause a breach of the peace within the terms of the first clause, the matter shall not be raised hereafter so as to affect the final order passed.

Clause 146.—This amendment will remedy a difficulty found to exist regarding the management of property under attachment. It will apply the rule already existing in regard to property attached under section 88.

Clause 147.—As in the amendment of section 145, it is proposed to revert to the terms of the former law in preference to the expression "tangible immoveable property" in the present Code.

The amendment of the proviso reproduces the terms of the Code of 1872, the omission of which is a defect in the present law.

Clause 156, para. (2).—This will enable a Magistrate to order the investigation of a cognizable offence. The present law does not expressly provide for this. The power to pass such an order has been limited to Magistrate empowered, under section 191, to take cognizance of an offence.

Clause 157.—This amendment will require a police-officer who declines to investigate a cognizable offence to inform the complainant so that he may proceed to complain to the Magistrate if so advised.

Clause 160.—The proviso declares the course to be taken by a police-officer in regard to the attendance of a parda lady at an investigation.

Clause 162.—This amendment will make statements recorded by a police-officer part of the diary, and therefore not open to inspection by the accused or his agents.

Clause 164.—The explanation added to this section makes it clear that any Magistrate may record a statement or confession, and that it will not be necessary that he should have jurisdiction to inquire into or try the particular case.

Clause 169, para. (2).—This will make this section more complete.

Clause 174.—It has been represented that it is often not possible for the police-officer in charge of a police station to hold an inquest in consequence of the press of other important work or from local considerations. It is proposed to give Local Governments power to appoint special police officers for such purposes.

Paragraph clause.—This will enable the Local Government to appoint a Medical Officer not in the regular service of Government to hold a post-mortem.

Paragraph clause.—This will provide for inquiries into deaths of prisoners in jail.

Clause 188, para. (3).—Some drafting amendments have been made in this provision to bring it into accord with the Acts of Parliament which give extra-territorial jurisdiction, and provision has been made for requiring the sanction of the Local Government in cases of prosecution for offences committed in places for which there is no Political Agent.

Clause 190, para. (3).—An objection to the proceedings before any particular Magistrate should be taken at the earliest stage and before evidence has been taken. Hence this amendment.

Clause 192.—The power conferred on a District Magistrate in regard to cases before Subordinate Magistrates is here given to a Chief Presidency Magistrate to transfer any case from his Court to that of any other Presidency Magistrate.

Clause 193, last para.—This has been added for administrative convenience.

Clause 194, para. (2).—Act X of 1875, section 144, is here inserted. Section 146, the other unrepealed section of that Act, is sufficiently covered by section 333 of the Code.

Clause 195.—In order to meet conflicting judgments of the High Courts, and because the Registration Act sufficiently deals with such matters, it is proposed to declare that proceedings under that Act do not fall within this section. It is also proposed to bring within section 195 abetments of or attempts to commit any of the offences specified. Lastly, as the High Courts have not been concurrent in regard to the power to extend the period for making a complaint on sanction obtained, it is proposed expressly to give such power, but only to a High Court, for good cause shown.

Clauses 203 and 209.—The additions to these sections are necessary to enable a Court of Revision to act under section 437.

Clause 225, para. (2).—This requires an objection to any matter connected with the charge to be made at the earliest opportunity, and provides also that, if it is not so made, it is barred on appeal or revision.

Clauses 227 and 231.—These amendments will settle the law as laid down in contradictory judgments of the High Courts—see I. L. R., 8 Bom. 200, and I. L. R., 9 All. 525.

Clause 234, para. (2).—This has been inserted to meet the case of a series of embezzlements extending over some time when there is a balance proved to have been embezzled, but the prosecution cannot show the exact amount or date of any particular embezzlement.

Clause 236, illustration (b).—This is proposed to settle the law that contradictory statements by a witness which are irreconcileable constitute the offence of intentionally giving false evidence, though it cannot be proved which of the two statements is false.

Clause 237.—By this it is intended to show that on a charge for a specific offence a man may be convicted of an attempt to commit that offence without a charge of such attempt.

Clause 256.—It is here intended to prevent a second cross-examination when there has been already a cross-examination on the facts constituting the charge before it has been drawn up, and thus to prevent a common abuse of this privilege.

Clause 257.—The discretion to be given to a Magistrate under this amendment is proposed with the same object.

Clause 260, sub-clause (l).—This will include amongst cases triable summarily cases under the Cattle-trespass Act, 1871, which it has been held are not so triable.

Para. (2).—This applies mutatis mutandis to the course to be taken in cases coming within section 209.

Clause 269, para. (2).—This will empower a Local Government to prescribe generally or specially in what place or places a Court of Session shall be held.

Clause 292.—This is intended to prevent a right of reply on the part of the prosecution where the only evidence tendered by the defence has been on the cross-examination of a witness for the prosecution. On this point the judgments of the High Courts have differed.

Clause 310.—The new sub-clause (c) is intended to settle a doubt which has been expressed, by declaring that in a case tried with the assistance of assessors it is unnecessary to record and deliver a judgment on the substantive charge before proceeding to try a charge of aggravation of the offence or offences charged and found by reason of any previous conviction or convictions.

Clause 318.—It is proposed to limit to six months the term for which a High Court may sentence a juror for failure without lawful excuse to attend or for departure without permission of the Court, and also expressly to declare that such Court may, in its discretion, remit any fine or imprisonment inflicted.

Clause 320, sub-clause (d).—Police-officers have been added to the list of those exempt from attendance as jurors or assessors. It will be for consideration whether Legal Practitioners should not also be exempt as in England.

Clause 332.—Discretion to remit or reduce any fine or imprisonment imposed on a juror or assessor failing without lawful excuse to attend or departing without permission is given to a Court of Session as is already given in ordinary cases of contempt of Court by section 484.

Clause 345.—Offences under sections 325, 428, 429, and 430, Indian Penal Code, have been added to the list of those which may, with the permission of the Court, be compounded.

Para. (5).—It is proposed that after a commitment to the Court of Session or when after a conviction an appeal has been preferred, no offence shall be compounded without leave of the Court to which the case has been committed or before which the appeal is to be heard.

Clause 380, sub-clause (c).—This has been added so as to make it clear that a Court of Session in a case so referred is competent to direct the case to be committed for trial to that Court if it is of opinion that the sentence which can be passed on the case so referred is inadequate or that it is otherwise desirable for the ends of justice that such a trial shall be held.

Clause 388 (2) —This is intended to apply to such a case as that of an order for compensation under section 560 in which an alternative sentence of imprisonment cannot be passed until it has been found that the amount cannot be recovered by distress, as in the case of a fine, by enabling the Court to require the execution of a bond for the attendance of the person fined on the day fixed for the return of the warrant for distress.

Clause 391.—It is proposed to enact that, unless a sentence of imprisonment not less than for three months is passed, a Court shall not be competent to pass an additional sentence of whipping.

Clause 399.—The substitution of "fifteen" for "sixteen" brings this provision into accord with the Reformatory Schools Act, 1897.

Clause 401.—This clause is to enable the different Governments to make rules for respites in emergent cases, so that execution of a sentence, especially one of death, may be suspended until the orders of Government shall have been received on a petition made to it by the convicted person.

Clause 406.—The addition here is to provide for an appeal against an order for police supervision.

Clause 423, sub-clause (d).—This is necessary to give effect to the amendment of section 106.

Clause 439, last para.—If the person affected has the right of appeal, he should not be allowed to move a Court of Revision without having previously applied for relief to the Appellate Court. Hence this amendment.

Clause 465.—The object of this amendment is to enable statements of witnesses to be recorded during the incapacity of an accused to stand his trial by reason of unsoundness of mind, as otherwise such evidence may be lost. The procedure (section 512) in the case of an absconding accused has been applied.

Clause 471, para. (3).—This will enable the Governor-General in Council to deal with such matters by general orders instead of requiring specific orders in each case. This is necessary especially in cases of persons whose confinement in a lunatic asylum may have been ordered by a Court in a Province where no lunatic asylum has been established. Para. (4) reproduces section 475-B of the present Code.

Clause 476, last para.—The reported cases show that it is undesirable in the ends of justice that a Court of Revision should interfere in such matters with the discretion of a Court in proceedings before it. Ample opportunity is given to make bonâ fide objections when criminal proceedings have been instituted. Hence this clause.

Clause 480.—The addition of section 174 of the Indian Penal Code will enable a Court to deal summarily as a contempt of Court with the case of a witness who may unlawfully depart from such Court.

Clause 488, para. (2).—This will enable a Magistrate to order maintenance to be paid from the date of the complaint and not only from the date of his order.

Para. 3, proviso.—The alteration of the concluding words will give a Magistrate larger discretion in making an order for maintenance. This is necessary because under a reported case a wife may be compelled to live with her husband or lose the right to separate maintenance even when the husband may be cohabiting with another woman so long as she is not a married woman so as to constitute the offence of adultery within the terms of the Indian Penal Code—see I. L. R., 17 Mad. 260.

Para. (6).—The proviso here will enable a Magistrate to proceed and pass an ex-parte order for maintenance in the contumacious absence of the person summoned; provision is also made for the re-opening of such a case.

Para. (7).—This will enable the person summoned to have himself examined as a witness on his own behalf, and will also enable a Magistrate to pass an order as to cost in a maintenance case.

Para. (8).—This declares the jurisdiction of a Magistrate in such a case. The reported cases are doubtful on this point.

Clause 498.—It is left over for consideration whether, having regard to the provisions of section 426, the words "or Court of Session" should not be omitted.

Clause 514.—These amendments will enable proceedings to be taken against the estate of a deceased surety where his liability accrued before his death.

Clause 517.—The operation of this section has been enlarged so as to enable a Magistrate to pass orders for the disposal of any property produced before him.

Clause 520.—This will enable a Superior Court to give effect to an order setting aside the order of the Court of first instance, if that order has been carried out, by directing the restitution of the property.

Clause 526.—This amendment will enable a High Court to pass an order for the transfer of a case on a reference made by an inferior Court with the consent of the parties concerned without a formal motion or affidavit, and will generally in such cases extend the powers of a High Court.

Clause 526, para. (8).—It has been found necessary to give some discretion to a judicial officer in such a case as the power of requiring postponement or adjournment of an inquiry or trial has not unfrequently been abused.

Clause 528.—This amendment has been made so as to enable a District Magistrate in Madras to transfer a case from a Village Magistrate, as it has been held that under the existing law he cannot do so.

Clause 533.—It is proposed to declare that this section applies to a Court of Appeal or Revision.

Clause 537.—This clause has been enlarged so as to apply to a case which has not been finally disposed of so as to meet the objection raised in I. L. R., 23 Cal. 983.

Clause 555, Explanations and Illustration.—These additions have been made to meet the objections raised in I. L. R., 23 Cal. 328, I. L. R., 19 Mad. 263, and other similar cases.

Clauses 561, 562 and 563.—These clauses are new and enable certain Magistrates in specified cases to abstain from passing sentence on a first offender on conditions. They also provide for the course to be taken on failure to fulfil these conditions.

Clauses 564 and 565.—These clauses are new and provide for police supervision in regard to habitual offenders.

Schedule II.

Sections 263A and 477A.—Offences created by Act III of 1895 for which no provision was made in the Code of Criminal Procedure have been entered.

Offences under sections 409, 417, 418, 419, and 420 have been made cognizable offences by an alteration in column 3 on the recommendation of the Government of Madras.

Weather Review of India for the Week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, October 16th, 1897.

During the greater part of the present week very quiet conditions have prevailed throughout the Indian region. During the early part of the week pressure was very uniform over the whole area, but on the 12th a shallow depression began to form over the Bay, and this depression formed the principal feature in the weather of the latter half of the week. The disturbance apparently advanced very slowly westward across the Bay, and though at no time developing into a storm of any serious intensity it occasioned a fair amount of rain over Lower Burma, Bengal and the southern half of the Peninsula. North-West India experienced steadily fine weather throughout, but snow fell on the higher ranges in Kashmir, etc., during the week, and the temperature over the Punjab, Rajputana and Central India, probably on this account, was below the normal average. In other parts of India the mean temperature was higher than usual, and the heat of the whole country for the whole week was consequently very nearly normal.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, October 10th.—The barometer had risen slightly at nearly all stations. Pressure was very uniform generally, but was slightly higher over Western India and slightly lower over the north-west of the Bay and North Bengal than elsewhere. The wind directions were generally between north-west and north-east, but calms were very numerous. The mean temperature was excessive, except in parts of North-West India. The weather was generally fine, but a few scattered showers had been received over Northern India, Berar and the west of the Peninsula.

Monday, October 11th.—Pressure had decreased in Burma, but had generally increased elsewhere. Pressure remained exceedingly uniform, though rather higher in the west than in the east. The barometer slightly exceeded the normal almost everywhere. The winds were practically unchanged, remaining light from between north-west and north-east generally, but with calms in many places. The mean temperature was slightly to considerably below the normal average over North-West India and slightly to considerably above elsewhere. Generally fine weather continued, but Lower Burma, Lower Bengal, the North-West Himalayas and the west and south of the Peninsula had received some showers.

Tuesday, October 12th.—The barometric rise which had prevailed during the past two days had ceased and had been succeeded by a fall which had been brisk over the Punjab and had been brisk to rapid over the Bay. A slight low pressure area had appeared over the east of the Bay, but this was the only important change in the distribution. South-westerly breezes had appeared over Ceylon and South Madras and westerly winds were blowing over the Gangetic Plain, but elsewhere the directions were still between north-west and north-east. The mean temperature remained low over the north-west of India and higher than usual elsewhere. General showers had fallen over Lower Burma and the west of the Peninsula and a few scattered showers over the central parts of the country and Madras.

Wednesday, October 13th.—The barometer was still falling everywhere and the decrease had been brisk, except over Burma, the central parts of the country and along the foot of the hills in the Punjab. The depression over the east of the Bay was slightly deeper than on the preceding day and was beginning to drift slowly westward. The winds were irregularly cyclonic around the Bay and were variable with numerous calms elsewhere. The mean temperature was below the normal over Lower Burma, over the Gangetic Plain, over the Punjab and over Sind, while elsewhere the heat was more or less excessive. The greatest excess was reported from the Deccan and Upper Burma. Rain had fallen over Burma and parts of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the weather was fine.

Thursday, October 14th.—The barometer had changed very slightly almost everywhere, but the inclination was generally downward. The depression over the Bay was unchanged in intensity, but had continued to drift slowly westward and was beginning to affect the east of the Peninsula. Cyclonic winds, which were light except at Diamond Island, continued to blow over the Bay area, while variable winds and calms were reported elsewhere. The mean temperature was low in Burma and over the extreme north-west of India and high over Hyderabad, Central Bengal and Upper Burma. Elsewhere the variations from the normal were slight or moderate. Rain continued to fall over Lower Burma and parts of the Peninsula, but elsewhere the weather remained fine.

Friday, October 15th.—The barometer had fallen over the east and south of the Peninsula and the adjoining parts of Bengal and of the Central Provinces. Elsewhere the barometer had risen. The depression over the Bay had moved very slightly westward. Cyclonic winds, generally light or moderate in force, continued to prevail over the Bay area, while elsewhere the directions were between north-west and north-east. Calms prevailed over the central parts of the country. The variations of the mean temperature from the normal were very irregular and in many places large: thus at Kurrachee the variation was $-4^{\circ}\cdot2$, at Sholapur $-2^{\circ}\cdot8$, at Cuttack $-6^{\circ}\cdot8$ and at Thayetmyo $-2^{\circ}\cdot3$, while at Amraoti it was $+2^{\circ}\cdot8$, at Coconada $+4^{\circ}\cdot2$ and at Bogra $+5^{\circ}\cdot3$. Rain had been received around the Bay as well as over Ceylon and the south-west of the Peninsula.

Saturday, October 16th.—The barometer had fallen across the centre of the Bay, over North Madras and over the east of the Central Provinces, but had risen elsewhere. As a consequence of these changes the depression over the Bay had become more strongly marked as also had the area of high pressure in the north-west, so that the gradients between North-West India and the Bay area had become rather steep. Cyclonic winds of feeble strength prevailed around the Bay, and light or moderate northerly winds elsewhere. The mean temperature was generally low, except on both coasts of the Peninsula and in Bihar, North Bengal, Assam and the greater part of Burma. Rain had fallen over parts of Burma, over the whole of Bengal and over the south of the Peninsula. The rainfall amounts over parts of Bengal and over Travancore were heavy.

Temperature.—As mentioned above, snow fell at different times during the week on the higher elevations of the Kashmir and North-West Himalayas, and this fall appears to have had the effect of keeping temperature low over North-West India. Over other parts of the Indian region the heat was generally higher than usual until the rainfall connected with the storm over the Bay became heavy when a brisk fall of temperature occurred over parts of Burma, South-West Bengal, etc.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week:

The mean temperature of the whole country was slightly above the normal average during the first four days of the week when it fell to the normal or slightly below. The mean for the whole week for the whole country showed a variation of less than $\frac{1}{2}^{\circ}$ from the normal. The provincial variations show a slight deficiency of heat for the week over the Punjab, Central India, Gujarat, Sind and Rajputana and a slight excess over the remaining provinces.

The following are the highest maximum temperatures recorded on each day:

October 10th	101°·5	at	Jacobabad.

Rain.—During the week under review the rainfall has been lighter and less extensive than during the past few weeks. The first few days of the week were marked by quiet fine weather with no general rain, but only a few scattered showers. On Tuesday, the 12th, a shallow storm appeared over the east of the Bay, rain commenced in Burma, and as the depression drifted across the Bay the rainfall slowly extended to Bengal and the east and south of the Peninsula. The rainfall records show that rain fell in Lower and Central Burma on most days of the week, but less generally on the first two than on the latter days; in Upper Burma the rainfall occurred generally between the 13th and 16th; in Assam and Bengal nearly all the rain fell on the last two days of the week, though there were some light showers earlier. Over the west of the Peninsula the showers were distributed throughout the week, while in Madras the rainfall was generally received between the 13th and 16th. The rainfall table at the close of the summary shows that no rain whatever was received during the week in fifteen of the rainfall divisions, and that in seven more the total fall for the week was less than one-tenth of an inch. These twenty-two divisions included all the North-West Provinces divisions, all the Punjab divisions, except the south and hills divisions, the central and east divisions of the Central Provinces, all the North Bombay divisions and all the Central India and Rajputana divisions. In other parts of the country effective rainfall has been received, the average actual amounts ranging from 3·95 inches in Orissa, 3·29 inches in Coorg, 3·05 inches in Deltaic Burma and 3·00 inches in the north of the East Coast (a), to 0·21 inch in the South Punjab, 0·23 inch in the Punjab Hills, 0·19 inch in Berar and 0·17 inch in the Central Provinces (West). No rain of importance is anticipated at this period over the Punjab, Rajputana, Central India and North Bombay, but in the Gangetic Plain and the Central Provinces about $\frac{1}{2}$ inch is expected. The third column of the table shows that the actual average rainfall of the week has exceeded the normal average in eighteen of the divisions and has been less than usual in the remaining divisions. Excessive rain was received in Deltaic, Central and Upper Burma, in Deltaic and Central Bengal, in Orissa, Chota Nagpur and South Bihar, in the South Punjab, in all the west of the Peninsula divisions, in the East Coast [North (a)], in the East Coast (South) and in Madras (South). The abnormal excess is more than two inches in Orissa (2·25 inches) and more than one inch in Coorg (1·40 inches), the East Coast [North (a)] (1·92) inches and the south of the East Coast (1·26) inches. The area of deficient rainfall is more extensive than that of heavy rainfall, but the variations are not larger. The deficiency exceeds one inch in Tenasserim (1·38 inches), Arakan (1·18 inches), Cachar (1·11 inches) and the east submontane division of the North-West Provinces (1·27 inches).

The three last columns of the table, which exhibit the average actual and average normal rainfall for the whole monsoon period from May 30th to October 16th, 1897, show that for the whole period the rainfall has been about normal in no less than thirty-seven of the rainfall divisions, it has exceeded the normal by 20 per cent. or more in fifteen of the divisions—viz., the North-West Provinces (East, West and Hills), the North Punjab, the West Punjab, Malabar, South-Central Madras, Mysore, the Bombay Deccan, Sind, West Rajputana, the East Coast (North), Madras (Central), the East Coast (South) and Madras (South), and has been in defect of the normal by 20 per cent. or more in four divisions—viz., Upper Burma, the Assam Hills, the Submontane Punjab and Baluchistan. As the present week is the last week of the monsoon period of 1897, the above returns are interesting showing that the rainfall has been normal in thirty-seven divisions, that it has been excessive in fifteen divisions and deficient in only four divisions, and hence that the monsoon as a whole has been about normal, but with a trifling tendency to excess.

The following are the principal large totals recorded during the week under review:

Bengal.—For week ending 18th October.—There was general rain, except in parts of North Behar during the week. The rain was heavy in Orissa and parts of South-West Bengal. The general agricultural prospects continue favourable, except in parts of Champaran, where high floods caused by the excessive rain of the preceding week have damaged the cut early autumn crops and destroyed winter rice on low lands liable to inundation. Insects are reported to have attacked the rice plants in places in Patna and Puri. Jute is still being steeped and washed. The harvesting of all other autumn crops is nearly over. The preparation of land for the spring crops is in progress and sowings have begun in places. The price of common rice shows a fall in several districts, but in Champaran it has risen from 12½ to 11 seers per rupee. The average price of common rice in Manbhum where relief works are still open is 9 seers against 8½ seers last week. The harvesting of autumn and sowing of spring crops are in progress. Condition and prospects of standing crops are generally reported good; those on unirrigated lands in Lahore and Gujranwala are suffering for want of rain. The late crops in Shahpur are withering. Stocks of food-grains are large in Rohtak and Peshawar, and sufficient elsewhere. Locusts have damaged the crops to some extent in parts of Hissar, Rohtak, Karnal, Mooltan, Lahore, and Dera Ismail Khan, but passed on without doing any damage in Shahpur. Grass-hoppers have also damaged the early sown wheat in Dera Ismail Khan. Cattle are generally in good condition. Pasturage or fodder is reported to be sufficient in all districts, except Gujranwala. Prospects continue on the whole excellent throughout the Provinces and the crops hitherto harvested have yielded full outturns, but flights of locusts have visited parts of Jubbulpore, Narsinghpur, Nimar, and Saugor doing considerable damage in 40 villages of the Khurai Tahsil of Saugor. GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Circular No. $\frac{19}{251\text{-}2}$-F.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India, in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture (Forests),—dated Simla, the 18th October, 1897.

Read—

Circular No. 10-F., dated the 12th June 1897, communicating remarks on the Administration Report of the Imperial Forest School, Dehra Dun, for the year 1895-96.

Read also—

(i) Report of the Forest School for 1896-97.

(ii) Letter from the Inspector-General of Forests, No. 909, dated the 27th September 1897, submitting the above Report.

RESOLUTION.

During the twelve months ending the 30th June 1897, the Directorship of the School was held by Mr. J. S. Gamble, M. A., from 1st to 31st July 1896, and by Mr. J. W. Oliver from the 1st August until the close of the year. The post of Deputy Director was held by Mr. F. Gleadow throughout the year. Mr. B. B. Osmaston officiated as Instructor until his departure on privilege leave, while Mr. A. F. Gradon resumed charge of his duties as Instructor on his return from furlough on the 27th November 1896. Instructor Mr. C. G. Rogers was granted two years' furlough with effect from the 5th February 1897, and Mr. B. B. Osmaston was, on return from privilege leave, posted to the School staff in his place. Babu Upendra Nath Kanjilal continued to hold the post of Vernacular Instructor.

The School staff was also assisted by the Director of the Botanical Department, Northern India, the Assistant Agricultural Chemist, the Deputy Superintendent of the Indian Museum, and the officers of the School Circle.

2. The number of students attending the School during the past four years is given below—

	Paid.	Private.	Total.
1893-94	73	33	106
1894-95	72	34	106
1895-96	54	29	83
1896-97	47	28	75

The number of students attending has thus again decreased during the year under review. Of the 75 students who attended during the year, 13 were already in Government service, 23 were stipendiary students, 28 attended at their own expense, and 11 were deputed by various Native States.

The very considerable increase in students of this last class is viewed with satisfaction, as tending to prove that the Rulers of Native States are gradually recognising the benefits that must arise from the appointment of properly trained men for the administration of their forest estates.

3. The table appended to paragraph 13 of the Report is interesting, as it shows how completely the number of students entering the School has in past years depended on the number of stipends granted by Government. It is, however, believed that when the prospects open to good men, under the recently sanctioned reorganization of the Provincial Service, come to be more generally known, a greater number of natives by race will be found willing to enter the School at their own expense. The decrease in the proportion of students of European extraction is not to be regretted; for though the pay of the Provincial Service ranges from Rs. 200 to Rs. 600 per mensem, the years which must necessarily be spent in the Ranger class, on a pay of from Rs. 50 to 150 per mensem, before the Provincial Service can be entered, render the service unsuitable for Europeans.

4. There were 35 students in the Senior Upper and Lower classes. Of these one obtained Honours, 23 the ordinary certificate by the Higher standard, 8 the Lower standard certificate, one, a lower class student, failed, one student died during the course, and one left the School before the examinations. These results are compared in the following table with those of the examinations during the previous five years:

* Footnote.—These figures do not agree with those given in Appendix No. II to the Report, as the latter include failed upper class students who were granted lower class certificates.

The results of the year under review compare very favourably with those of previous years, both as regards the percentage of failures and the average marks obtained. It is observed from the table given above that the percentage of failures among private students during the last six years is considerably higher than in the case of men sent to the School at Government expense, which appears to show that the stipendiary students are not less diligent in the prosecution of their studies than the men who enter the School at their own expense, and that due care has been taken in their selection.

5. The entrance examination was held this year in January, instead of in March as in previous years. It is observed that 47 men presented themselves, of whom 26 qualified and 18 finally elected to join the School. One man was admitted who had passed the entrance examination in 1895, and two others under Rule 12 (vii); five men also joined the Lower class, thus bringing the total number who entered the School up to 26. This is a very considerable decrease on the average of 46 that joined during the five years 1892—1896 and the falling off, though in all probability due to the small number of Government stipends offered, is much to be regretted.

6. The question of the desirability, or otherwise, of making further rules for regulating the grant of stipends to students, which was referred to in paragraph 6 of the Government of India review of the School Report for 1895—96, was fully discussed at the last meeting of the Board of Control in March 1897. It was resolved that the matter was gradually righting itself, that no present change in the rules was required, and that the question must be left to the discretion of Local Governments. This view of the case has since been accepted by the Government of India.

7. It is observed that the physical capabilities of the students were satisfactory, but that their previous education, more especially as regards a knowledge of English on the part of the Native students, was insufficient to enable them to obtain the full benefit of the prescribed course of lectures. Both these questions were considered by the Board of Control, and upon their recommendation it has been suggested by the Government of India to the various Local Governments and Administrations that the standard of English at the entrance examination of the School should be raised, and that in future, candidates should, after passing the entrance examination, undergo a six months' course of practical training in the forests. It is hoped that orders on these two important questions will shortly be issued.

ORDER.—Ordered that the above Resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India, and that copies be forwarded, for information, to the Governments of Madras and Bombay, the Local Governments and Administrations noted in the margin, the Department of Finance and Commerce, and the Comptroller and Auditor General; also to the Inspector General of Forests for information and for communication to the Director of the Forest School and the Superintendent of Forest Surveys.

Ordered, further, that a copy, with copies of the Report, be forwarded to the Foreign Department for communication to the Nizam's Government and to the Mysore, Jodhpur, Kashmir, Jeypore, and Rewah Darbars.

PROPOSALS BY FRANCE AND THE UNITED STATES TO REOPEN THE MINTS OF THOSE COUNTRIES AND OF INDIA TO THE UNRESTRICTED COINAGE OF SILVER.

No. 4738 Accounts.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

FINANCE AND COMMERCE DEPARTMENT.

Simla, October 23, 1897.

Ordered that the following papers be published for general information.

J. F. FINLAY,
Secretary to the Government of India.

Financial Despatch No. 129, dated the 5th August 1897, from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India to the Government of India.

MY LORD,—Your Excellency is aware that special envoys from the United States and the Ambassador of France have had interviews with members of Her Majesty's Government in order to discuss the subject of currency reform, in which the Governments of both those countries are at present much interested.

2. The result of those discussions is that Her Majesty's Government have been asked whether, on certain conditions, the question of reopening the Indian mints, which have been closed since 1893, would be taken into consideration.

3. Her Majesty's Government understand that the Governments of France and of the United States desire to open their mints to the free coinage of silver, as well as of gold, such silver to be made legal tender to an unlimited amount at a ratio of 15½ of silver to 1 of gold, provided that they are satisfied they would receive such assistance from other Powers in increasing the demand for silver as would, in their opinion, justify them in such a policy. They propose to summon an International Conference to deal with the matter, if they are led to believe, by the preliminary inquiry which they are now undertaking, that such a Conference would arrive at any satisfactory result; and they ask whether, if their mints were opened as suggested, your Excellency's Government would undertake to reopen concurrently the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver, and to repeal the order which made the sovereign legal tender in India. It would, in this case, be clearly understood that no action shall be taken by you until you are satisfied that the intentions and undertakings of the two Governments will undoubtedly be carried into effect.

4. Her Majesty's Government have replied that they will consult your Excellency's Government upon these proposals, and I invite you accordingly to give them your most careful consideration.

5. It is argued that, on the one hand, very great advantages would be gained for India under an arrangement which could not fail to have the effect of raising materially the gold value of silver, and consequently of the rupee, and which, if it were maintained, would give a good prospect of a more stable ratio, when once the first disturbance was over, than has been known for many years. In that case the heavy loss which is now sustained both by your Government and by all individuals who depend upon a silver currency for the payment of liabilities contracted in gold, would, in all likelihood, disappear; and holders of rupee values would benefit greatly by the increased command of sterling values which such a change would necessarily give them.

6. The present system, however great may be the benefits which it has conferred, may appear to be one of artificial and arbitrary restriction, which is thought by some to have an injurious effect on the course of trade, and the fact of its removal would have the advantage of leaving the expansion and contraction of the currency to the natural forces of the market. I believe, moreover, that your Excellency will agree with me in thinking that the maintenance of the exchange value of the rupee at a point considerably above the intrinsic value of the silver which it contains is not without inconvenience, and that a policy which without lowering exchange would restore the rupee to a value practically unmodified by mint regulations has much to recommend it.

7. On the other hand, there are certain objections which will readily occur to your Excellency, such as the disturbance and dislocation of trade which might perhaps follow a great alteration in the rate of exchange, and the possibility, however remote, that the value of the rupee, as measured in commodities in India, would be so far enhanced as to cause discontent by increasing seriously the amount payable as taxation.

8. A more serious question, in my opinion, is whether the combination of only two Governments, even though the countries which they represent are as important financially as France and the United States, is sufficient to give such a reasonable promise of stability and permanence to an arrangement of this nature as would justify India in facing the undeniable risks and inconveniences attaching to such a change in her system of currency. No doubt, however, the conclusions to be formed on this aspect of the question must in part depend on the terms of the arrangement made between the Governments concerned.

9. In conclusion, I will remind your Excellency that in 1892 the policy of closing the mints was only recommended by your Excellency's predecessor in Council on the ground that an international arrangement, similar to that which is now contemplated, was not then obtainable. This is clearly stated in the Letters of Lord Lansdowne's Government, dated 23rd March and 21st June 1892, and I shall be glad to learn whether your Excellency sees any reason to modify the views therein expressed, and, if so, on what grounds.

10. The question involves issues of such magnitude that I cannot ask your Excellency to reply to this despatch without taking such time as you may require for full deliberation and confidential discussion. As, however, it is important that Her Majesty's Government should, as soon as possible, be in a position to give an answer to the French and American representatives, I trust that you will at once undertake the consideration of the matter, and that you will let me know your views without any unnecessary delay.

Financial Despatch from the Government of India to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 261, dated the 16th September 1897.

MY LORD,—We have the honour to acknowledge receipt of Your Lordship's despatch No. 129 of August 5, 1897, asking for our opinion whether the Indian mints may be reopened to silver as part of a contemplated arrangement under which France and the United States of America will open their mints to silver as well as gold.

2. The present currency systems of the three countries may be thus described. France and the United States both have a gold standard; their mints are open to gold and closed to silver; but gold and silver coins are alike legal tender to an unlimited amount in both countries, at a ratio of $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 in the former and of 16 to 1 in the latter. The currency system of India is in a transition state; the Government of India in 1893 decided to establish a gold standard; and the first step towards that object was the closing of the mints to silver by Act VIII of 1893. The silver rupee is still the sole legal tender coin, though the Government has by executive orders undertaken to receive gold and sovereigns under certain restrictions set forth in Notifications No. 2662 and No. 2663 of June 26, 1893, the rate of exchange adopted being 16*d.* the rupee or Rs. 15 = £1. The measures to be taken when the transition period has passed have not been laid down, but it is probable that the Indian mints will be opened to gold, and gold coins will be made legal tender to an unlimited amount; silver rupees would also continue to be legal tender to an unlimited amount, and the ratio between the rupee and the gold coins as legal tender would at the same time be finally settled. The system towards which India is moving is thus a gold standard of the same kind as that which now exists in France and the United States, but with a different ratio for legal tender; but for the present the mints are closed both to gold and silver. The transition period has lasted for more than four years, but there is ground for hope that it is now drawing to a close.

3. The changes which are involved in the arrangements proposed to Her Majesty's Government are the following. France and the United States are to open their mints to the free coinage of silver, continuing the free coinage of gold and the unlimited legal tender of coins of both metals, the ratio remaining unchanged in France and being altered to the French ratio of $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1 in the United States. India is to open her mints to silver, to keep them closed to gold, and to undertake not to make gold legal tender. France and the United States would thus be bimetallic; India would be monometallic (silver); while most of the other important countries of the world would be monometallic (gold).

4. The object which the proposers have in view is the establishment of a stable relation between the values of gold and of silver. This would include the establishment of a stable exchange between the rupee and sterling currency, which was the object of the Government of India in the proposals made in our Financial despatch No. 160 of June 21, 1892, which proposals ultimately resulted in the adoption, in view to the attainment of that object, of the policy of a gold standard, and in the closing of the mints to the free coinage of silver.

If then it were certain that the suggested measures would result in the establishment of a stable ratio, the Government of India might well consider whether their adoption would not be preferable to the policy to which they committed themselves in 1893 in the hope of attaining the same result by isolated action on the part of India alone. The principal questions therefore for us to consider are whether the measures are more likely to succeed than the policy of 1893, and what consequences to India may be apprehended if the measures should fail of success after being brought into operation. From this point of view we propose to discuss the effect on trade and industry, and on our own revenues, of the changes when made, and of the failure of the arrangement if it should fail, the chances of success, and the risks of failure.

5. The first result of the suggested measures, if they even temporarily succeed in their object, would be an intense disturbance of Indian trade and industry by the sudden rise in the rate of exchange which, if the ratio adopted were $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1, would be a rise from about 1 d. to about 23*d.* the rupee. Such a rise is enough to kill our export trade, for the time at least. If the public were not convinced that the arrangement would have the effect intended, or believed that it would not be permanent, the paralysis of trade and industry would be prolonged and accompanied by acute individual suffering; none of the advantages expected would be attained; and the country would pass through a critical period which would retard its progress for years. How long the crisis would last before normal or stable conditions were restored it is not possible to conjecture. It would be long even if the mercantile and banking community saw that silver was being steadily maintained at the prescribed ratio, while any indication of unsteadiness would greatly prolong the period by giving foundation for doubt. If the doubt should happen to be justified by the results, the position would be disastrous alike to the State, to individuals, and to trade generally. The exchange value of the rupee having risen suddenly, without any intermediate steps, from 16*d.* to some higher figure, it would fall quite as suddenly to a point far lower than its present level, probably to 9*d.*, or even lower. Such a fall would, apart from other disastrous results, necessitate the imposition of additional taxation to the extent of many crores.

6. We may here remind Your Lordship that such an agreement as is proposed is an infinitely more serious question for India than for either of the other two countries; for it seems clear that practically the whole risk of disaster from failure would fall on India alone. What would happen in each of the three countries if the agreement broke down and came to an end? France possesses a large stock of gold, and the United States are at present in much the same situation as France though the stock of that metal is not so large. It may be admitted that if no precautions were taken these gold reserves might disappear under the operation of the agreement, and in that case if the experiment ultimately failed, the two countries concerned would suffer great loss. But it is inconceivable that precautions would not be taken, at all events so soon as the danger of the depletion of the gold reserves manifested itself, and therefore it is probable that no particular change would take place in the monetary system of France or the United States, the only effect of the agreement being a coinage of silver which would terminate with the termination of the agreement. Thus the whole cost of the failure, if the experiment should fail, would be borne by India. Here the rupee would rise with great swiftness, it would keep steady for a time, and then, when the collapse came, it would fall headlong. What course could we then adopt to prevent the fluctuation of the exchange value of our standard of value with the fluctuations in the price of silver? We do not think that any remedy would be open to us, for if the Indian mints were reopened to silver now, it would, in our opinion, be practically impossible for the Government of India ever to close them again; and even if they were closed it would only be after very large additions had been made to the amount of silver in circulation.

7. There is another important consideration in which India is affected in a manner different from France and the United States. The effect of the scheme will probably be an increase in gold prices (that is, in the prices current in France and in the United States) and a fall in silver prices (that is, in the prices current in India). This is not the place in which to discuss the economic effects of a rise or a fall in prices, a matter in respect of which there may be difference of opinion. But we presume that France and the United States contemplate with equanimity the possible effects of the change of prices upon their trade and production generally, while it is manifestly impossible for us, affected as we are in the opposite direction, to take the same view.

8. Moreover, it seems to us somewhat unfair to expect that India should, after its struggles and difficulties of the last decade, consider itself on the same plane, in the discussion of these projects, as France and the United States. India has since 1893 passed through a period of serious tension and embarrassment alike to trade and to the Government. We are satisfied that, great as have been the troubles which have attended this period of transition, the attainment in the end of the paramount object of stability in exchange is worth more than all the sacrifices made. We believe that our difficulties are now nearly over and that we shall in the near future succeed in establishing a stable exchange at 16*d.* the rupee by continuing the policy initiated in 1893.

9. The United States are possibly, in part at least, inspired, in making these proposals, by the idea that they may have before them some of the difficulties and dangers which we have experienced. We need not say that, if our way was clear before us, the consideration that another and a friendly nation would derive benefit from the course adopted by us, would present itself to our minds as a good reason for the adoption of a course of action which would have that result. But the case is quite different when, on the eve of emerging with success, by our own unaided efforts, from the monetary disturbances of the last twenty years, we are asked, in view of the benefit to other nations, to throw away the advantages we have gained and plunge into a new period of struggle and change. Only the most absolute certainty of early and permanent success would warrant our acceptance of such a position. We cannot help seeing that if the policy of 1893 is now abandoned, and if the triple union now proposed as a substitute should fail in its operation or should terminate, and in its failure subject Indian trade to the violent shocks we have described, the Government of India could not, as a responsible Government, call upon the commercial public to face another prolonged period of doubt, suspense, agitation, and difficulties. For it must be clearly and fully recognised that if India joins in the proposed measures, we shall be left dependent, as the sole means of attaining stability in exchange, on the success of those measures, and that if they should fail, India must be content to remain permanently under the silver standard with all its admitted disadvantages.

10. If then there is any reasonable doubt of the success of the suggested measures, we are of opinion that we ought to refuse to co-operate and should maintain our freedom to watch the course of events and take such action from time to time as these may render expedient. A possibility or even a probability that the efforts of France and the United States might meet with success would not be enough to justify us in parting with our freedom or doing anything to further an experiment which, if it fails, will entail consequences to the trade and finances of India which must be described, without any exaggeration, as disastrous.

11. We have given very careful consideration to the question whether France and the United States are likely, with the help of India, to be able to maintain the relative value of gold and silver permanently at the ratio they intend to adopt, and have come to the conclusion that while we admit a possibility of the arrangements proposed resulting in the permanent maintenance of the value of gold and silver at the ratio of $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1, the probability is that they will fail to secure that result; and that it is quite impossible to hold that there is anything approaching a practical certainty of their doing so.

12. One reason for this conclusion is that the arrangement would rest on too narrow a basis. A union consisting of two countries, with a third lending assistance, is a very different thing from the general international union of all or most of the important countries of the world, which was advocated by the Government of India in the despatches of March and June 1892 and of February and September 1886.

13. To afford a hope that a monetary union will succeed in establishing stability in the relative value of gold and silver, it is essential that the nations adhering to it should be of such number and importance that the metallic currency of the whole body shall be of sufficient extent to allow of the exercise of adequate influence on the value of the two metals. We doubt whether any two or even three nations in the world, unless indeed one of them was Great Britain, could comply with this condition, and we have no hesitation in saying that France and the United States and India certainly could not. The intended ratio assigns to coined silver a much higher value than the present market value of silver; and the market value could only be raised by transferring the demand for coinage from gold to silver. But France, the United States, and India all possess a very large stock of silver coin, and it is doubtful whether there is much room in them for a large increase in the silver coinage except by the displacement in France and the United States of the existing gold coins. It is quite possible that the whole of the gold coinage of both France and United States might disappear and be replaced by silver coins before the market value of silver was raised to the intended ratio with gold. Whether the Governments of those countries will allow a total displacement of their gold by silver coins and the possible export from the country of the entire stock of gold is, as we explain in paragraphs 6 and 17 of this despatch, open to more than doubt: and in so far as either enforces measures to prevent gold from being exported, the power of the union, and possibly also its desire, to effect its object will be diminished.

14. A further doubt occurs to us in the possibility that either France or the United States may, for reasons which will suggest themselves to Your Lordship, be reduced for a time to a paper currency. In that case the agreement would cease to operate for an indefinite period under the stress of circumstances. This possibility, though of no importance in the case of a union comprising all the important countries of the world, cannot be disregarded when two or three countries only form the union.

15. Another important source of doubt lies in the consideration that a three sided agreement is open to much greater risk of termination by the action of one or two of the parties than a many-sided agreement such as the Government of India advocated before 1893. In the latter all the commercial countries would be in the union and all would be in an equal position; there would be no ground for supposing that the operation of the agreement benefited one country at the expense of another. There would therefore be no substantial inducement for withdrawal from the régime adopted by common consent; the union might for practical purposes continue to subsist and to produce its effect even after the dissenting country had withdrawn.

16. On the other hand, in a three-sided agreement such as is now proposed, either France or the United States might any day find some reason for thinking that some other nation was obtaining some advantage at their expense in consequence of the great difference in the standard of value; and thereupon discussions might ensue as to the expediency of terminating the agreement which would have only a less serious effect than its actual termination.

17. Another reason for anticipating that the proposed agreement is not likely to succeed will be found in the considerations mentioned in paragraph 6 regarding the improbability of France and the United States allowing their gold reserve to disappear. We attach great importance to these considerations because we are convinced that they vitally affect the prospects of any agreement being successfully carried out. With the precautions to which we have referred the experiment might be continued, for the risk to the two nations would be very small. But without these precautions, or if they proved to be inadequate for their purpose, i.e., the retention of a sufficient stock of gold, we believe the inducement to abandon the experiment would be very strong, and if even one country adopted that course it would be impossible to prevent the whole agreement breaking down.

18. For these reasons alone, without taking into consideration the objections based on the particular ratio proposed, which we shall separately discuss, we have no hesitation in recommending Your Lordship to refuse to give the undertaking desired by the Governments of France and the United States. We are quite clearly of opinion that the interests of India demand that her mints shall not be opened as part of an arrangement to which two or three countries only are parties, and which does not include Great Britain.

19. We note that the proposals of the Governments of France and the United States are subject to the proviso that they are satisfied that they will receive assistance from other Powers in increasing the demand for silver. We believe that a limited increase of the quantity of silver used as currency will exercise a very trifling influence, if any, in raising the gold price of silver, and that the only assistance from other Powers which can be of any real value would be the addition of other countries to the bimetallic union of France and the United States. If, however, assurances of really substantial co-operation should be secured from other countries, we shall be glad to learn the exact nature of the assurances, and we shall then consider whether the promised co-operation changes the conditions of the problem or adds materially to the chances of success.

20. We believe, however, that whatever inducements are held out to us by other nations, our best policy in monetary matters is to link our system with that of Great Britain. Our commercial connexions with that country are far more important than those with all the rest of the world put together, and more than a sixth part of our expenditure is incurred in that country and measured in its currency. The advantages, which in this respect we gain by following the lead of Great Britain, are not obtained, or not fully obtained, if we become members of a monetary union in which Great Britain takes no part. And, indeed, as we have already explained, we have little hope of an efficient union being formed unless Great Britain is a member. We think it a reasonable position for us to take with regard to the present proposals by France and the United States, that we should say that the Government of India strove long and earnestly to further the formation of an International Union: that when they saw that the opposition of England rendered impossible the attainment of that object within any measurable time, they temporarily abandoned their efforts in that direction and decided, as the least prejudicial of the courses open to them, to throw in their lot with Great Britain and to adopt the gold standard: that, as it appears improbable that an effective union will be formed without the adhesion of Great Britain, and as the measures adopted to introduce a gold standard in India are now approaching final success, they consider that it will be wisest to adhere to the course adopted in 1893 until Great Britain is prepared to join in international bimetallism; and that they therefore wish to adhere to the same monetary standard as Great Britain, with which nation they are most closely linked both in respect of their commercial relations and in all other respects, and to refrain from becoming a party to arrangements with other nations in which Great Britain sees ample reason for refusing to join.

21. So far, the arguments we have offered, in discussing the chances of success or failure of the arrangement, have been independent of consideration of the precise ratio proposed by France and United States. We have objected to the arrangement on grounds which apply to it whatever be the ratio adopted, but we must add that our objections are greatly strengthened by the fact that so high a ratio is proposed as 15½ to 1. It seems to us that the difficulty of making the arrangement effective will be immensely increased by the adoption of a ratio differing so widely from the present market ratio. Indeed, even if it could be maintained successfully, we should object to that ratio in the interests of India, and we recommend that Your Lordship should, on behalf of India, decline to participate in or do anything to encourage the formation of a union based on that ratio.

22. We have said in paragraph 5 that the first result of the proposed arrangement would be an immediate disturbance of trade and industry by the advance of the exchange value of the rupee, which will be very intense if the rise is from between 15 and 16 pence to about 23 pence. There is no doubt that the effect would be to throw some branches of the export trade of India and the industries connected therewith, (the planting industries, for example, in which a large amount of European capital has been embarked), into the most depressed condition for some time at least. The period of depression might be long or comparatively short, though there are authorities who are inclined to attribute a permanently disastrous effect to such a large and sudden rise in exchange and to apprehend that Indian commerce might be utterly shaken by the change.

In any case, we are of opinion that the true interests of India demand that any measures for attaining stability in the rate of exchange between gold and silver should be based upon a rate not greatly differing from 16*d.* the rupee, and that any measure which would raise the rupee materially higher than that level involves great dangers for which we see no adequate compensations. Your Lordship will observe that we attach no special importance to the advantages to be derived from the proposed considerable rise in exchange mentioned in paragraph 5 of your despatch, and consider them to be far outweighed by the resulting evils.

23. Pressed as we have been for many years by the difficulty of finding the continually increasing number of rupees requisite to discharge our sterling liabilities, we are apt to look too exclusively at the effect which a rise of exchange would have in diminishing the burden of that demand upon us. We do not deny that a large surplus of revenue will arise from so great an improvement in exchange; but it is not to be forgotten that there are many respects in which our revenue account must directly suffer by a rise in the exchange value of the rupee, and that these considerations ought to greatly influence our estimate of the benefit to our revenue account which is almost the sole advantage which, as a Government, we can expect to obtain from the proposed measures.

The anticipated fall in prices is one that will adversely affect both our revenues and the general condition of the agricultural classes in the country. To take the case of our Land Revenue, a very large portion of the country has passed under Land Revenue Settlement during the last ten or fifteen years. One of the factors in fixing the demand of the Government for revenue is the price of agricultural produce: if that price falls away, the heavier the demand becomes, and if it falls away materially, the relation between the price that the ryot can obtain for his produce and the assessment he has to meet may be so seriously altered as to affect the agricultural prosperity of large tracts of country. The work of re-settlement is a tedious one, it cannot be effected in all probability for some years, and when it is effected it will pro tanto dissipate much of the advantage which the rise of exchange would bring to the Government account.

So, also, as regards our Railway Revenues, which are now so important a portion of our income. They are in part directly dependent upon the activity of the export trade, and a blow struck at that trade will be felt by us immediately and directly through our railway account.

24. For these reasons therefore, in addition to those set forth in the earlier portion of this depatch, we recommend that the reply to the request of the Governments of France and the United States should be in the negative. We presume that a union based upon a ratio low enough to suit our interests would be unacceptable to France and the United States.

25. With reference to paragraph 6 of Your Lordship's despatch, we invite attention to the description of the present currency system of India given in paragraph 2 above. There appears to be some misapprehension in the comparison drawn between the arrangement proposed by the United States and France and the "present system" in India. The present system is of course open to the objection that it is one of artificial restriction, but it is essential to bear in mind that it is not a permanent system or indeed a system at all. We are in a transition period, moving from one system to another, and the present artificial restriction is merely a temporary expedient which has for its sole object the acceleration of the movement and which will cease to exist with the completion of the movement. Thereafter the expansion and contraction of the currency will be left to the natural forces of the market, that is, it will be regulated automatically by the inflow and outflow of gold.

26. It is true that the system will be open to the other objection stated in paragraph 6 of the despatch, that the rupee will continue to remain at a value above its metallic value, but—as was pointed out by Lord Herschell's Committee—this is an objection which has not made itself seriously felt in the other countries, including France and the United States, in which an analogous system has been in operation for many years. It is not likely that the objection will make itself seriously felt in India when the gold standard has been effectively introduced.

27. The question really is not one of comparison, as put by Your Lordship, between the present temporary expedient in India and the arrangement proposed, but between a gold standard and the proposed arrangement, which involves the abandonment of the policy of a gold standard, adopted in 1893, in favour of reversion to the policy of a silver standard.

28. In paragraph 9 of the despatch, Your Lordship reminds us that "in 1892 the policy of closing the mints was only recommended" by Lord Lansdowne's Government "on the ground that an international arrangement, similar to that which is now contemplated, was not then obtainable," and we are asked to say whether we see any reason to modify the views expressed in that sense in the despatches No. 68 of March 23 and No. 160 of June 21, 1892.

In reply we have first to point out that the international arrangement which Lord Lansdowne's Government contemplated is very far from being similar to that which is now proposed. The proposal now under consideration is for a union of two countries only, with some assistance from a third: the international arrangement contemplated in 1892 was a general bimetallic union of all important nations, or, to use the words of the despatch No. 277 of September 4, 1886, which is referred to in paragraph 2 of the despatch of June 21, 1892, as expressing the views held by Lord Lansdowne's Government, "an international agreement for the free coinage of silver and the making of both gold and silver coin a legal tender at a fixed ratio by a group of nations possessed of a metallic currency of sufficient extent to maintain that ratio permanently." We have already stated our opinion that the agreement now proposed does not fulfil the last named essential condition.

Secondly, circumstances have essentially altered since 1892. Despairing of securing the adoption of any of the measures which they had persistently urged, the Government of India decided to attempt the establishment of a gold standard and, as the first step, closed the mints to the coinage of silver tendered by the public. If the proposals now made had been made in 1892 or at any time before June 1893, it is conceivable that the Government of India of that time would have welcomed them as containing a possibility of securing the objects they desired, and would, in order to secure their adoption, have agreed to postpone the closing of the mints and to keep them open for a period sufficient to allow a full trial to the measures of France and the United States, say for five years. But our position is now very different. The experience of the last three or four years has cleared up many doubts which were present to our predecessors' minds in 1893, and it has taught us that the course we actually adopted in 1893 really had in it better chances of success than the alternative of a partial international agreement. To agree not to close mints, still open, for a definite time, and to agree to reopen closed mints, are two very different things. The former course would have been justifiable if the measures proposed were such as to afford a reasonable expectation of securing the main object of the Government of India, namely, stability in the rate of exchange. The latter is entirely unjustifiable, unless the measures afford a practical certainty of securing that object.

29. The conditions under which we have had to reply to Your Lordship's despatch preclude our consulting the commercial and banking communities in this country, although the subject is one in which they are, as we have explained, most closely interested. It was only after prolonged public discussion, and after a formal examination by a Committee of experts, that the policy of 1893 was adopted; and if we thought it our duty to advocate a change in that policy instead of to set out the strong objections which we see to its abandonment, we would, nevertheless, strongly deprecate any steps of the kind being taken without the fullest preliminary consideration on the part of the banking and commercial bodies in this country.

30. To sum up, our reply to Your Lordship's reference is a strong recommendation that you should decline to give the undertaking desired by France and the United States. Our unanimous and decided opinion is that it would be most unwise to reopen the mints as part of the proposed arrangements, especially at a time when we are to all appearance approaching the attainment of stability in exchange by the operation of our own isolated and independent action.

Telegram from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India to the Government of India, dated the 21st October 1897.

After careful consideration in Council of your letter of 16th September on the subject of currency proposals, I forwarded a copy to the Treasury with a covering letter, dated 13th October, expressing my concurrence in your wishes that the proposals should be declined. Her Majesty's Government have now decided that they cannot agree to the proposal to re-open the Indian mints. As regards the remaining proposals, in view of decision above mentioned, they do not consider it necessary to discuss them at present, but they desire to know how far the views of France and the United States are modified by this decision, and whether they wish to proceed further with the negotiations. A communication in this sense was sent from the Foreign Office to the American and French representatives on the 19th October. A despatch follows, and the correspondence will be published here forthwith.

PROPOSED UNIFORM SYSTEM OF STORM SIGNALS FOR THE INDIA COAST PORTS EXCEPT THOSE ON THE RIVER HOOGHLY.

No. 2954—45-8, dated Simla, the 7th October, 1897.

Extract from the Proceedings of the Government of India in the Department of Revenue and Agriculture, No. 26—45-8 (Meteorology), dated the 28th September, 1897.

The following papers relating to the modified scheme of storm signals for the Indian coast ports except those in the River Hooghly are published for general information.

(True Extract),

DENZIL IBBETSON,
Secretary to the Government of India.

Circular No. 26—45-8 (Meteorology), dated Simla, the 28th September, 1897.

From—F. G. SLY, Esq., C.S., Under-Secretary to the Government of India,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Madras.
" " " Bombay.
" " " Bengal.
" " " Burma.

In continuation of the endorsement from this Department, No. 1719-1722—45-1, dated the 18th July 1896, I am directed to forward a modified scheme of storm signals for the Indian Coast Ports (except those in the river Hooghly) which has been approved by the Government of India, and to request that with the permission of the Governor in Council / His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor they may be brought into use at once and published in the Local Gazette for general information.

Proposed uniform system of storm signals for the India Coast ports except those on the River Hooghly.

In accordance with the request of the Government of India we have carefully considered the uniform system of storm signals proposed by the Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India in his letter No. 456-S., dated 11th June 1896, to the Revenue and Agricultural Department, and also the various suggestions that have been made by the authorities to whom the proposals were sent for the favour of opinion and criticism. We have the honour to submit the following revised system in final recommendation for the consideration of the Government of India and hope they will be judged worthy of adoption. The chief point we have endeavoured to keep in view is to make the system as simple as possible consistent with giving as full warning and information by storm signals as is desirable in the present state of meteorological observation and science in India.

The following gives the uniform system of storm signals and their significance that we propose for adoption at all ports in India, with the exception of those in and near the mouth of the River Hooghly :—

DAY SIGNALS.

I.—CAUTIONARY SIGNAL.

Bay of Bengal.

The square flag W of the International Code hoisted on the storm signal staff as a cautionary signal indicates the existence of disturbed squally weather in the Bay of Bengal which may be the first stage in the formation of a cyclonic storm, and which, if it developes, is likely to affect that part of the coast on which the port is situated.

The disturbed conditions may pass away without developing into a cyclonic storm, in which case the cautionary signal will be taken down as soon as it is certain that stormy weather will not shortly follow. If, however, the disturbed weather be the first indication of the probable formation or approach of a cyclonic storm, the cautionary signal will be followed by one of the ordinary storm signals, indicating the probable position, character and track of the approaching storm.

Arabian Sea.

The square flag W of the International Code hoisted on the storm signal staff as a cautionary signal, indicates the existence of disturbed weather off some part of the West Coast of India in the neighbourhood of the port or ports at which the signal is hoisted ; or the advance of a cyclonic storm across the Peninsula from the Bay of Bengal which may hence shortly cross the Western Ghats and give squally or stormy weather in the Arabian Sea.

The disturbed conditions may in either case pass away without giving stormy cyclonic weather to the West Coast ports or to the adjacent parts of the Arabian Sea, in which case the cautionary signal will be taken down as soon as it is certain that stormy weather will not shortly follow. If, however, the disturbed weather be the first indication of the probable formation or approach of a cyclonic storm, this cautionary signal will be followed by one of the ordinary storm signals, indicating the probable position, character and track of the approaching storm.

II.—WARNING SIGNAL.

A ball indicates that a cyclonic storm has formed, which will probably advance to that part of the coast on which the port is situated, but is still at a considerable distance from it. The same signal will also be hoisted at the larger and more important ports on the West Coast of India to indicate that a storm has formed in the Arabian Sea at some distance from the coast and will shortly cross one or other of the tracks of vessels leaving these ports, but is not likely to give the ports bad weather. The port officers when instructed to hoist the warning signal will also be informed of the object of the signal so as to communicate its full purport to masters of vessels about to leave the port.

III.—DANGER SIGNALS.

(1) A cone apex downwards indicates that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the south of the port.

(2) A cone apex upwards indicates that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the north of the port.

(3) A drum indicates that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

In order to indicate that a cyclonic storm in the sea area near a port is of great intensity, a ball is added to (and placed underneath) the corresponding danger signal. The following shows the proposed great danger signals and their significance :—

IV.—GREAT DANGER SIGNALS.

(1) A cone apex downwards and ball below indicate that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the south of the port.

(2) A cone apex upwards and ball below indicate that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the north of the port.

(3) A drum with a ball below indicates that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

The following gives the night signals corresponding to the day signals named above, together with a statement of their significance :—

I.—CAUTIONARY SIGNAL.

None.

II.—WARNING SIGNAL.

A red light (corresponding to day warning signal) indicates that a cyclonic storm has formed, which will probably advance to that part of the coast on which the port is situated, but is still at a considerable distance from it.

III.—DANGER SIGNALS.

(I) A red light vertically above a white light corresponds to day signal No. 1 and indicates that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the south of the port.

(II) A red light vertically below a white light corresponds to day signal No. 2 and indicates that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the north of the port.

(III) Two red lights in a vertical line correspond to day signal No. 3 and indicate that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

IV.—GREAT DANGER SIGNALS.

(I) Two red lights with a white light below arranged in a vertical line correspond to day great danger signal No. 1 and indicate that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the south of the port.

(II) Two red lights with a white light above in a vertical line correspond to day great danger signal No. 2 and indicate that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast considerably to the north of the port.

(III) Three red lights in a vertical line correspond to day great danger signal No. 3 and indicate that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

In the above are given the day and night series of storm signals, proposed for general adoption at the storm warning stations on the coasts of India.

It will be observed that there is no night cautionary signal included in the series. We are of opinion that a night cautionary signal is unnecessary and also that the day cautionary signal should be employed only at ports frequented by ocean-going steamers.

We are also of opinion that it is desirable the signals should be as simple as possible, and consider that the system of night signals suggested by the Director, Indian Marine, is much better from this standpoint than the second system as proposed by Mr. Eliot and have hence adopted that system for our proposed series of night signals. The system of night signals we suggest is, it will be seen, a linear arrangement of lights and is not liable to be mistaken in any position of the lights. A triangular arrangement may under certain conditions appear only as two lights and may hence give a false indication.

In the instructions which we received from the Government of India, it was requested that we should take into careful consideration certain remarks and criticisms of the Collector of Salt Revenue, Bombay. These remarks are as follows :—

"That the signal stations under the control of the Salt Revenue Department on the coast of the Bombay Presidency are in each case in charge of the staff employed at the lighthouse. The men, although carefully trained for their particular duties, and fairly intelligent, are more or less illiterate, and it is desirable that directions given to them should be as few and as simple as possible. The steamers which visit the coast ports during the monsoon months are few in number. At present all of them belong to one Bombay Company, and any warnings which may be received in Bombay are communicated to them by the Company's agents at the ports which they enter. The principal use of the signals is to warn the country crafts, which swarm along the coast, of the approach of danger. It is therefore of the first importance that the system employed should be simple, and that no change which is not absolutely necessary should be made in any system to which the native seamen have become accustomed."

"The new system which is now proposed by the Meteorological Reporter is no doubt theoretically more perfect than the one now in use on the coast. But instead of the 5 day and 3 night signals, we shall have either 8 day and 2 night signals or 8 day and 9 night signals. In my opinion this elaboration is, so far as the small coast stations are concerned, unnecessary and likely to do more harm than good. The men in charge may in course of time be taught to use the correct signals, but the masters of country vessels will certainly be bewildered, and may possibly disregard the signals altogether as some new freak which poor men cannot be expected to understand."

"I doubt whether the advantages resulting from uniformity will compensate for the confusion which will be caused by a change of system. The masters of steamers are presumably acquainted with the system used in the different ports which they visit and are not likely to be misled by the differences which exist. On the other hand, the masters of country vessels will be slow to realize that there has been any change, and still slower to appreciate the meaning of the new signals. For instance, the ball which it is now proposed to use for the day warning signal has been used for many years on this coast to denote the approach of the coasting steamers, and it will be long before the people who have become accustomed to it will take it for anything else."

With reference to the remarks of the Collector of Salt Revenue, we have first to state that we consider it to be of primary importance that as full and effective warning of storms as practicable should be given to the larger ports, and that it would never be tolerated by the various interests concerned that the system of storm signals should be cut down so as to suit the very limited intelligence of the masters of country vessels.

On the other hand, we agree with him that itis desirable the storm signals used at small ports, frequented only by country vessels or small coasting steamers, should be made as simple as possible. This can easily be done by using only a selection of the uniform series of storm signals given above, suited to the exigencies of these ports. In fact, they only require to be warned of storms likely to affect them directly. This can be done by the use of the following three day and the corresponding night signals shown below :—

DAY SIGNALS.

I.—WARNING SIGNAL.

A ball indicates that a cyclonic storm has formed, which will probably advance to that part of the coast on which the port is situated, but is still at a considerable distance from it.

II—DANGER SIGNAL.

A drum indicates that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

III.—GREAT DANGER SIGNAL.

A drum with a ball below indicates that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

CORRESPONDING SYSTEM OF NIGHT SIGNALS.

I.—WARNING SIGNAL.

A red light (corresponding to day warning signal) indicates that a cyclonic storm has formed, which will probably advance to that part of the coast on which the port is situated, but is still at a considerable distance from it.

II.—DANGER SIGNAL.

Two red lights in a vertical line correspond to day signal No. 2 and indicate that a cyclonic storm (probably of slight to moderate intensity) is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

III.—GREAT DANGER SIGNAL.

Three red lights in a vertical line correspond to day (great-danger) signal No. 3 and indicate that a cyclonic storm of great intensity is affecting the port and that its centre will probably cross the coast over or near to the port.

It will be seen that these signals are the same as in the larger series and only include those indicating the approach of a storm to the immediate neighbourhood of the port.

It would depend upon the local authorities concerned whether the smaller or the larger series of storm signals were adopted, and their decision would be communicated to the Meteorological Reporter to the Government of India, Simla, who would frame his warnings to the respective ports in accordance with the wishes of the local authorities as sanctioned by the Local Governments.

We also desire to take this opportunity of suggesting that whenever a cyclonic storm is known to be in existence in the Arabian Sea, and is likely to cross the usual tracks of steamers between Aden and Bombay or Aden and Kurrachee, information to that effect should be telegraphed by the Simla Meteorological Office to the Port Officer, Aden, for communication to the Commanders of mail and other steamers leaving that port for either Bombay or Kurrachee.

J. P. HEWETT,
Secretary to the Government of India.

Majesty's Government in order to discuss the subject of currency reform, in which the Governments of both those countries are at present much interested.

2. The result of those discussions is that Her Majesty's Government have been asked whether, on certain conditions, the question of reopening the Indian mints, which have been closed since 1893, would be taken into consideration.

3. Her Majesty's Government understand that the Governments of France and of the United States desire to open their mints to the free coinage of silver, as well as of gold, such silver to be made legal tender to an unlimited amount at a ratio of $15\frac{1}{2}$ of silver to 1 of gold, provided that they are satisfied they would receive such assistance from other Powers in increasing the demand for silver as would, in their opinion, justify them in such a policy. They propose to summon an International Conference to deal with the matter, if they are led to believe, by the preliminary inquiry which they are now undertaking, that such a Conference would arrive at any satisfactory result; and they ask whether, if their mints were opened as suggested, your Excellency's Government would undertake to reopen concurrently the Indian mints to the free coinage of silver, and to repeal the order which made the sovereign legal tender in India. It would, in this case, be clearly understood that no action shall be taken by you until you are satisfied that the intentions and undertakings of the two Governments will undoubtedly be carried into effect.

4. Her Majesty's Government have replied that they will consult your Excellency's Government upon these proposals, and I invite you accordingly to give them your most careful consideration.

5. It is argued that, on the one hand, very great advantages would be gained for India under an arrangement which could not fail to have the effect of raising materially the gold value of silver, and consequently of the rupee, and which, if it were maintained, would give a good prospect of a more stable ratio, when once the first disturbance was over, than has been known for many years. In that case the heavy loss which is now sustained both by your Government and by all individuals who depend upon a silver currency for the payment of liabilities contracted in gold, would, in all likelihood, disappear; and holders of rupee values would benefit greatly by the increased command of sterling values which such a change would necessarily give them.

6. The present system, however great may be the benefits which it has conferred, may appear to be one of artificial and arbitrary restriction, which is thought by some to have an injurious effect on the course of trade, and the fact of its removal would have the advantage of leaving the expansion and contraction of the currency to the natural forces of the market. I believe, moreover, that your Excellency will agree with me in thinking that the maintenance of the exchange value of the rupee at a point considerably above the intrinsic value of the silver which it contains is not without inconvenience, and that a policy which without lowering exchange would restore the rupee to a value practically unmodified by mint regulations, has much to recommend it.

7. On the other hand, there are certain objections which will readily occur to your Excellency, such as the disturbance and dislocation of trade which might perhaps follow a great alteration in the rate of exchange, and the possibility, however remote, that the value of the rupee, as measured in commodities in India, would be so far enhanced as to cause discontent by increasing seriously the amount payable as taxation.

8. A more serious question, in my opinion, is whether the combination of only two Governments, even though the countries which they represent are as important financially as France and the United States, is sufficient to give such a reasonable promise of stability and permanence to an arrangement of this nature as would justify India in facing the undeniable risks and inconveniences attaching to such a change in her system of currency. No doubt, however, the conclusions to be formed on this aspect of the question must in part depend on the terms of the arrangement made between the Governments concerned.

9. In conclusion, I will remind your Excellency that in 1892 the policy of closing the mints was only recommended by your Excellency's predecessor in Council on the ground that an international arrangement, similar to that which is now contemplated, was not then obtainable. This is clearly stated in the Letters of Lord Lansdowne's Government, dated 23rd March and 21st June 1892, and I shall be glad to learn whether your Excellency sees any reason to modify the views therein expressed, and, if so, on what grounds.

10. The question involves issues of such magnitude that I cannot ask your Excellency to reply to this despatch without taking such time as you may require for full deliberation and confidential discussion. As, however, it is important that Her Majesty's Government should, as soon as possible, be in a position to give an answer to the French and American representatives, I trust that you will at once undertake the consideration of the matter, and that you will let me know your views without any unnecessary delay.

Financial Despatch from the Government of India to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India, No. 261, dated the 16th September 1897.

MY LORD,—We have the honour to acknowledge receipt of Your Lordship's despatch No. 129 of August 5, 1897, asking for our opinion whether the Indian mints may be reopened to silver as part of a contemplated arrangement under which France and the United States of America will open their mints to silver as well as gold.

2. The present currency systems of the three countries may be thus described. France and the United States both have a gold standard; their mints are open to gold and closed to silver; but gold and silver coins are alike legal tender to an unlimited amount in both countries, at a ratio of 15½ to 1 in the former and of 16 to 1 in the latter. The currency system of India is in a transition state; the Government of India in 1893 decided to establish a gold standard; and the first step towards that object was the closing of the mints to silver by Act VIII of 1893. The silver rupee is still the sole legal tender coin, though the Government has by executive orders undertaken to receive gold and sovereigns under certain restrictions set forth in Notifications No. 2662 and No. 2663 of June 26, 1893, the rate of exchange adopted being 16*d.* the rupee or Rs. 15 = £1. The measures to be taken when the transition period has passed have not been laid down, but it is probable that the Indian mints will be opened to gold, and gold coins will be made legal tender to an unlimited amount; silver rupees would also continue to be legal tender to an unlimited amount, and the ratio between the rupee and the gold coins as legal tender would at the same time be finally settled. The system towards which India is moving is thus a gold standard of the same kind as that which now exists in France and the United States, but with a different ratio for legal tender; but for the present the mints are closed both to gold and silver. The transition period has lasted for more than four years, but there is ground for hope that it is now drawing to a close.

3. The changes which are involved in the arrangements proposed to Her Majesty's Government are the following. France and the United States are to open their mints to the free coinage of silver, continuing the free coinage of gold and the unlimited legal tender of coins of both metals, the ratio remaining unchanged in France and being altered to the French ratio of 15½ to 1 in the United States. India is to open her mints to silver, to keep them closed to gold, and to undertake not to make gold legal tender. France and the United States would thus be bimetallic; India would be monometallic (silver); while most of the other important countries of the world would be monometallic (gold).

4. The object which the proposers have in view is the establishment of a stable relation between the values of gold and of silver. This would include the establishment of a stable exchange between the rupee and sterling currency, which was the object of the Government of India in the proposals made in our Financial despatch No. 160 of June 21, 1892, which proposals ultimately resulted in the adoption, in view to the attainment of that object, of the policy of a gold standard, and in the closing of the mints to the free coinage of silver.

If then it were certain that the suggested measures would result in the establishment of a stable ratio, the Government of India might well consider whether their adoption would not be preferable to the policy to which they committed themselves in 1893 in the hope of attaining the same result by isolated action on the part of India alone. The principal questions therefore for us to consider are whether the measures are more likely to succeed than the policy of 1893, and what consequences to India may be apprehended if the measures should fail of success after being brought into operation. From this point of view we propose to discuss the effect on trade and industry, and on our own revenues, of the changes when made, and of the failure of the arrangement if it should fail, the chances of success, and the risks of failure.

5. The first result of the suggested measures, if they even temporarily succeed in their object, would be an intense disturbance of Indian trade and industry by the sudden rise in the rate of exchange which, if the ratio adopted were $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1, would be a rise from about 1*s*. to about 23*d*. the rupee. Such a rise is enough to kill our export trade, for the time at least. If the public were not convinced that the arrangement would have the effect intended, or believed that it would not be permanent, the paralysis of trade and industry would be prolonged and accompanied by acute individual suffering; none of the advantages expected would be attained; and the country would pass through a critical period which would retard its progress for years. How long the crisis would last before normal or stable conditions were restored it is not possible to conjecture. It would be long even if the mercantile and banking community saw that silver was being steadily maintained at the prescribed ratio, while any indication of unsteadiness would greatly prolong the period by giving foundation for doubt. If the doubt should happen to be justified by the results, the position would be disastrous alike to the State, to individuals, and to trade generally. The exchange value of the rupee having risen suddenly, without any intermediate steps, from 16*d*. to some higher figure, it would fall quite as suddenly to a point far lower than its present level, probably to 9*d*., or even lower. Such a fall would, apart from other disastrous results, necessitate the imposition of additional taxation to the extent of many crores.

6. We may here remind Your Lordship that such an agreement as is proposed is an infinitely more serious question for India than for either of the other two countries; for it seems clear that practically the whole risk of disaster from failure would fall on India alone. What would happen in each of the three countries if the agreement broke down and came to an end? France possesses a large stock of gold, and the United States are at present in much the same situation as France though the stock of that metal is not so large. It may be admitted that if no precautions were taken these gold reserves might disappear under the operation of the agreement, and in that case if the experiment ultimately failed, the two countries concerned would suffer great loss. But it is inconceivable that precautions would not be taken, at all events so soon as the danger of the depletion of the gold reserves manifested itself, and therefore it is probable that no particular change would take place in the monetary system of France or the United States, the only effect of the agreement being a coinage of silver which would terminate with the termination of the agreement. Thus the whole cost of the failure, if the experiment should fail, would be borne by India. Here the rupee would rise with great swiftness, it would keep steady for a time, and then, when the collapse came, it would fall headlong. What course could we then adopt to prevent the fluctuation of the exchange value of our standard of value with the fluctuations in the price of silver? We do not think that any remedy would be open to us, for if the Indian mints were reopened to silver now, it would, in our opinion, be practically impossible for the Government of India ever to close them again; and even if they were closed it would only be after very large additions had been made to the amount of silver in circulation.

7. There is another important consideration in which India is affected in a manner different from France and the United States. The effect of the scheme will probably be an increase in gold prices (that is, in the prices current in France and in the United States) and a fall in silver prices (that is, in the prices current in India). This is not the place in which to discuss the economic effects of a rise or a fall in prices, a matter in respect of which there may be difference of opinion. But we presume that France and the United States contemplate with equanimity the possible effects of the change of prices upon their trade and production generally, while it is manifestly impossible for us, affected as we are in the opposite direction, to take the same view.

8. Moreover, it seems to us somewhat unfair to expect that India should, after its struggles and difficulties of the last decade, consider itself on the same plane, in the discussion of these projects, as France and the United States. India has since 1893 passed through a period of serious tension and embarrassment alike to trade and to the Government. We are satisfied that, great as have been the troubles which have attended this period of transition, the attainment in the end of the paramount object of stability in exchange is worth more than all the sacrifices made. We believe that our difficulties are now nearly over and that we shall in the near future succeed in establishing a stable exchange at 16d. the rupee by continuing the policy initiated in 1893.

9. The United States are possibly, in part at least, inspired, in making these proposals, by the idea that they may have before them some of the difficulties and dangers which we have experienced. We need not say that, if our way was clear before us, the consideration that another and a friendly nation would derive benefit from the course adopted by us, would present itself to our minds as a good reason for the adoption of a course of action which would have that result. But the case is quite different when, on the eve of emerging with success, by our own unaided efforts, from the monetary disturbances of the last twenty years, we are asked, in view of the benefit to other nations, to throw away the advantages we have gained and plunge into a new period of struggle and change. Only the most absolute certainty of early and permanent success would warrant our acceptance of such a position. We cannot help seeing that if the policy of 1893 is now abandoned, and if the triple union now proposed as a substitute should fail in its operation or should terminate, and in its failure subject Indian trade to the violent shocks we have described, the Government of India could not, as a responsible Government, call upon the commercial public to face another prolonged period of doubt, suspense, agitation, and difficulties. For it must be clearly and fully recognised that if India joins in the proposed measures, we shall be left dependent, as the sole means of attaining stability in exchange, on the success of those measures, and that if they should fail, India must be content to remain permanently under the silver standard with all its admitted disadvantages.

10. If then there is any reasonable doubt of the success of the suggested measures, we are of opinion that we ought to refuse to co-operate and should maintain our freedom to watch the course of events and take such action from time to time as these may render expedient. A possibility or even a probability that the efforts of France and the United States might meet with success would not be enough to justify us in parting with our freedom or doing anything to further an experiment which, if it fails, will entail consequences to the trade and finances of India which must be described, without any exaggeration, as disastrous.

11. We have given very careful consideration to the question whether France and the United States are likely, with the help of India, to be able to maintain the relative value of gold and silver permanently at the ratio they intend to adopt, and have come to the conclusion that while we admit a possibility of the arrangements proposed resulting in the permanent maintenance of the value of gold and silver at the ratio of $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1, the probability is that they will fail to secure that result; and that it is quite impossible to hold that there is anything approaching a practical certainty of their doing so.

12. One reason for this conclusion is that the arrangement would rest on too narrow a basis. A union consisting of two countries, with a third lending assistance, is a very different thing from the general international union of all or most of the important countries of the world, which was advocated by the Government of India in the despatches of March and June 1892 and of February and September 1886.

13. To afford a hope that a monetary union will succeed in establishing stability in the relative value of gold and silver, it is essential that the nations

adhering to it should be of such number and importance that the metallic currency of the whole body shall be of sufficient extent to allow of the exercise of adequate influence on the value of the two metals. We doubt whether any two or even three nations in the world, unless indeed one of them was Great Britain, could comply with this condition, and we have no hesitation in saying that France and the United States and India certainly could not. The intended ratio assigns to coined silver a much higher value than the present market value of silver; and the market value could only be raised by transferring the demand for coinage from gold to silver. But France, the United States, and India all possess a very large stock of silver coin, and it is doubtful whether there is much room in them for a large increase in the silver coinage except by the displacement in France and the United States of the existing gold coins. It is quite possible that the whole of the gold coinage of both France and United States might disappear and be replaced by silver coins before the market value of silver was raised to the intended ratio with gold. Whether the Governments of those countries will allow a total displacement of their gold by silver coins and the possible export from the country of the entire stock of gold is, as we explain in paragraphs 6 and 17 of this despatch, open to more than doubt: and in so far as either enforces measures to prevent gold from being exported, the power of the union, and possibly also its desire, to effect its object will be diminished.

14. A further doubt occurs to us in the possibility that either France or the United States may, for reasons which will suggest themselves to Your Lordship, be reduced for a time to a paper currency. In that case the agreement would cease to operate for an indefinite period under the stress of circumstances This possibility, though of no importance in the case of a union comprising all the important countries of the world, cannot be disregarded when two or three countries only form the union.

15. Another important source of doubt lies in the consideration that a three-sided agreement is open to much greater risk of termination by the action of one or two of the parties than a many-sided agreement such as the Government of India advocated before 1893. In the latter all the commercial countries would be in the union and all would be in an equal position; there would be no ground for supposing that the operation of the agreement benefited one country at the expense of another. There would therefore be no substantial inducement for withdrawal from the régime adopted by common consent; the union might for practical purposes continue to subsist and to produce its effect even after the dissenting country had withdrawn.

16. On the other hand, in a three-sided agreement such as is now proposed, either France or the United States might any day find some reason for thinking that some other nation was obtaining some advantage at their expense in consequence of the great difference in the standard of value; and thereupon discussions might ensue as to the expediency of terminating the agreement which would have only a less serious effect than its actual termination.

17. Another reason for anticipating that the proposed agreement is not likely to succeed will be found in the considerations mentioned in paragraph 6 regarding the improbability of France and the United States allowing their gold reserve to disappear. We attach great importance to these considerations because we are convinced that they vitally affect the prospects of any agreement being successfully carried out. With the precautions to which we have referred the experiment might be continued, for the risk to the two nations would be very small. But without these precautions, or if they proved to be inadequate for their purpose, i.e., the retention of a sufficient stock of gold, we believe the inducement to abandon the experiment would be very strong, and if even one country adopted that course it would be impossible to prevent the whole agreement breaking down.

18. For these reasons alone, without taking into consideration the objections based on the particular ratio proposed, which we shall separately discuss, we have no hesitation in recommending Your Lordship to refuse to give the undertaking desired by the Governments of France and the United States. We are quite clearly of opinion that the interests of India demand that her mints shall not be opened as part of an arrangement to which two or three countries only are parties, and which does not include Great Britain.

19. We note that the proposals of the Governments of France and the United States are subject to the proviso that they are satisfied that they will receive assistance from other Powers in increasing the demand for silver. We believe that a limited increase of the quantity of silver used as currency will exercise a very trifling influence, if any, in raising the gold price of silver, and that the only assistance from other Powers which can be of any real value would be the addition of other countries to the bimetallic union of France and the United States. If, however, assurances of really substantial co-operation should be secured from other countries, we shall be glad to learn the exact nature of the assurances, and we shall then consider whether the promised co-operation changes the conditions of the problem or adds materially to the chances of success.

20. We believe, however, that whatever inducements are held out to us by other nations, our best policy in monetary matters is to link our system with that of Great Britain. Our commercial connexions with that country are far more important than those with all the rest of the world put together, and more than a sixth part of our expenditure is incurred in that country and measured in its currency. The advantages, which in this respect we gain by following the lead of Great Britain, are not obtained, or not fully obtained, if we become members of a monetary union in which Great Britain takes no part. And, indeed, as we have already explained, we have little hope of an efficient union being formed unless Great Britain is a member. We think it a reasonable position for us to take with regard to the present proposals by France and the United States, that we should say that the Government of India strove long and earnestly to further the formation of an International Union: that when they saw that the opposition of England rendered impossible the attainment of that object within any measurable time, they temporarily abandoned their efforts in that direction and decided, as the least prejudicial of the courses open to them, to throw in their lot with Great Britain and to adopt the gold standard: that, as it appears improbable that an effective union will be formed without the adhesion of Great Britain, and as the measures adopted to introduce a gold standard in India are now approaching final success, they consider that it will be wisest to adhere to the course adopted in 1893 until Great Britain is prepared to join in international bimetallism; and that they therefore wish to adhere to the same monetary standard as Great Britain, with which nation they are most closely linked both in respect of their commercial relations and in all other respects, and to refrain from becoming a party to arrangements with other nations in which Great Britain sees ample reason for refusing to join.

21. So far, the arguments we have offered, in discussing the chances of success or failure of the arrangement, have been independent of consideration of the precise ratio proposed by France and United States. We have objected to the arrangement on grounds which apply to it whatever be the ratio adopted, but we must add that our objections are greatly strengthened by the fact that so high a ratio is proposed as $15\frac{1}{2}$ to 1. It seems to us that the difficulty of making the arrangement effective will be immensely increased by the adoption of a ratio differing so widely from the present market ratio. Indeed, even if it could be maintained successfully, we should object to that ratio in the interests of India, and we recommend that Your Lordship should, on behalf of India, decline to participate in or do anything to encourage the formation of a union based on that ratio.

22. We have said in paragraph 5 that the first result of the proposed arrangement would be an immediate disturbance of trade and industry by the advance of the exchange value of the rupee, which will be very intense if the rise is from between 15 and 16 pence to about 23 pence. There is no doubt that the effect would be to throw some branches of the export trade of India and the industries connected therewith, (the planting industries, for example, in which a large amount of European capital has been embarked), into the most depressed condition for some time at least. The period of depression might be long or comparatively nevertheless, strongly deprecate any steps of the kind being taken without the fullest preliminary consideration on the part of the banking and commercial bodies in this country.

30. To sum up, our reply to Your Lordship's reference is a strong recommendation that you should decline to give the undertaking desired by France and the United States. Our unanimous and decided opinion is that it would be most unwise to reopen the mints as part of the proposed arrangements, especially at a time when we are to all appearance approaching the attainment of stability in exchange by the operation of our own isolated and independent action.

Telegram from Her Majesty's Secretary of State for India to the Government of India, dated the 21st October 1897.

After careful consideration in Council of your letter of 16th September on the subject of currency proposals, I forwarded a copy to the Treasury with a covering letter, dated 13th October, expressing my concurrence in your wishes that the proposals should be declined. Her Majesty's Government have now decided that they cannot agree to the proposal to re-open the Indian mints. As regards the remaining proposals, in view of decision above mentioned, they do not consider it necessary to discuss them at present, but they desire to know how far the views of France and the United States are modified by this decision, and whether they wish to proceed further with the negotiations. A communication in this sense was sent from the Foreign Office to the American and French representatives on the 19th October. A despatch follows, and the correspondence will be published here forthwith.

DISTURBANCES.

No. 1188.—His Excellency the Governor-General in Council is pleased to direct the publication of the subjoined letter from the Adjutant-General in India, forwarding a despatch from Brigadier-General E. R. Elles, C.B., Commanding the Peshawar District, giving details of the engagement near Shabkadr on the 9th August 1897.

The Governor-General in Council agrees with the Commander-in-Chief in approving the promptitude with which measures were taken by Brigadier-General Elles to repel the incursion of the tribesmen in the neighbourhood of Shabkadr, and concurs in the opinion expressed by His Excellency regarding the skilful manner in which the troops were handled by him. His Excellency in Council also desires to express his cordial appreciation of the excellent behaviour of the troops engaged on the occasion.

From MAJOR-GENERAL G. DEC. MORTON, C.B., Adjutant-General in India, to the Secretary to the Government of India, Military Department,—(No. 1335-F., "Disturbances—Peshawar," dated Simla, the 4th October 1897).

I have the honour, by direction of the Commander-in-Chief, to forward a report from Brigadier-General E. R. Elles, C.B., Commanding Peshawar District, giving details of the engagement near Shabkadr on the 9th August 1897. His Excellency recommends that the report may be treated and published as a despatch.

2. In forwarding this report, Sir George White desires me to express his high approbation of the prompt measures taken by Brigadier-General Elles to repel and punish an unprovoked raid within our borders, and of the skilful way in which the troops were handled by him, on his arrival at a critical moment on the scene of action.

3. The Commander-in-Chief considers that the troops engaged behaved in a most creditable manner in the face of the large number of tribesmen which opposed them, more especially as they were called upon to act after 36 hours of continuous heat and hard work. The steadiness of the Infantry and the brilliant charge of the 13th Bengal Lancers are specially brought to notice by Brigadier-General Elles, whose remarks on these points His Excellency cordially endorses.

4. In conclusion, the Commander-in-Chief commends for the favourable consideration of Government, Brigadier-General Elles and all those mentioned by him in his report.

From BRIGADIER-GENERAL E. R. ELLES, C.B., Commanding Peshawar District, to the Deputy Adjutant-General, Punjab Command,—(No. 348-M., dated Peshawar, the 10th August 1897).

I have the honour to make the following report on operations carried out against a rising of Mohmands and other tribes led by the Adda Mullah.

2. Two or three days before the 7th August rumours had reached the Commissioner that the Adda Mullah with his gathering was somewhere in the hills near by, and intended attacking the Hindu village of Shunkargarh under the walls of Fort Shabkadr. I offered to reinforce the Border Police in the Fort with a squadron and two companies, but the Commissioner declined.

3. At about 8-30 P.M. on the evening of the 7th, Saturday, the Commissioner came to me and informed me that Shunkargarh would be attacked and that he wanted troops sent out.

I at once issued orders for the following troops to move without delay:

51st Field Battery	...	...	...	4 Guns.
13th Bengal Lancers	...	...	...	2 Squadrons.
Somersetshire Light Infantry	...	...	...	2 Companies.
20th Punjab Infantry	...	...	...	The Battalion.

Fortunately 100 sapper mules had arrived that morning, so ammunition and pukhal mules could be supplied, but I had been entirely stripped of transport by the Malakand emergency. A number of tum-tums were also taken up to help the British Infantry.

The troops marched between 12 and 1 A.M. on the 8th. The distance to Shabkadr is fully 19 miles, and there was a ferry at 13 miles, the Adizai. It was an intensely hot night and the troops reached the ferry by daylight. Owing to paucity of boats a large number of the cavalry horses were swum across the stream over 200 yards wide and running very strong.

Adizai.—At Adizai, which I visited at daybreak, I heard and saw that Shunkargarh had been burnt, and from a report by the Border Police "Subadar" at Shabkadr it appeared that the enemy had come down at 4 P.M. on the 7th, and after burning the village and attacking the Fort had retired in the morning to the low hills. Cavalry were pushed on to reconnoitre, and at 8·30 Lieutenant-Colonel Woon moved on Shabkadr with the remainder of the Cavalry, 2 guns 51st Field Battery, 2 companies Somersetshire Light Infantry and 2½ companies 20th Punjab Infantry. He reconnoitred the enemy and found them occupying the low hills west of Shabkadr covering the Gandab Pass. The heat was intense the troops done up, and the column was not yet concentrated, so Lieutenant-Colonel Woon withdrew to the Fort.

4. I returned myself to Peshawar by noon on the 8th as it was absolutely necessary for me to do so.

5. On the morning of the 9th, in accordance with my orders, which were to attack the enemy as soon as possible, Lieutenant-Colonel Woon moved out with the force given in margin and found the enemy occupying the position on the undulating plateau at the foot of the hills. He determined to make a frontal attack with his Infantry whilst moving his Cavalry and Artillery to turn the enemy's left flank. He came into contact with the enemy at 7-40 A.M., but his guns, owing to getting into bad ground, only came into action at 8-30.

51st Field Battery	...	4 guns.
13th Bengal Lancers	...	151 Lances.
Somersetshire Light Infantry	...	186 Rifles.
20th Punjab Infantry	...	400 "

The engagement soon became very hot and the enemy made a determined attempt to turn Colonel Woon's left flank and he was forced to commence a retirement to prevent the enemy getting between his force and the Fort. At this period of the engagement I arrived on the scene having left Peshawar early, as I thought it necessary to proceed personally to Shabkadr and inform myself of the situation. I had started four companies of the 30th Punjab Infantry during the night as a re-inforcement, but there was a very heavy storm in the night with torrents of rain which delayed them.

On nearing Shabkadr I heard the guns and pushed on, reaching the scene of action a little before 9. I found that the enemy's line extended for about two miles, the left being on the lower spurs of the main hills. Our small force was outflanked and was too cramped up, being subject to cross-fire. The Artillery were close to the Infantry, and Cavalry with the guns. I brought the guns into action again to support the Infantry and sent the Cavalry well to the right flank, telling Major Atkinson to be prepared to charge. I also saw the necessity of extending the Infantry more to the left.

About this time there were many casualties, including Captain Blacker, the only officer with the guns, so I sent Captain Graham, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General, to take charge of them.

When Major Atkinson, 13th Bengal Lancers, had got into position, I ordered him to charge from under the hills right along the enemy's front and to double up his line. He carried out the order in the most brilliant manner covered by Artillery fire, charging for 1½ miles over nasty stony ground and completely cleared the enemy from the front. The effect of bolder tactics was such that the enemy at once retired into the hills. With the small force at my disposal suffering from the heat and hard work of the last 36 hours I did not think it desirable to follow the enemy into the hills. I formed up the force on the edge of the plateau in an extended line and waited for an hour. It was then reported by the Cavalry that the enemy had completely cleared off to the hills and I ordered the troops to withdraw to the Fort. The Cavalry and part of the Infantry advanced some distance to the front before retiring. Two companies of the 30th Punjab Infantry came up as a reserve under Captain Dobbie just after the Cavalry charge.

6. I would beg to bring to favourable notice the following officers:

Lieutenant-Colonel J. B. Woon, 20th Punjab Infantry.—Owing to the paucity of officers he was mounted in the firing line throughout and greatly exposed.

Captain P. G. Walker, 20th Punjab Infantry.

Captain W. C. Cox, Somersetshire Light Infantry.—Commanding the detachment as Major A. Lumb was almost the first man wounded.

Captain S. W. W. Blacker, Royal Artillery.—Severely wounded.

Major F. G. Atkinson, 13th Bengal Lancers.—Who brilliantly carried out the orders given him. Horse shot.

Lieutenant A. Y. Cheyne, 13th Bengal Lancers.—Horse shot; slightly wounded.

Captain H. W. G. Graham, 5th Lancers, Deputy Assistant Adjutant-General.

Lieutenant G. B. Roney-Dougal, Somersetshire Light Infantry, Orderly Officer.

Surgeon-Captain T. H. J. C. Goodwyn, Army Medical Staff.—I would bring to very special notice the gallantry of this officer, the only medical officer with the force. He was attending to the wounded wherever the fire was hottest, and showed great devotion to his duty. He was himself knocked out of time by a stone or spent bullet, but refused to leave his work.

Subadar Ganda Singh ... ... } 20th Punjab Infantry.—Commanded their Companies in an able and gallant manner.
Jemadar Sant Singh ... ... }

Jemadar Mahomed Sarwar Khan ... ... } 13th Bengal Lancers, who were conspicuous for their conduct.
Duffadar Sewa Singh ... ... }
Duffadar Fazal Hosain Khan ... ... }
Sowar Hira Singh ... ... }

Battery Sergeant-Major Wallman, 51st Field Battery, who fought the guns, when Captain Blacker was wounded, with great coolness.

7. The steadiness of the Infantry under trying circumstances was very noticeable, more especially considering the small number of British officers present.

8. I attach casualty reports on Army Form B. 103. The enemy's numbers have been estimated at 5,000 to 6,000 men, and they appear to have lost heavily,* and some 30 or 40 headmen of note were killed, whose names are known. Our losses were, I regret, heavy for the small force engaged, amounting to 4 officers wounded, 9 non-commissioned officers and men killed and 61 wounded.

* Has been since confirmed from other sources.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the Week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, October 23rd, 1897.

For the first four days of the week under review conditions were very quiet and settled over the Indian region. On each day, from the 17th to 20th, pressure was relatively high and uniform over Northern and North-Western India, while a shallow depression occupied the Bay area. This depression very slowly drifted westward during the period under review, at the same time steadily filling up. It occasioned showery weather first in Burma, subsequently in Bengal and finally in the Peninsula. At the same time the high pressure area in the north-west was accompanied with fine clear weather. On Thursday, the 21st, more disturbed conditions showed themselves in the east of the Indian region. A storm which had apparently crossed the Eastern Peninsula was shown lying over Lower Burma, Tenasserim and the Gulf of Martaban. This storm moved along a curved path towards the head of the Bay during the next two days, gales and heavy rain accompanying it over Burma and the Bay. Over North-Western and Central India and the greater part of the Peninsula during these three days the weather was quiet and fine. During the week temperature has been fairly steadily low for the time of year over North-Western and Central India and fairly steadily high over the Central Provinces and Southern and Eastern India, though the heavyish rain which fell over Lower Burma at the close of the week resulted in the appearance of lower temperatures than usual over Tenasserim and Deltaic Burma.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, October 17th.—A large shallow depression was shown over the Bay and a large area of uniform and relatively high pressure over North-West India. Between these two areas moderate gradients were shown. The winds were irregularly cyclonic around the low pressure area, while northerly breezes and calms were reported from North-Western and Western India. The mean temperature was higher than usual over the Gangetic Plain, Upper Burma and Assam and the Madras Coast districts and generally lower than usual elsewhere. Lower Burma, Bengal, Assam, Ganjam and the south-west of the Peninsula had received fairly general rainfall, while a few light showers had fallen at some central stations.

Monday, October 18th.—There had been no important change in the general distribution of pressure. The depression over the Bay, though somewhat slighter, was still shown as also was the high pressure area in the north-west. The winds were irregularly cyclonic around the depression, while they were more or less variable elsewhere. The mean temperature was low over North West India and Burma and more or less excessive in other places. Rain continued to fall fairly generally over Central and Upper Burma, Bihar and Chota Nagpur, and showers were reported from Lower Bengal, Ganjam and Malabar.

Tuesday, October 19th.—The depression over the Bay was drifting slowly westward and still filling up. There was no other change to record. The winds varied considerably in direction and were light to moderate in force. The mean temperature was low over North-Western and Western India and the Gangetic Plain and was higher than usual elsewhere. Rain had occurred over Bengal, Orissa, North Madras and at a few central stations.

Wednesday, October 20th.—The Bay depression had continued to drift westward and to fill up, and readings, though somewhat higher in the north-west than elsewhere, were becoming uniform generally. Light variable winds were reported from most parts of the country. The distribution of the mean temperature relatively to the normal was generally similar to that reported on the preceding day, except that over North Madras the heat had fallen to below the average. Rain had fallen over Assam, Bengal, the east of the North-West Provinces and of the Central Provinces, North Madras and parts of Burma.

Thursday, October 21st.—The depression which had been traced across the Bay had almost disappeared, and pressure over India was even more uniform than on the preceding day, but a fresh depression had appeared over Lower Burma and the Gulf of Martaban, where the barometer was falling briskly to rapidly. The wind had shifted to north in Lower Burma and was blowing strongly at Diamond Island, but elsewhere light to moderate rather variable winds continued. The mean temperature was relatively low over the whole of North-West India and above the normal average elsewhere. Scattered showers had been received over North-East India, Burma, the Peninsula and the Central Provinces.

Friday, October 22nd.—The storm which has been crossing Lower Burma on the 21st had passed out into the centre of the Bay, so that while a recovery of pressure had occurred in Burma a decrease had taken place over the greater part of India. The winds were again cyclonic around the Bay, blowing with the force of a gale at Diamond Island, but elsewhere there had been no important change. The mean temperature remained low for the time of year over North-West India and had fallen to below the normal over Lower Burma and Tenasserim, but elsewhere the heat was greater than usual. Showers had again been received over Lower Burma, Assam, the west of the Peninsula and the Central Provinces. At Sibsagar and Diamond Island the amounts exceeded two inches.

Saturday, October 23rd.—The storm was moving towards the head of the Bay, where pressure was falling briskly, while at Diamond Island there had been a further brisk recovery. The wind was cyclonic around the Bay and the force was rising in the north, while it was falling in the south. The mean temperature remained low in the north-west and higher than usual elsewhere.

Temperature.—During the present week the variations of the mean temperature from the normal have not agreed with the distribution of rainfall. Most of the rainfall has occurred over the eastern half of India, and here temperature has been generally above the normal, while in the north-west the weather has been dry and fine, and here the heat has been less than usual. This result has been due principally to the night temperatures. Cloudy skies in the east and south have been accompanied with high night temperatures, while the clear skies in the north-west, allowing of the free radiation of heat, have been accompanied with abnormally low minimum temperatures.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week:

Province.	October 1897.							Mean variation of week.
	17th	18th	19th	20th	21st	22nd	23rd

Mean for whole of India	—0·3	—0·3	—0·3	—0·4	+0·9	+0·9	+0·7	+0·2

The means for the whole country show very small variations from the normal on each day of the week, but the provincial variations show that in different parts of the country the heat differed considerably from the average. Thus in the Punjab the mean temperature for the week was 1° in Central India and Gujarat 2° and in Sind and Rajputana 4° lower than the normal, while in Burma it was 1½°, and in Bengal, the Central Provinces and Madras 2° above the normal.

The following are the highest maximum temperatures recorded on each day:

October	17th	98°·5	at Jacobabad.
„	18th	99°·6	„ Hyderabad (S.).
„	19th	98°·5	„ Jacobabad.
„	20th	98°·5	„ „
„	21st	98°·8	„ Tinnevelly.
„	22nd	98°·3	„ „
„	23rd	98°·8	„ „

Up to the middle of the week the hottest area was shown in the extreme north-west, but on the 21st this area was suddenly transferred to the south of the Peninsula.

Rain.—Practically the whole of the rainfall which has occurred throughout India during the week under review has been attributable to the two depressions which have appeared over the Bay area. The first was a large shallow depression which drifted across the Bay between the 17th and the 20th, occasioning rain over Burma, Bengal, the east of the Central Provinces and the Peninsula; the second was a deeper but smaller storm which appeared over Tenasserim and Lower Burma on the 21st, occasioning rain over Burma and Lower Bengal on that and the two following days. As the influence of these two disturbances was mainly confined to the Bay area the rainfall in the greater part of the North-West Provinces, the Punjab, the west of the Peninsula, North Bombay, Rajputana and Central India was either light or altogether nil, and in the Central Provinces and Madras was moderate to light, while over Burma and Bengal which came under the influence of both storms the rainfall was moderately heavy. In Burma the rain fell mainly on the first two and the last days of the week. In Bengal, Assam and the east of the North-West Provinces the rain occurred mainly during the first four days, the last three days being generally fine. In Upper India there was practically no rain. In the west of the Peninsula a few scattered showers occurred in the latter half of the week. In the central parts of the country showers occurred at intervals throughout the week, while in Madras there was daily rainfall in the northern districts and practically none in the centre and south.

The rainfall table at the close of the summary shows that for Tenasserim and Lower Burma the rainfall data owing to the break in the telegraph wires are incomplete. Omitting those two divisions the table shows that fifteen divisions have received actually no rain during the week and that six more have received less than one-tenth of an inch or practically no rain. The area over which the rainfall has been practically or absolutely nil includes the following divisions:—North Oudh, the North-West Provinces (West, West Submontane and Hills), all the Punjab divisions, South-Central Madras, the Konkan, the North Bombay divisions, Rajputana, the south of the East Coast and South Madras. In all the remaining divisions effective rainfall has been received which varies in amount from 4·39 inches in Arakan, 3·34 inches in the North-West Provinces (East), 2·85 inches in Orissa and 2·41 inches in South Bihar, to 0·11 inch in the North-West Provinces (Central), Mysore and Central India (East), 0·16 inch in Coorg, 0·17 inch in South Oudh and 0·19 inch in Khandesh. The average actual rainfall of the week has exceeded the normal average in twenty-two of the rainfall divisions and been less than the normal in thirty-three divisions. The region of excessive rainfall includes Burma, Assam, Bengal (except North and Hills), the east, central and east submontane divisions of the North-West Provinces and South Oudh, the Central Provinces, Ganjam and Hyderabad. Within this area the principal cases of excess are 3·13 inches in Arakan, 1·98 inches in South Bihar, 3·11 inches in the North-West Provinces (East) and 1·79 inches in the east of the Central Provinces. The area of deficient rainfall includes roughly the Punjab, the west of the Peninsula, North Bombay, Rajputana, Central India and Madras, except Ganjam. The principal cases of deficiency are 2·24 inches in Malabar, 2·19 inches in the East Coast (Central) and 2·06 inches in the south of the East Coast. The principal cases of deficiency are thus reported from the southern half of the Peninsula, and are in part due to the delay in the setting in of the autumnal rains in that region.

The three concluding columns of the table show the same information as the first three columns, the present week being the first of a new rainfall period.

Standing crops are thriving generally, except in three talukas of Satara, where they are damaged by insects. Locusts have caused damage in one taluka of Karachi and Upper Sind frontier and three of Hyderabad. Reaping of early crops is in progress generally. Preparations for late crops are going on in Karachi, Shikarpur, and Hyderabad, and sowings in the Deccan, Karnatak, Upper Sind frontier, Panch Mahals, Broach, Surat, Thana, Rajkot, and Baroda. Cotton-picking has commenced in one taluka of Khandesh. The condition of agricultural stock is improving in Ahmednagar, Sholapur, Satara, and Bijapur; healthy elsewhere, except in one taluka of Thana and Ratnagiri. Prices continue high in Karachi and Shikarpur; are falling in Nasik; stationary in Surat. Prices in affected districts are:—Belgaum 12, Bijapur 12, Sholapur 9⅛, Ahmednagar 9¼, Poona 10, Nasik 12 2/20, Satara 9¾, Khandesh 10½, and Dharwar 13⅛ seers per rupee. Total number on relief 148,287.

Bengal.—For week ending 25th October.—There was general and in some parts heavy rain during the week. In Chittagong a cyclone occurred on the 24th, which, besides doing destruction to houses and trees, damaged the standing crops. In all other districts the prospects of the crops are reported to be favourable. The cultivation of the spring crops is going on but in parts of Bihar the sowing has been somewhat retarded by the recent rain. Jute is still being steeped and washed. There was a fall in the price of rice in some districts. In Manbhum where relief works remain open the average price of common rice is 10 seers per rupee against 9 seers last week. The numbers on Government relief were—Khulna 529, Hazaribagh 151, Manbhum 12,490; total 13,170 against 12,487 in the preceding week. The numbers relieved from the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund were—Khulna 3,811, Champaran 179, Bhagalpur 980, Sonthal Parganas 1,259; total 6,229 against 6,267 in the preceding week. The above totals are distributed as follows:—relief workers—men 6,238, women 3,002, children 214; total 9,454. In poor-houses and kitchens—men 495, women 807, children 2,414; total 3,716. North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—For week ending 27th October.—Heavy rain fell in Allahabad, Mirzapur, and Ghazipur; in Jaunpur, Ballia, and Benares over 3 inches and in Azamgarh over one inch were recorded; elsewhere there was little or no rain. Harvesting of autumn crops and spring sowings are in active progress. Locusts appeared in certain districts and caused some damage to the crops. The numbers in receipt of relief on Saturday, the 23rd October, were as follows:—Cawnpore 48, Hamirpur 6,362, Jhansi 5,726, Jalaun 4,095, Family Domains of Maharaja of Benares 871, Lucknow 243; total 17,345; of this total 363 were relieved in poor-houses and 16,982 under other provisions of the Famine Code; these figures include 8,681 persons relieved from the Charitable Relief Fund. Supplies and fodder are sufficient. Prices show a tendency to fall in most districts. The districts of Banda, Allahabad, and Unao have been removed from the list of distressed districts. The numbers relieved from the Indian Famine Charitable Relief Fund represent the operations of the fund so far only as they are carried out through official agency.

Punjab.—For week ending 25th October.—Rainfall nil. Harvesting of autumn and sowing of spring crops are in progress. Condition and prospects of standing crops are generally reported good. Crops sown late in some localities of Shahpur have dried up. The stock of food-grains is sufficient in all districts, except Rohtak and Peshawar, where it is reported average. Locusts have damaged the crops to a certain extent in parts of Rohtak, Shahpur, and Dera Ismail Khan. An insect called tela has also damaged certain crops in parts of Gujranwala. Cattle are generally in good condition. Fodder is reported to be sufficient in all districts, except Gujranwala. Wheat is selling from 10¾ to 13, gram 9 to 11, bulrush-millet 12½ to 18, barley 15 to 17, maize 13¼ to 21, great millet 13, rice 8 to 9 seers per rupee.

Bilaspur received 3 inches; Raipur and Mandla 2 inches; Wardha and Balaghat one inch and a half. The showers have been beneficial to autumn crops, especially to rice in Raipur and Seoni where rain was required, but slight damage has been caused to early winter sowing in one tahsil of Raipur. More rain is required for winter sowings in Hoshangabad, where high lying lands have hardened. Reaping of autumn crops continues and the threshing of coarser kinds of rice has begun in parts of Bhandara and Sambalpur. Prospects continue excellent but a swarm of locusts passed through parts of Damoh, Mandla, Hoshangabad, and Nimar, causing, it is feared, considerable damage within limited areas. Spring sowings are in full swing. Prices show a further tendency to fall in most districts and coarse rice is now selling at 14 seers per rupee in Sambalpur. The Annual Administration Report of the Civil Veterinary Department in India for the official year 1895-96.

RESOLUTION.

The working of the Civil Veterinary Department continues to show an improvement in nearly every branch of the operations. Although there was a slight decrease in the number of Government stallions, owing to casualties, the number of mares covered increased from 13,435 to 14,920. The average number of mares covered per Government stallion employed has been raised from 43·37 to 46·7, marked improvement being shown in the South Punjab, Baluchistan, and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. The detailed statistics confirm the opinion expressed by the Government of India in paragraph 4 of their Resolution on last year's report, that a redistribution of stallions might advantageously be made, some being removed from the Deccan, where they are not fully employed, to relieve the pressure in Northern India. The cost of the feed and keep of Government stallions again shows the results of careful management, which was the more necessary owing to the high price of grain. As remarked by the Inspector-General, economy in this matter can only be secured by the exercise of constant care and supervision by the Superintendents, to whom great credit is due for the results attained.

2. There is an increase in the number of branded mares, and, except in the Deccan, the system is not generally unpopular. The Government of India have considered the question whether the grant of covering certificates for unbranded mares should be abolished in the Punjab; but while the need for such certificates is probably decreasing with improved arrangements for branding, they have decided that the present system should have a further trial under carefully prescribed conditions. Another important question which has come under consideration is the prohibition of the sale of branded mares to Remount Officers. Whilst in the Punjab it was recommended that all restrictions should be removed, the Bombay Government desired to prohibit the purchase of branded mares and fillies, not only by the Remount Department, but also by the Native Cavalry and Police. After a careful consideration of this most difficult question of free trade in horses, the Government of India have decided to adhere for the present to the existing rules, although they hope that a time may eventually come when it will be possible to remove all restrictions.

3. There is a slight increase in the number of remounts and young stock purchased, but in the near future, there may be some decrease, owing to various causes. The suggestion of the Inspector-General that Native Cavalry should be permitted to purchase young stock is receiving separate consideration. The advantages that would spring from a system of regimental horse-runs are undoubted; but it is difficult to devise a scheme that shall at once be compatible with the financial resources of the regiments, and with the self-supporting character of the silladar system. The question of remounts for the Native Cavalry is an important one, and the Government of India desire to impress upon all concerned, the necessity for making the fullest possible use of the existing fairs and horse-shows. Much useful information upon this subject is given in the Report. An attempt made during the year to assist the Native Cavalry in obtaining remounts, by collecting horses at different centres at times other than those at which shows are held, was not quite successful owing to the arrangements being incomplete; but the matter is deserving of further attention, although it is doubtful whether the prices obtained will be sufficiently attractive to induce horse-owners to bring their stock from any long distance to selected centres.

4. In paragraph 2 of the Resolution upon the Report for 1894-95, it was remarked that a noticeable feature of the report was the change of opinion which seemed to be taking place regarding the employment of stallions of the Trotter and Hackney strain. The heavier sires have done good work, and have left behind them a larger and roomier class of mare than previously existed in the country; but though it will doubtless be necessary to continue to import, from time to time, some Hackney stallions of good pedigree in order to keep up the standard, yet at the present moment, what are chiefly needed are horses of higher breeding and quality. The thorough-bred English stallions received during the year were an excellent selection, and Sir John Watson's visit to this country will doubtless assist him in judging the class of animal required. The experiment of introducing thorough-bred Australian stallions has so far proved a success, and merits further trial.

5. Satisfactory progress has been made in mule-breeding. There is a marked improvement in the number of Government donkey stallions employed at stud work, and indeed the demand is greater than can be supplied at present. The number of mares covered rose from 17,262 in the previous year to 19,557, and there was an improvement in the reported results of the coverings. In their Resolution on last year's report, the Government of India drew attention to the fact that the supply of mules is inadequate, particularly of those suited for ordnance purposes. A larger class of stallion is required, and the suggestion that they may be obtained from Spain is deserving of attention.

6. An important administrative change was effected by the transfer of the control of operations in the Derajat Districts from Baluchistan to the Punjab. This has resulted in a more even distribution of work, and it is anticipated that horse-breeding in both tracts will show improved results.

7. The appointment of a peripatetic Judging Committee to attend the various fairs in a province, and so secure uniformity of standard and information as to comparative results, was made for the first time during the year under report. Much excellent work was done in the North-Western Provinces, but the results were not quite so satisfactory in the Punjab, where the scope and object of the measure were misunderstood. The defect will be easily cured; and the best results are anticipated from the system.

8. The work of Dr. Lingard at the Bacteriological Laboratory was principally confined to further investigations of "surra," and much valuable information was collected which bore upon interesting physiological and pathological problems. The important question whether true anthrax exists in India, is still under investigation. The Glanders and Farcy Act was extended to the whole of India, and measures were taken to ensure its better working in the City of Bombay.

9. The Inspector-General has been active in his endeavours to promote the industry of horse-breeding in Native States, with the hearty co-operation of their Chiefs. Much improvement has resulted in the management of the State horse-studs, and the system of breeding from zamindars' mares by the aid of State stallions has been largely extended.

10. Whilst the improvement in the working of that branch of the Department which is under direct Government management has been considerable, the results of the work of District and Local Boards are even still more encouraging. The number of horse and pony stallions employed has increased from 144 to 160, and the number of mares covered from 4,972 to 7,682. There is also an improvement in the figures for mule-breeding. The District Boards have thus done most valuable work in supplementing the Government operations. The Government of India attach much importance to the aid thus afforded, and they hope to see it still further extended.

11. As in the previous year, but little progress has been made in the investigation or prevention of cattle-disease, nor can much be expected in the absence of a sufficient Subordinate Civil Veterinary Establishment. It is hoped that the final settlement of the scheme for this establishment, which is still under the consideration of Local Governments, will not be much longer delayed. Mortality from contagious diseases was excessive among cattle in Burma, and the magnitude of the resulting loss points to the importance of trying to check their ravages. The rules in force are probably sufficient, but it is difficult to enforce them with the present limited agency. Much has been done by the Assistant to the Inspector-General to systematize the work of Veterinary Assistants in the Punjab, and the number of cases treated by them has considerably increased. Useful work was also done in the investigation of cattle-disease and cattle-breeding, and Veterinary Captain Pease has apparently solved the mystery of the well known poisonous nature of jawar under certain conditions.

12. The Veterinary dispensaries established in the different provinces continue to do much good, and the expenditure on their maintenance is money well spent. The record of work done during the year is very satisfactory, and the spread of these institutions is deserving of every encouragement. They are very fitting objects for private liberality; and the Government of India desire to cordially acknowledge the munificence of Sir Dinshaw Maneckjee Petit, and Sardar Bahadur Bacheri Das Vihari Das Dasai.

13. The institutions for Veterinary instruction also shew some progress. It is noticed, however, that the cost of instruction in Bombay is high in comparison with the number of students who qualify; while on the other hand the classes in the Lahore School are too large. The demand for Veterinary Assistants in the districts and elsewhere continues to increase. The proposal to give students a practical knowledge of cattle disease by taking them to visit outbreaks as they occur is worthy of general adoption.

14. The Government of India regard the report as a record of excellent work done by the officers of the Civil Veterinary Department in all directions during the year under review; and they are well satisfied with the Inspector-General's energetic administration of a Department which is charged with many important duties, and the good results of whose labours will year by year become more apparent.

The numerous changes which have taken place in the personnel of the department must necessarily have hampered its working, but the Government of India hope soon to be able to announce the measures which they have formulated with the object of obtaining a permanent staff of officers.

From the Government of Burma, No. 51—I.-T.-2, dated the 3rd June 1897.

From the Secretary for Berar to the Resident, Hyderabad, No. 140, dated the 3rd June 1897.

From the Government of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, No. 519—VII—117-B., dated the 14th June 1897.

From the Government of Madras, No. 873, dated the 19th June 1897.

From the Government of the Panjab, No. 415-S., dated the 24th June 1897.

From the Chief Commissioner, Ajmere-Merwara, No. 696—817, dated the 30th June 1897.

From the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, No. 6205, dated the 13th July 1897.

From the Chief Commissioner, Coorg, No. 981, dated the 22nd July 1897.

From the Government of Bengal, No. 2439-P., dated the 3rd August 1897.

From the Government of Bombay, No. 6341, dated the 25th August 1897.

From the Resident in Mysore, Nos. 2839, 3595, and 4313 dated, respectively, the 7th July, 28th August, and 15th October 1897.

The number of companies and the capital invested in them stood as follows at the end of each of the last three years:

	1894-95.	1895-96.	1896-97.
Number of companies ...	1,204	1,309	1,596
Nominal capital, Rx ...	38,158,518	41,891,447	49,562,286
Paid-up capital, Rx ...	27,668,773	29,387,279	31,156,559

There was thus an increase in the year of 287 in the number of companies, being at the rate of 21·9 per cent, and of Rx 7,670,839 in the nominal capital, being at the rate of 18·3 per cent; but the increase in paid-up capital was at the much lower rate of 6 per cent.

The changes made in the year, which produced the results shewn above, were:

(1) the capital of 157 companies was increased by (nominal) Rx 665,184, (paid-up) Rx 2,337,773;

(2) the capital of 18 companies was reduced by (nominal) Rx 67,705, (paid-up) Rx 151,373;

(3) 101 companies with a nominal and paid-up capital of Rx 1,613,770 and Rx 696,101 respectively, ceased to work; and

(4) 388 new companies with a nominal and paid-up capital of Rx 8,687,130 and Rx 278,981 respectively, were registered during the year.

2. The following table shews the number of companies and the amount of paid-up capital in each of the provinces in the last two years:

Province.	Number of Companies.		Paid-up Capital.		Increase or decrease per cent in capital in 1896-97.	Provincial proportion of paid-up capital to all paid-up capital in 1896-97.

Total ...	1,309	1,596	29,387,279	31,156,559	+ 6	100

The total net increase in paid-up capital was Rx 1,769,280: in Bombay Rx 867,881, in Bengal Rx 786,128, and in Madras Rx 8,160. Bombay and Bengal between them have about 85 per cent of the whole paid-up capital.

3. The number of companies registered in Bengal is nearly half the whole number registered throughout India; but the average of capital is much higher in Bombay than in any other province, and in this respect Bengal occupies a relatively low place as will be seen from the subjoined figures of the average capital of each company:

	1895-96. Rx.	1896-97. Rx.
Bombay	39,550	37,871
Central Provinces	22,197	25,501
North-Western Provinces and Oudh ...	17,541	18,431
Bengal ...	23,470	18,305
Panjab ...	20,106	17,736
Burma ...	10,764	11,510
Madras ...	9,406	7,974

4. As indicated in the resolution reviewing the reports for 1895- reason why the average capital in Bengal is so small is to be found in the sudden and extraordinary development of so-called "provident" Companies. As many as 387 such companies have been registered since 1893 with an aggregate paid-up capital of only Rx 8,778, giving an average of under Rx 23 to each company and as many as 266 have no paid-up capital at all. In 1895-96 there was a pause in the launching of such companies, only 28 having been registered in that year, but last year the fever of promotion was stronger, as many as 208 having been registered. The contagion has now extended to Madras and Bombay where also numbers of such companies were registered last year.

5. In the resolution reviewing the reports for 1895-96 the Government of India suggested that compliance with all the requirements of the law should be strictly enforced in the case of such companies, and it appears from the letter from the Government of Bengal cited in the preamble that the matter is now under the consideration of the local Government on special reports received from the Registrar of joint-stock companies. The Governor-General in Council will await the communication promised by the Government of Bengal and trusts that it will not be long deferred. His Excellency in Council is of opinion that the attention of the Governments of Bombay and Madras may also with advantage be directed to the question.

6. The following table shews the distribution of the aggregate capital in the principal classes of joint stock enterprise:

(i) There is a striking contrast between the nominal and the paid-up capital of insurance companies, and their increase in the year is equally striking. Most of these are the so-called provident or mutual aid societies to which reference has already been made.

(ii) Over 47 per cent of the paid-up capital is invested in mills and presses, chiefly for working or pressing cotton, jute, wool, and silk. The greater number of these are registered in Bombay, that Presidency representing under this head a paid-up capital of Rx 9,537,958, being nearly two-thirds of the whole, most of it invested in cotton mills and presses. Rx 3,528,721 represent the paid-up capital invested in mills and presses registered in Bengal, a large number of them being jute mills and presses.

In this connection an error of classification is observed in some of the local returns in which printing presses have been included under "mills and presses." Presses here mean screws and presses for the baling of cotton, jute, or other material. Printing presses should be classed under trading companies.

(iii) The paid-up capital invested in banking, loan, and insurance companies amounts to Rx 4,270,759, of which Rx 2,499,166 are in Bengal and Rx 1,028,642 in Madras.

(iv) Trading companies have a paid-up capital of Rx 4,539,406 of which Rx 1,051,685 are invested in coasting and river steamer companies, and Rx 1,048,271 in railways and tramways. The bulk of the railway and tramway capital is invested as follows :

	Rx.
Bombay Tramways	309,800
Darjeeling-Himalayan Railway	175,000
Tarkessar Railway	175,000
Rangoon Steam Tramway	60,000
Powayan Steam Tramway	29,450
Deogarh Railway	27,500
Bengal Provincial Railway	84,590
Tezpur-Balipara Tramway	40,000
Ahmadabad-Prantej Railway	102,300
Bengal District Road Tramways	43,300

The last two companies in the list are additions made in the year, and others have since been added, but the figures are still quite trifling.

(v) In tea, coffee, and other plantations, Rx 3,740,839 of paid-up capital are invested, of which Rx 3,497,442 are held in Bengal, most of the tea companies owning gardens in Northern and Eastern India being registered in Calcutta.

(vi) Of the Rx 1,857,162 invested in mining and quarrying companies, Rx 1,648,147 are in companies registered in Bengal, of which Rx 983,620 are in coal-mining companies, and about Rx 623,000 in gold-mining companies.

7. There was a substantial expansion in the paid-up capital applied to the manufacture of cotton and jute and to navigation and railways. In the capital applied to tea-planting there was a smaller increase, but this is perhaps explained by the activity displayed during the last year in the formation of companies in England for the purchase of Indian tea estates. In coffee there has been a decline, as also in mining; but in most other directions there has been an augmentation of capital.

8. The following table shews, so far as reported, the total number of joint stock companies at work in India with their nominal and paid-up capital at the end of each of the last thirteen years :

Year.	Companies at work.	Nominal capital.	Paid-up capital.	Increase or decrease of paid-up capital.

1896-97	1,506	49,562,286	31,156,559	+ 1,769,280 = 6 „

9. The statistics of companies limited by guarantee, so far as they go, shew that there were 70 such companies at the close of 1895-96, and that, with the addition of 69 companies registered in 1896-97 and the deduction of 5 companies which ceased to work during the year, there were 134 such companies at the close of the year. A large proportion of these companies were registered in Bengal, their nature being similar to those of the provident societies limited by shares to which reference has been made in preceding paragraphs.

FOREIGN DEPARTMENT.

STATISTICS OF THE TRADE OF INDIA WITH TURKISTAN AND CHANG THANG FOR THE YEAR ENDING THE 31st MARCH 1897.

No. 185, dated Leh, the 16th July 1897.

From—CAPTAIN W. H. M. STUART, Assistant to the Resident in Kashmir,

To—COLONEL SIR A. C. TALBOT, K.C.I.E., Resident in Kashmir, Gulmarg.

I have the honour to forward herewith, for transmission to the Government of India, the statistics of the trade of India with Chinese and Russian Turkistan and Tibet, for the year ending 31st March 1897.

The report has been prepared as expeditiously as was possible after the arrival of the office in Leh on June 30th.

Note.

2. The total value of trade, which passed through Leh during the year under report amounts to R59,30,142-8-6 against R62,16,177-12-0 in the previous year. There appear to be two causes for the decrease in the trade of the year under report—

(1) The Leh road is stated to be open for traffic in ordinary years up to the 15th December. In 1896, however, the passes owing to an early fall of snow were closed in October.

On the Yarkand road more than one hundred pony loads of charas and pasham, etc., were thus detained and could not reach Leh in time for transmission.

(2) The charas crop this year was small in Yarkand.

The subjoined table gives the figures for the past 10 years :—

3. The schedule below gives the value and direction of the trade for the past two years between India, Chinese Turkistan and Tibet :—

YEAR	India.			Chinese Turkistan.			Tibet.			Total.
Import from 1895-96	18,17,870	0	0	12,93,246	2	0	2,09,635	8	0	33,20,751	10	0
Import from 1896-97	17,69,143	10	0	11,72,697	6	0	1,58,257	0	0	31,00,098	0	0

Export to 1896-97	12,84,362	12	6	14,35,667	2	0	1,10,014	10	0	28,30,044	8	0

Exports and imports.

During the year under report the total value of the imports amounted to R31,00,098 as against R33,20,751-10-0, and the exports to R28,30,044-8 as against R28,95,426-2-0 in the previous year.

4. Piece goods.—The following points may be noted.

There was an advance of R40,562-8 in the value of the trade in European manufactured cotton as compared with last year.

The total exports to Turkistan of English goods amounted R7,67,562-8 and that of Indian Manufactured Cotton to R37,890.

The amount of English Manufactured goods is nearly double that of five years ago. The following figures will show the steady increase under this head :—

1888-89	4,39,760	0	0
1889-90	3,19,840	0	0
1890-91	3,01,820	0	0
1893-94	5,29,920	0	0
1894-95	6,73,440	0	0
1895-96	7,27,000	0	0
1896-97	7,67,562	8	0

5. Drugs and Medicines.—The actual number of maunds of charas imported was 4,663-22 seers as against 5,106 maunds, 5 seers and 12 chataks.

There are two cases of decrease this year. Firstly, the early closing of the passes owing to which about 100 pony-loads were detained on the road ; and secondly, the decrease in the crops in Yarkand. In this connection attention is invited to the 7th paragraph of Mr. Macartney's note No. 2, dated 1st October 1896.

The import figures of charas for the last five years in rupees are as follows :—

	R	a.	p.
1893-94	2,18,886	0	0
1894-95	2,49,105	0	0
1896-97	3,03,130	12	0

6. Dyeing Material.—The trade in Indigo is fluctuating and depends on prices obtaining in Yarkand as mentioned in last year's report, from which it will also be seen that a fall was anticipated in this year's import.

The figures for the past four years are as follows :—

	R
1893-94	41,850
1894-95	44,280
1895-96	88,275
1896-97	27,160

Under the circumstances the figures for this last year do not, I think, point to any alteration in the general conditions of the trade.

7. Hides and skins.—The value of the trade in skins has also been decreased by R8,702-8 from that of the previous year, and I have no data from which the causes for this decrease could be estimated with any accuracy. It seems reasonable to surmise, however, that considering their facilities the Russian traders will not allow the trade in cheap furs to pass permanently from their hands when they realize the position.

The past four years' figures are quoted below :—

1895-96	70,582	8	0
1896-97	61,980	0	0

8. Leather.—A decrease of R. 18,000 is shown in the value of manufactured leather this year.

The following are the tables for the last two years :—

	R
1895-96	80,850

This may be owing to Russian competition, or to the ordinary trade fluctuations. It will be noted that the figures for 1894-95 amounted to R. 64,170, a slight excess only on those of the present year.

9. Carpets and Namdahs.—The trade under the head of Namdahs shows a further slight decrease as compared with last year's report, though a considerable number of carpets were brought down by the Hindu traders, notwithstanding the anticipated decrease in the trade. Taking both commodities together, there is a small increase in the figures for the present year.

The following are the figures for the past five years :—

	Carpets.	Namdahs.
1892-93	4,815	24,688
1893-94	3,075	20,505
1894-95	5,070	29,748
1895-96	4,365	27,944
1896-97	9,420	23,550

10. Precious Metals.—The amount of gold imported in the year under report has increased slightly.

The figures under the above headings for the past five years are as follows :—

	Gold.	Silver.
1892-93	2,49,114	2,96,420
1893-94	2,66,686	2,92,158
1894-95	3,56,702	6,78,331
1895-96	3,25,925	6,17,524
1896-97	3,48,339	5,82,347

11. Silk, raw.—Silk, raw, to the value of R34,050 was imported during the year, as against R14,332-8-0 worth imported in the previous year.

12. Spices.—The trade under this head shows a very satisfactory increase as compared with last year.

The figures for the last five years are as follows :—

	R
1892-93	28,787
1893-94	26,005
1894-95	35,805
1895-96	30,225
1896-97	58,590

13. Precious stones, Turquoises and Coral.—Dealings under the head of turquoises have slightly increased on those of the previous year, while the trade in imported Coral shows a decrease of R61,640 as compared with last year's, owing possibly to the large previous imports having created a temporary glut in the market.

The figures for the last ten years are attached :—

	R
1887-88	6,802
1888-89	11,232
1889-90	35,170
1890-91	45,532
1891-92	56,286
1892-93	56,288
1893-94	1,47,030
1894-95	2,43,262
1895-96	2,48,045
1896-97	1,86,405

14. Indian tea.—The trade in Indian tea imported this year has increased by R680, over that shown in the last report. The demand seems to be increasing with satisfactory steadiness.

The figures for the last ten years are as subjoined :—

	R
1887-88	1,04,600
1888-89	9,160
1889-90	51,762
1890-91	32,947
1891-92	37,220
1892-93	39,060
1893-94	45,700
1894-95	57,280
1895-96	72,345
1896-97	73,025

15. China tea.—This is green leaf tea imported vid Bombay or Calcutta.

The value of the trade in the tea so imported during this year has slightl decreased, being R9,270, as against R9,870 in the year 1895-96.

The figures are as follows :—

	R
1887-88	Nil
1888-89	609
1889-90	900
1890-91	1,840
1891-92	1,540
1892-93	4,865
1893-94	8,890
1894-95	7 070
1895-96	9,870
1896-97	9,270

16. Lhassa brick tea.—The trade under this head shows a slight decrease as compared with last year. The Lupchak Mission did not bring down this tea this year.

The figures for the last ten years are as follows :—

1887-88	89,280
1888-89	1,02,600
1889-90	62,580
1890-91	24,640
1891-92	46,980
1892-93	39,285
1893-94	18,447
1894-95	45,448
1895-96	22,320
1896-97	21,881

17. Wool, Unmanufactured.—The trade under this head in the year under report shows a decrease of R3,230-8 on that of the previous year.

The trade in Manufactured Woollen goods has increased.

The value of the above goods imported during the year under report was R3,438-8, as against R2,932-8 in the preceding year.

18. Miscellaneous.—The trade under this head shows a considerable decrease this year.

The total amount of the Miscellaneous imports is R37,068 against R72,230.

This may be in a great measure due to the early close of the passes above referred to.

General Remarks.—The very unusual snowfall of last winter has already done much damage to roads and bridges in Ladakh, and more is anticipated. A great deal of unnecessary expenditure in this way might be avoided if roads were re-aligned and bridges built on more permanent principles than seem to obtain at present, and the result would affect the trade indirectly.

The Tolumbute road is not expected by the local authorities to be completed this year, but all possible steps will be taken to expedite matters and a further communication made when it has been inspected.

The roads last year reported on are working well, but require more constant supervision.

The road has been much improved from Leh to Chanlang in proof of which it may be stated that the ponymen of Purik, i.e., Kargil and Dras District, have willingly agreed to send their ponies direct to Sasser, which I am told they have never done before.

It has been reported that all Andijani Merchants and pony carriers have been forbidden by the Russians to use the Ladakh trade route. This will no doubt affect next year's trade statistics if true.

I would request that, when printed, two copies of this report may as usual be sent for record in this office.

Ladakh Trade Return for the year ending 31st March 1897.

(Sd.) W. STEWART, Captain, Assistant Resident in Kashmir for Leh, Ladakh.

No. 69, dated Yarkand, the 16th April 1897.

From—The Special Assistant to the Resident in Kashmir for Chinese Affairs,

To—The Resident in Kashmir.

Conformably to instructions contained in your office endorsement No. 4490, dated the 21st September last, I now have the honour to submit the enclosed report on the results of the Indo-Chinese Turkistan Trade for year ending on the 31st March 1897.

2. The samples of foreign piece-goods referred to in the report will be despatched separately to your address.

Report on the Indo-Chinese Turkistan Trade for the year ending 31st March 1897.

General Remarks.

A perusal of the Trade Report for 1895-96 prepared by the Assistant to the Resident in Kashmir for Leh, will show that there has been, during the last five years, a steady increase in the value of the trade between India and Chinese Turkistan. For the period under report the general condition of this trade has been, so far as the quantity of goods imported from India is concerned, quite as satisfactory as that of any preceding year. There is even reason to believe that imports have considerably increased. The merchants engaged in trade with Chinese Turkistan usually consist of 20 Muhammadans and 16 Hindus. During the last autumn, the number of the latter has almost doubled.

Increase of Import trade.

2. This increase of trade is, it need scarcely be said, mainly due to the fostering care of the Kashmir Residency and of successive Joint Commissioners of Ladakh. The good results of their work are too well known to need any further comments.

Causes of this increase.

2. On their side, the Chinese authorities in Kashgaria and in particular the former and the present District Magistrate of Yarkand deserve some credit for the generally friendly attitude they have adopted to our merchants. It would be extravagant to say that they have given us any direct and active assistance. But it is only fair to admit they have been ready to protect the interests of British subjects to the same extent as those of their own, meting out to both alike whatever slothful justice is to be had in the Chinese Tribunals. It is especially pleasing to be able to testify to the kindly attitude which Lew Ta-lao-yieh, the present District Magistrate, has assumed towards Hindu merchants, who, in this country, stand in greater need of protection than their Muhammadan neighbours.

4. Another cause to which the recent stimulus in our trade may be traced lies in the fact of the abolition of duty in Chinese territory on Indian goods.

5. If the supply of goods from India was specially great during the last trading season, the demand for them in the Chinese Turkistan markets has not, it appears, proportionately increased. Merchants complain of the lowness of prices.

Demand for Indian goods has not increased proportionately with supply.

6. The taxation of hemp (charas) in India seems, to a certain extent, to have been the cause of this. Most traders, especially amongst the Hindus, take that drug from native dealers in exchange for Indian goods. In consequence of the present instability of the charas market, they have generally preferred payment in specie to bartering in kind, a mode which is neither profitable to them nor convenient to dealers. The important role which charas will ever play in our Central Asian trade should not be ignored. Profits on goods from India may be said to be yearly decreasing; even on those solely supplied from India not excepted. Merchants therefore count on the exportation of charas to make their entire venture remunerative. Once they lose this hope, they will cease to import to the same large extent as they have hitherto done.

How the fluctuations of the charas market in the Punjab may influence imports from India.

7. The severe competition which Indian goods have had to sustain with those from Russia is another cause of the fall in prices. Any one walking through the bazaars in the towns of Kashgaria cannot fail to be struck with the quantity and variety of foreign cotton prints (chintz) with which every booth for the sale of piece-goods is stocked. These prints form the bulk of the imports to Chinese Turkistan from Europe; and it is principally in the development of this branch of trade that the Russians are exerting all their powers. To encourage their export trade, for several years past a bounty has been given on all chintz of Russian manufacture for sale in the Chinese Turkistan markets. When a merchant starts from Marghillan for Kashgar his goods are sealed by the customs officer in that town from whom he receives a certificate. On arrival at Kashgar, the bales are opened in the presence of a customs officer, attached to the Russian Consulate, whose duty it is to examine whether the bales had during transit been tampered with. If these are intact, he endorses the certificate, received by the merchant at Marghillan; and this document henceforth becomes a negotiable instrument, for the payment of which some arrangements would appear to have been made with the bank of Kokand.

Russian competition.

Bounty system.

8. The bounty varies according to the description of the piece-goods.

On calico	Roubles	2-80	per pood (36lb)
On chintz	„	3-20	„ „
On Turkey red or Adrianople coloured chintz	„	4-20	„ „

9. This bounty, it is calculated, is more than sufficient to cover the cost of transport from Moscow or Nijni Novgorod to any city in Kashgaria; and accordingly Russian goods can be sold as cheaply in Chinese Turkistan as in the towns of their manufacture.

10. The bounty system is a combination of the Russian Government which is as skilful as it is economical. Since its establishment, duty on foreign imported cotton has apparently been increased proportionally to the amount of the bounty. This has had the effect of encouraging the growth of the native cotton which in recent years has been to such an extent in Russian Turkistan that the Government has had to make regulations for its restriction. Another important result of the bounty system, and one which chiefly concerns us, is the stimulus which it has given to Russian Foreign cotton trade.

Growth of cotton in Russian Turkistan.

11. If Russian piece-goods are cheap and plentiful in Kashgar, it is not solely due to the above cause. The intimate relation which exists between the manufacturers and the merchants has also contributed to this result. It is not usual for traders in Kashgar to employ middlemen in the purchase of goods. They travel themselves to Moscow; and having direct dealings with the manufacturers, avoid all expenses of brokerage, a course which moreover has the advantage of making known to the manufacturers the exact requirements of native markets.

The direct dealings of Russian merchants with manufacturers.

12. Now, if we examine the conditions under which piece-goods are brought from India, we shall find them much less favourable.

Unfavourable conditions under which goods from India are imported.

13. Despite the road improvements which have been, and are still being made, the difficulties of transport will always be greater on the Indian than on the Russian side; and this disadvantage under which we now labour will, it is expected, be even increased in the near future, when the projected Railway between Samarkand and Kokand shall have been constructed. Indian merchants moreover weaken their position by dealing through brokers who themselves do no direct business with English manufacturers. Even in Bombay, therefore, they do not obtain goods as cheaply as they might, if consignments were directly despatched to them from the trading centres in England.

14. In spite of these undoubted disadvantages, the Indian trade has been increasing. This fact needs some explanation. The force of Russian commerce lies in the export of cotton prints; and in this commodity our capacity for competition has been on the wane; but our merchants still command the markets in other articles such as calico (khasa), muslin, broad cloth, nainun and sainun gauze, Benares brocade, turbans, tea, etc., in which there is little or no competition. The import of these commodities has been gradually increasing of late years. It is regrettable however that most of them only form, as it were, articles of luxury; and accordingly, demand for them is not susceptible of increase to the same extent as Russian cotton prints which are worn by the poor as well as the rich.

Increase of imports, in which Indian goods do not compete with Russian.

15. From the foregoing, it will be seen that from the point of view of supply the last year's trade has been a remarkably successful one; but that from the point of view of demand, it could not but have fallen far short of the expectations of merchants.

16. Such a condition cannot naturally last without an eventual diminution of import.

The manner in which Government can most effectively assist trade.

17. To maintain the position we have gained, the Government can do much, but the British manufacturers more. The efforts of the former should, it may humbly be submitted, be unceasingly directed to increasing the facilities for transport; and in doing this, they should, when roads are constructed in the Gilgit District and in Chitral, give due importance to the advantages which improved communication would offer to our Central Asian Trade. But as a matter of immediate concern, it may be suggested that the Government of India should give their attention to the effect of taxation on charas, as a factor on which the exportation of British goods in Chinese Turkistan will always in a large measure depend.

Suggestions for manufacturers.

18. As regards the manufacturers, it is their interest to see that goods, suitable to the Turkistan markets, are accessible to traders. The latter, it has already been said, have so far unfortunately not had any direct dealings with firms in England; but it may serve some useful purpose to give the names of the principal native brokers in Bombay through whom the traders usually make their purchases :—

1. Haji Ahmad Jan and Mahmud, Mahalla Mistari, Bombay.
2. Kaka Singh Jagan Nath, Punjabi-Marwar Bazar, Bombay.
3. Narain Das Chella Ram, Sipi Bazar, Bombay.
4. Murli Dhar Mohan Lal, Marwar Bazar, Bombay.

Samples of Foreign Piece-goods.

19. In order that the Manchester Chamber of Commerce may the better be acquainted with the class of wares in requisition in Turkistan, some samples of the principal piece-goods of Russian, French, and German production are forwarded with this report, together with a list containing some particulars regarding prices, etc.

REMARKS ON IMPORTS AND EXPORTS.

1. Cotton, manufactured. (a) European.—

Calico or Khasa.—This forms the chief import from India. The quantity which arrived during the last trading season (1895-96) would appear to have been slightly less than during the preceding. It now sells in Yarkand barely above cost price (including carriage). Some traders made profits in 1895-96 by selling the calico at cost price or slightly above it, in exchange for hemp on which considerable gain was realized in India.

In calico, there is at present no real competition. Russian traders have however begun importing it. See Pattern No. 14.

Muslin.—It came in excessively large quantities during 1895-96; and more arrived in 1896-97, when the last year's supply had not been exhausted. The present prices entail a loss of about 5 per cent.

Nainu and Sainu Muslin.—The supply of these articles is also excessive and now sells at a loss of 6 per cent.

Handkerchiefs.—A profit of 5 or 6 per cent. is now realized on this commodity. The handkerchiefs imported from India are mostly oblong, a shape which is not much liked in Turkistan. The people prefer them square.

Doti.—The Doti is muslin, with a coloured border, commonly worn in India loosely round the person. This article is now selling with a profit of 5 or 6 per cent.

Prints (chintz).—These were largely imported last autumn; and are being sold at a loss of about 6 per cent. partly on account of their plentifulness and partly on account of Russian competition.

In 1894-95 the profits were 25 per cent.; in 1895-96 none.

It is expected that the quantity to be imported during the next season will be very small.

(b) Indian.—Lungis.—These are used as turbans in India; but the people of Turkistan prefer them as waistbands. The last season's import seems to have been plentiful. Lungis sell slowly; but 10 per cent. profit is being realized on them.

2. Drugs and Medicines.—Native medicines are imported from India in small quantities and can scarcely be regarded as regular articles of trade. The same may be said with reference to opium.

Chinese Opium.—Although the Chinese in this country largely use this drug, yet they prefer that grown in their own country, Ili, Ushturfan, etc., which can be obtained much cheaper than the Indian opium.

Hemp, charas.—Hemp forms the chief export to India. Owing to the fluctuations in the Punjab market, traders have not hitherto (15th April) invested in this drug to the same extent as they had done at a corresponding period in 1896. So far they have only bought about 900 maunds. Their action between now and the time of the departure caravans (July) will largely depend upon the demand for hemp in India. The actual local price of this drug is 14 annas per Indian seer, whilst last year's average price was R1-2-0.

The growth of hemp in Chinese Turkistan is, officially speaking, prohibited.

3. Dyeing materials.—Indigo.—These consist of imported indigo and magenta crystals.

The former is considered a fairly reliable article of trade. Ten to 12 per cent. profit is realized on present prices. But the demand is somewhat limited. The usual yearly quantity required is 200 to 250 maunds.

Magenta Crystals.—The demand for Magenta Crystals is much less than that for Indigo. For the last seven years this dye has also been imported from Russia, and the Russian produce is preferred, although the English is cheaper.

4. Otter Skins.—Otter Skins are imported from Bengal and are much appreciated in the trimming of hats. The present market is specially good, 25—30 per cent. profits being realized. The demand is strictly limited.

5. Leather.—This consists of tanned and dyed goat skins from the Punjab. The market for this article was good last year. The present prices afford a profit of about 25 per cent.

6. Carpets and felts.—These are exported, especially the latter, for the Ladak and Kashmir markets.

The prices of these articles in Turkistan are on the increase owing to the large export of Khotan Wool to Russia. Merchants do not now expect to make large profits on the sale of felts in Kashmir. They take this article, partly because it is useful in the packing of goods and the loading of ponies, and partly because its export offers as great a security for the transfer of capital to Kashmir as would offer the export of any other article.

7. Precious metals.—The present ratio between gold and silver is 1 to 25½. The quantity of these metals to be conveyed to India this year will largely depend upon the exportation of hemp. If the latter is small, then merchants will be forced to convey a proportionately larger amount of their capital in the form of gold and silver. The exportation of silver yambus will, it is thought, entail losses in India, and no profit is expected on the exportation of gold. Considerable difficulty is experienced in the conveyance of capital to India—so much so that many merchants have taken to remitting paper roubles to Bombay.

Exchange.—A paper rouble at Kashgar is now worth Tael 0·56, whilst the value of the rupee approximates to Tael 0·35.

8. Silk.—(a) Raw.—Some 10 pony loads of raw silk from Khotan was exported to India last autumn, but the venture does not appear to have been a profitable one. The price of a chuksa, 340 tolas, of raw silk at Khotan is about R46.

(b) Manufactured.—

Brocades of Benares.—The demand for Benares Brocades is strictly limited. Mohamedan merchants, who give longer credit than the Hindus, are making a profit of about 5 per cent. on this commodity; but that made by the Hindus is less. The real Benares Brocade is preferred to the "imitation."

Brocades of Surat.—The last remark also applies to the Brocades of Surat. On the imitation scarcely any profit is being realised, whilst the "real" is sold at a gain of 25 per cent.

Velvets.—A fair quantity of French and German velvet is yearly imported vid India. As the Bazaar is somewhat overstocked, only small profits are realized; but prices are improving. It is calculated that about 70 per cent. of this article is imported vid India from Germany and France. The colours liked are dark blue, green and scarlet.

Atlas Satin.—A quantity of Austrian Atlas satin was imported last year. See pattern No. 93. The English satin is too good and too expensive for the Chinese Turkistan markets.

European Brocades.—The "real" European Brocade is not selling well; the losses of the Hindu traders being estimated at about 5 per cent.

The "imitaton" which chiefly comes from France is in demand; but only a small quantity was imported owing, to the scarcity last year of this article in India.

9. Spices.—The present demand for black pepper, long pepper, cloves, cinnamon and "Sana" is exceptionally great, 25 per cent. profit being now realized on these spices.

10. Corals.—The quantity of coral imported in the last trading season was somewhat less than that during the preceding. In January last, the profits amounted to about 30 per cent.; at present they have decreased to 20 per cent. This decrease is due to the recent order of the Russian Government to prohibit, during the prevalence of the Bubonic Plague, all Indian goods from entering Russian territory. Coral has always found a ready market both in this country and in Ferghana.

11. Sugar.—The sugar appreciated in this country is chiefly made at Hushiarpur and appears to be a mixture of English and native preparations. Although this commodity has to compete against Russian sugar, the market for it is still extremely good, a profit of about 35 per cent. being at present realized in Yarkand.

12. Wool.—(a) Unmanufactured.—Pashm—Pashm is likely to be exported in unusually large quantities this summer. This commodity forms a fairly profitable and reliable medium for transferring capital to Kashmir. The quantity, however, will largely depend upon the export of hemp, gold, silver, etc., which can serve a similar purpose.

(b). Manufactured.—Banat.—The manufactured woollen goods imported from India are chiefly in the form of Board cloth (Banat).

Through the medium of this article, we foster German and French trade more than our own. It is calculated that of the quantity imported last autumn, at least 70 per cent. was of foreign manufacture. The present Yarkand prices offer a profit of about 15 per cent.

Flannel.—On German flannel, which is not in general demand, the profits amount to about 10 per cent.

ON THE

TRADE, COMMERCE, AND AGRICULTURE

ON

(PERSIA.)

GENERAL REVIEW OF TRADE.

It is impossible to obtain statistical information regarding trade for the whole of Khorassan. Therefore the tables that are appended to this report are confined to imports and exports of the Meshed district only.

The tabular statement at the end of the returns gives totals of the foreign trade of Meshed for the past five years.

It will be observed that the trade of 1893-94 declined by about fifty thousand pounds as compared to the year 1892-93.

The year 1894-95, however, showed an enormous increase, amounting to £96,769 over that of 1893-94.

During that year, though exports to all foreign countries slightly decreased (aggregating about £5,200) an increase of over a hundred thousand pounds took place in the imports. This was accounted for by a decrease of about £13,200 in the Russian imports and an increase of about £113,600 in the British imports from India alone (excluding the value of the articles of English manufacture imported vid Trebizond, Tabriz and Teheran). This extraordinary increase was attributable to the proposed establishment of a customs cordon along the Russian frontier in Central Asia, in the anticipation of which Indian traders imported the largest possible quantities in order to push their goods across the frontier before the expected exclusion of certain articles of British and Indian manufacture from the Bokharan market took place, and prohibitive dues were imposed on the others.

The new tariff was introduced at the beginning of the year 1895, and consequently the British imports from India decreased by about £112,900 during 1895-96; but an increase having taken place in the Russian imports and a general rise in all the exports, the net decrease in the total trade of the year amounted to about £20,500 only.

The foreign trade of Meshed, however, showed a considerable falling off during the year 1896-97. Notwithstanding an improvement of about £12,200 in the exports, the total of the whole trade was £101,800, or about 24 per cent. less than that of the previous year, as the imports declined by over £114,000. This serious falling off was due to various causes:—

(I) The first and principal of these was the introduction by the Russian Government, on their Trâns-Caspian frontier, of the new customs regulations by which all European and Anglo-Indian goods are excluded from the Central Asian markets with the exception of tea, indigo, muslin, spices, Indian shoes, precious stones and coral on which heavy dues are levied.

(II) The second, also very important, was the diversion of the Indian trade in articles admitted into Russian territory from the Bandar Abbas-Meshed route to that vid Batoum, Baku and Krasnovodsk.

These two causes affected the trade permanently.

Among those which operated temporarily may be mentioned.

(III) The curtailment of the pilgrim traffic to Meshed during the year;

(IV) The closing of the frontiers of Persia against all imports from India and Afghanistan; and (V) the scarcity of food-stuffs.

These require some explanation.

(III) In the early part of the year 1896-97 (1st May 1896) Nasir-ud-Din Shah, Shah of Persia, was assassinated in his capital at Teheran. This occurrence caused great trepidation throughout Persia and gave rise to the wildest possible rumours. Notwithstanding the facts that the day after the Shah's death his heir-apparent, Muzaffar-ud-Din, was formally enthroned at Tabriz; that his accession was proclaimed throughout the country almost immediately; that all his brothers accepted him as Shah and all the Chiefs and nobles offered their allegiance to him; that the most effective arrangements were made by the then Sadr-i-Azam (Prime Minister) for the preservation of order in the country; and that no trouble was apprehended anywhere, the public were not re-assured of the permanence of peace. The new Shah did not arrive at the capital for some little time, and though no disorder took place with the exception of a few highway robberies in two or three districts, yet during his absence from the capital and for some considerable time after his arrival there the rumours that had gained currency remained afloat. Thus large numbers of people who would otherwise have come on pilgrimage to Meshed alone or with their families and children, being under the impression that the roads were unsafe did not venture to leave their homes. They were about to be re-assured in the latter part of the year when the Sadr-i-Azam was suddenly dismissed. Such an occurrence would have caused no particular excitement in any European country, but in Persia it gave rise to disquieting rumours again, which, though nothing happened to distrub the peace, prevented the intending pilgrims from starting on their journeys. The result was that Meshed was visited by very few pilgrims during the year, and large quantities of goods which would have been purchased and consumed by the pilgrims were not disposed of.

(IV) Towards the end of the year 1896, the news of the outbreak of plague in Bombay was received, and although not a single case had occurred either in Afghanistan or Baluchistan, the Russian Government at once issued orders for the formation of a military cordon against plague along the Russo-Afghan frontier. At the same time they obtained permission from the Shah to send a few Russian doctors with cossack escorts to the Perso-Afghan frontier on the south-east of Khorassan. Under this permission two Russian doctors and 150 Russian cossacks were sent from Merv, and posted along the frontier between Pul-i-Khatun and the salt lake south of Hashtadan.

On the recommendation of the sanitary council at Teheran, the Shah ordered all roads leading into Persia from Afghanistan and Baluchistan to be closed with the exception of the main road from Herat to Meshed, that leading from the direction of Kandahar towards Birjand, Kirman and Yezd, and the one coming from Baluchistan. It was decided that these three roads were to be kept open, and that sanitary stations were to be established on them for the examination and disinfection of travellers and goods. In other words, it was not the intention of the sanitary council to stop traffic, but only to establish sanitary posts to enable all passengers and merchandise to enter Persia under quarantine regulations which were to be carried out by Russian doctors. But what actually happened was that all intercourse between Persia and Afghanistan was entirely stopped. Not only were caravans of travellers and goods coming from Afghanistan prevented from entering Persia, but not a single soul was allowed to leave Persian territory, that is to say, the road was entirely closed to travellers and goods, and nothing was allowed to pass either way. Similarly, the road from British Baluchistan to Persia vid Seistan was also completely closed till after the close of the year under review, and caravans were actually turned back from the frontier after they had travelled about six hundred miles from Quetta. Moreover, large caravans of Indian goods for the Persian new year (21st March 1897), which generally come to Meshed by way of Bandar Abbas, Kirman, Bam, and Narmashir towards the end of the year were stopped on the Kain and Khaf borders at places inside Khorassan, after they had already been travelling in Persian territory for about two months, and not allowed to proceed to their destination. These measures had the effect of putting a stop to the Anglo-Indian trade with Meshed and Khorassan. Free intercourse was still allowed, though by the Russian authorities between Khorassan and Transcaspia. On the road from Meshed to Ashkabad all travellers and goods were allowed to pass without any detention after medical examination of the travellers and disinfection of Indian tea and indigo.

Again, while all roads from Afghanistan into Persia were closed, no restrictions beyond a three days' quarantine at Takhta Bazar were placed on traffic between Afghanistan and Russian territory on the Herat-Panjdeh road, which was thrown open for all travellers and goods, whether from Afghanistan or India. Thus all Afghan trade was diverted from Persia to Russian territory and the Indian trade with Khorassan was stopped for the time being. The attempt to execute these changes constitutes the principal feature of the year.

(V) The scarcity of food-stuffs in Meshed was also the outcome of the closing of the Herat-Meshed road. Meshed largely depends on Herat for clarified butter, coarse rice, and pulses, important staples of food of the people. As these articles could not be imported owing to the road being closed, their prices rose by 100 to 200 per cent., and there was a tremendous rise in the rates of other articles of daily consumption in consequence, which largely reduced the demand for goods generally.

All the above causes combined with the fact of the market being overstocked on account of unusually large imports of 1894-95, crippled the trade of Meshed during the year; there was no demand for anything; the market was very dull; and little business was done beyond the mere local wants which were reduced to almost nothing. The result was that merchants generally made little or no profits (trade with Russia even not being so profitable as in former years); some lost heavily and became bankrupt; while the business powers of many which were already very limited were further largely curtailed owing to the losses they suffered. In short, the state of the trade and commerce of Meshed during the year 1896-97 was very unsatisfactory, and the situation remains far from encouraging.

Competition between Great Britain and Russia. General remarks.

Up till this year the British trade with Meshed has been much above the Russian trade in value, but owing to some of the causes explained above the position has now been reversed.

The Russian imports have steadily improved during the last three years, while British imports have steadily declined.

In order to give an exact idea of the situation it may be mentioned that Russian imports during 1896-97 showed an improvement of 56 per cent. over that of the year before last (1894-95); while British imports (including Chinese tea passing through Bombay in which British capital was employed, but excluding piece-goods imported vid Constantinople and Tabriz) during 1896-97, as compared with the same year, exhibited, a decline of 71 per cent.

As regards exports, the exports from Meshed to Russian territory during the past year showed an increase of 228 per cent. over those of the year before last; while exports from Meshed to India during 1896-97, though much larger than those of the year before last, decreased by 12 per cent., as compared with the previous year (1895-96).

For information as to the increases and decreases in different articles during the year 1896-97, in comparison with those of the year 1895-96, attention is invited to the remarks under the heads "British imports", "Russian imports", "exports to India," and "exports to Russia."

The most remarkable feature in British imports is the extraordinary decrease which took place during the year under report in tea and indigo, the chief articles of British trade with Central Asia, owing to the opening of the Batoum route by which the bulk of the trade from India now passes towards Transcaspia, Bokhara, and Turkistan, instead of, as formerly, by the Bandar Abbas-Meshed route. This has seriously affected the trade of Meshed.

The commercial importance of Meshed depended, not on its trade with Russia, but on that with India, as Meshed served as a distributing centre for tea, indigo, spices and Indian piece-goods for the Central Asian market.

The exclusion of Indian piece-goods from Bokhara and Turkistan by the new Russian customs regulations, and the diversion of the trade in tea, indigo, spices, and the few articles of Anglo-Indian manufacture admitted into Russian territory by the Khorassan route, as mentioned above, have entirely divested Meshed of that importance, and dealt such a heavy and lasting blow to its trade, that however much the position may improve, it will never, under present circumstances, be able to recover its former prosperity.

The efforts of the Russian Government to increase their trade by giving subsidies, making roads, establishing Consular agencies in different districts of Khorassan, and affording other facilities to their traders, are being crowned with success. Encouraged by the measures taken by the Russian Government for the purpose of improving trade, Russian merchants are pouring in and starting business in different places throughout the province. They have established centres for the purchase of wool and skins in Turbat-i-Haidari, Turbat-i-Sheik Jam and Birjand, and have opened depôts of sugar, kerosine oil and cotton prints in Meshed and Sabzawar. Their dealings being generally confined to ready money, they avoid losses incidental to the Persian system of transactions on credit for from three to twenty or some times even fifty months. Thus they are pushing on their trade to all parts of Khorassan and even as far south as Seistan in districts far away from the Russian border and near the British frontier where Anglo-Indian goods should command the market. As it is, the latter reach those places, not through any British or Indian merchant, but through village shopkeepers, pilgrims, travellers, or camelmen.

On the other hand, British and Indian traders have no such facilities as those enjoyed by Russian traders. They are handicapped by their goods being conveyed by long, difficult and expensive journeys before they reach Meshed, and having to work under many great disadvantages they are losing ground daily. The Central Asian markets are lost to them, and the local business has dwindled down to insignificance. For the present, the British trade is ruined, and the few Indian merchants in Meshed—afflicated by adverse Russian customs regulations, thwarted by Russian rivals; and disheartened by the cunning and dishonesty of the Persian traders who take every opportunity of defrauding them and evading payment of the full value of the goods purchased by them on long credit, under cover and protection of the strong influence of the priests and the shrine sanctuary which supports them in making their own terms with their creditors, and against which the civil authorities are quite helpless—are winding up their affairs and preparing to return to India, leaving the field to Russian traders.

The opening of the new trade route from Quetta to Meshed vid Nushki, Seistan and Birjand, described elsewhere, may help British Indian merchants to improve their position later on to some extent, provided Consular protection and other facilities are afforded to them at central points on the road between Seistan and Meshed. At present there is no British Consular Agent either at Nasirabad (Seistan) or at Birjand, though at both places Russian Consular Agents have for some years been posted. In the absence of such British Agents who could protect and give the necessary assistance to traders, the latter are likely to meet with many serious obstacles.

China and Glassware.

A large quantity of Chinaware cups and bowls especially made for the Bokharan market, in former years used to be exported from Bombay through Meshed to Central Asia, although English glassware, being too good and expensive, has been ousted not only from Central Asia, but from Khorassan as well since 1890.

Chinaware cups and bowls however continued to be exported to Bokhara through Meshed till the beginning of 1895, when, owing to the introduction of the Russian tariff, the trade with Bokhara ceased altogether.

Russian china and glassware, being cheaper and of fancy patterns, are more suitable to the Persian taste. Consequently they have assumed complete command of the market and have driven out English and all other European manufactures. Some china and glassware, chiefly of Austrian manufacture, is still imported to Meshed vid Turkey, Tabriz and Teheran, but the following figures will show how Russian imports have increased and British and all others decreased during the past three years :—

Imports and china and glassware.

Year.	British viâ Bombay and Bandar Abbas.	Austrian, German, etc., viâ Turkey, Tabriz and Teheran.	Total British and all other European manufactures.	Russian.
	£	£	£	£
1894-95	616	407	1,023	3,363
1895-96	244	1,272	1,516	3,749
1896-97	104	575	679	9,147

Cutlery, haberdashery and fancy goods.

The imports of Russian cutlery, haberdashery and fancy goods have nearly doubled during the year 1896-97 as compared with the two previous years, but, taking the trade as a whole, the goods of other countries far outbalance those of Russian manufacture. However, owing to dearness of provisions prevailing in Meshed and the decreased demand in consequence, the imports have considerably declined during the past two years, as will be seen from the undermentioned figures :—

Cutlery, haberdashery and fancy goods.

Year.	English, German, French, Austrian and Swiss.	Russian.
1894-95	4,426	337
1895-96	3,530	305
1896-97	1,645	600

No articles of British or Indian manufacture are imported from Bombay; all those that find their way into the market come by Constantinople, Tabriz and Teheran. Great Britain supplies no haberdashery or fancy goods, its imports being confined to cutlery only. Penknives and other articles of steel manufactured in England are highly appreciated. They are preferred by Persians to any others, and continue to command the market, though German articles also find a sale. Unfortunately the genuineness of a large proportion of the articles sold here bearing English names and marks appears to be doubtful. A few samples are forwarded with this report, the examination of which may be of interest.

The haberdashery and fancy goods are of Austrian, German and French manufacture, and the first-named country supplies the bulk of them, with the exception of cheap watches, which are of Swiss make, but it is impossible to give details of figures under the different heads.

At present there is no competition between Russian sugar and sugar of Indian and French manufacture in Khorassan sugar, and the only article procurable in the market is that imported from Russia.

A sugar factory was recently started at Teheran, but the manufacturers cannot afford to undersell Russian sugar as yet, and have so far sent none to Meshed. Therefore Russian sugar holds complete command of the market.

India does not produce sugar sufficient for its own requirements, and the bounty which is still given by the Russian Government to Russian exporters enables them to sell sugar much cheaper in Persia than in Russia or Central Asia, and also to lower their price whenever Indian or French sugar happens to find its way into the market to such an extent that the loss suffered by the importers of Indian or Mauritius sugar from Bombay prevents them from carrying on the trade.

Some Mauritius sugar was imported from Bombay to Meshed during 1892-93, and a small quantity the following year, but the trade has died out since, and there is no hope of its restoration unless Indian merchants can import sugar by the new Nushki-Seistan route at a cost low enough to enable them to sell it at about the price which Russian sugar generally obtains in Meshed, viz., 4½ krans per Tabriz man of 6½ lb., or about 3⅓*d.* per lb.

Owing to the closing of the Meshed-Herat road towards the end of the year 1896-97, which raised the price of Russian sugar in Herat from 6 to 14 krans per Tabriz man (4⅓ to 10½*d.* per lb.), some Mauritius sugar was imported from India to Herat vid Kandahar, and despite the high duty it was sold at a good profit at 8 krans per Tabriz man, about 6*d.* per lb.

Cotton yarn and twist.

The principal articles of import in which Anglo-Indian manufacturers might continue to compete with Russia in Khorassan are cotton yarn and twist and piece-goods consisting of sheetings, shirtings, cretonnes, Turkey reds, and cotton prints.

Though Russia has begun to supply the Central Asian market with cotton yarn and twist, its efforts to compete with Great Britain in the Meshed market have failed. During the year 1895-96, £616 worth of Russian cotton yarn and twist was imported into Meshed, but during 1896-97, the import fell to £64 only, as there was no demand for it. Though British cotton yarn and twist still hold command in Meshed, the loss of the Central Asian market, which used to consume a large quantity, and the dulness of business have enormously reduced the imports during the past three years. The totals of imports are :—

Year.	From India vid Bombay and Bandar Abbas.	From England vid Turkey, Tabriz and Teheran.	Total.
1894-95	17,296	...	17,296
1895-96	7,050	1,160	8,210
1896-97	4,590	210	4,800

Piece-goods.

The total imports of British and Russian piece-goods to Meshed during the past three years are given below :—

Year.	Russian piece-goods of all sorts.	British piece-goods of all sorts imported vid Bombay and Bandar Abbas.	Piece-goods of all sorts, chiefly British, but including a small proportion of cotton prints and silk from Italy, France, etc., imported vid Turkey, Tabriz, and Teheran.	Total British and other piece-goods.	British piece-goods that passed on to Russian territory.
	£	£	£	£	£
1894-95 . . .	17,078	20,030	9,349	29,379	13,325
1895-96 . . .	22,627	18,923	11,830	30,753	Nil.
1896-97 . . .	22,398	14,931	9,492	24,423	190

These figures show that British and other imports, which were about 72 per cent. more than Russian imports during 1894-95, were only about 9 per cent. higher than the latter during 1896-97, that is to say, they declined by 63 per cent., as compared with the Russian imports; while the latter rose by the same percentage comparatively.

Independently of each other, the Russian imports during 1896-97 improved by 31 per cent. over those of 1894-95, while British and other imports during 1896-97 decreased by 18 per cent. in comparison with those of 1894-95.

The Russian customs regulations are responsible for the increase in the Russian imports and the decrease in the British imports.

During the year 1894-95, £13,325 worth of British and Indian piece-goods passed on to Russian territory before the introduction of the new customs tariff in January 1895, but since then nothing of British or Indian manufacture has been allowed to pass through the Russian custom house, and the only article of British manufacture imported to Russian territory through Meshed was £190 worth of Muslin in 1896-97. The Russians have not succeeded in manufacturing Muslin yet, and the requirements of the Central Asian market are still supplied by the British article, which is now imported into Central Asia direct from Bombay vid Batoum.

Muslin.

The British and Indian manufacturers have so far had the monopoly of the sale of shirtings and sheetings. However, a competition has set in now, as the Russians have also begun to export these articles. By means of the new customs regulations, the Russians have managed to drive out Anglo-Indian shirtings and sheetings from Bokhara, where there was a large demand for them; but they have not yet been able to have their own way in Meshed, as Russian articles, though cheaper, are very inferior in quality, and are consequently not appreciated.

Shirtings and sheetings.

The demand for English cretonnes and Turkey reds is decreasing daily, as the Russian articles, being more suited in colour and quality to the Persian taste, find a readier sale.

Cretonnes.
Turkey reds.

There has been a hard struggle in Meshed during the past ten years between British and Russian cotton prints, the chief articles of foreign piece-goods largely consumed and in great demand throughout Persia, and it is beyond doubt that the Russians have got the best of it.

Cotton prints.

Though large quantities of English cotton prints were imported to Meshed from India vid Bandar Abbas and from England vid Turkey, Tabriz, and Teheran during the past three years, still they were less than those imported in previous years, and the import of Russian cotton prints increased. Therefore, if nothing is done to improve the condition of the former, they will before long be driven out of the market altogether, as many other articles of English manufacture have been.

Large consignments of British cotton prints imported during the past three years are lying unsold, and traders are now selling them at a heavy loss to clear off their stock.

The Russian Government grants a bounty of from R. 1—50-C. to R. 1—75-C. (about 1½-D. to 1⅞-D. per lb) on all Russian cotton prints imported into Persia.

This bounty or premium covers the amount of the duty imposed on raw cotton imported into Russia from Persia, where its cultivation is being encouraged by Russian agents by every possible means. This has enabled the Russian manufacturers to nearly kill the British trade in cotton prints.

Formerly English chintzes were in great demand owing to their superior quality, but the Russian manufacturers, having obtained specimens of the articles liked by the people and having ascertained the wants and tastes of the wearers through trustworthy commercial agents, have greatly improved their cotton prints in material, patterns, and colours; and the new Russian chintzes which reached Meshed during the year 1896-97 are highly appreciated.

Ten samples of these have been obtained, and are forwarded with this report. They will, it is hoped, give the British manufacturers an idea of the colours and patterns that suit the Persian taste.

Eight samples of English chintzes with which the Meshed market is now choked, are also forwarded to enable a comparison to be made between the two. The Manchester manufacturers may take note that there is no demand for English chintzes of the patterns forwarded herewith, as the people greatly prefer the new Russian kinds, and hence the stock of English chintzes is being sold at a large discount.

Russian cotton prints are sold in Meshed for ready money through Armenian traders, who are Agents of the Moscow manufacturers and deal with them direct.

On the other hand, English cotton prints, whether imported direct from England by the Black Sea route, or from Bombay vid Bandar Abbas and Yezd, change hands at several places on the road before they reach Meshed. They are sold by each party on long credit, and every dealer being anxious to make as much profit as possible, the price is enhanced considerably before the goods reach the market. Otherwise English cotton prints, if made of colours and patterns suitable to Persian taste, can hold their own against those of Russian manufacture, and be sold at the same price with reasonable profit, especially now that the new trade route vid Nushki and Seistan is expected to cheapen the cost of carriage a good deal. But British manufacturers cannot compete with Russia in this, the most important article of trade, unless they arrange to open a central depôt at Karachi or Quetta with a branch at Meshed having wholesale and retail departments in charge of a European Agent assisted by Indian Muhammadans belonging to the Khoja or some other business community. This plan is well worth their consideration, as there is already a considerable demand in cotton prints, and it is likely to increase, as natives of villages who formerly used to make their clothes of coarse country cloth dyed with indigo, or of country prints, have commenced to wear European cotton prints instead.

Opening for British trade in Khorassan.

There is not much opening for British trade in Khorassan, but the trade in cotton prints is capable of great development.

The only European business house in Meshed at present is a branch of the Imperial Bank of Persia, which is an English institution, but one or two other European business firms might be established with advantage, as there is not a single native business man or merchant at Meshed fit to act as an agent to a European firm.

Under the head of temperature in this report will be found some information regarding the climate of Meshed.

The town of Meshed is situated at an elevation of 3,100 feet from sea level, and its pleasant climate is well suited to Europeans. A large number of houses have recently been built in the town by Persians and Turks which are suitable for European residences. Though the European society is very limited, yet a European business man will find life quite tolerable.

Meshed is a fanatical town, but there is no particular hostile feeling among the populace against Europeans. The Russian Armenian traders, who are all Christians, carry on their business in peace just like Mussalman traders, and no one interferes with them. On the contrary, they and the members of the Imperial Bank of Persia are treated with respect by the natives.

Revival of Indian trade with Central Asia.

Tea and indigo are by far the most important articles of trade which might continue to be exported to Meshed for its local requirements, and even for the Central Asian market.

Indigo.

Indigo cannot be produced in Russia, and the Indian manufacturers have no fear of Russian competition in this article, but cotton prints which are now generally worn by the people in Persia and Central Asia have reduced the requirements.

It is even whispered in Native circles in Meshed that the Russian Government intend to force an increased use of Russian cotton prints on the people of Central Asia by forbidding the import of indigo into Russian territory; but what truth there is in this rumour it is impossible to say at present, as Russian manufacturers of cotton prints can hardly do away with the use of indigo altogether.

Despite the increased use of cotton prints indigo is likely to continue to be consumed in considerable quantities in Persia if not in Central Asia, and the Anglo-Indian manufacturers might still hope to maintain the trade to a reasonable extent. But the quality of the Sind indigo chiefly exported to Persia, is very inferior, while a superior quality, though not the best at a moderate price, is required for the Persian market.

During the year 1896-97 the price of indigo was much lower than usual as the market was overstocked.

Tea.

Full particulars were given in last year's report about the relative value of Chinese and Indian teas exported to Persia and Central Asia; and the differences in the figures of imports during the year 1896-97, as compared with those of previous years, are explained under the head of British imports. However, it is necessary here to make a few general remarks on the subject to bring the situation up to date.

Russia has begun to cultivate tea in the Batoum district with some success, and native report says that the Russian manufacturer there has undertaken to produce tea in a few years sufficient for the requirements of the whole of the Central Asian market; but this report requires confirmation, and it is much doubted whether the Russian manufacturer will be able to compete with the Anglo-Indian planters for a long time to come. Therefore, it is believed that the Anglo-Indian manufacturers have still an opportunity to improve their black tea trade with Persia and to revive their green tea trade with Central Asia by carefully studying the existing state of affairs.

It has been mentioned above that the bulk of the tea trade for Central Asia now passes vid Batoum.

Smuggling.

The reason why a greater quantity than was expected, after the opening of the Batoum route, was imported by Bandar Abbas was that a considerable quantity of tea was smuggled across the frontier. But the Russian Government having taken stringent measures to guard against this by adding four superior officers to the existing staff of frontier guards for watching the border, and having authorised the men of the corps of military frontier guards to use their arms against smugglers and persons violating the frontiers in Central Asia, and even to pursue the fugitives across the border and fire upon them, the practice of smuggling has nearly been put a stop to altogether. Therefore a further reduction is likely to take place in the imports to Meshed.

Green tea.

How much green tea went from Bombay to Central Asia direct by the Batoum route during the year under report, it is impossible to say, as this Consulate has no information from India on this subject.

A respectable Persian trader in Bokhara, writing to a forwarding Agent at Meshed in December 1896, reported that the Russians were trying to deprive Bombay of the trade in Chinese green tea. He stated that the head of an important Russian firm had visited Bokhara towards the middle of December 1896, and advised the tea merchants there to buy their tea in China through Russian agents who had already been sent there. He offered to make large advances of money to the Peshawar merchants trading in Bokhara, and told them that tea purchased in China and imported direct vid Batoum would cost in Bokhara at least two or three annas (about $1\frac{7}{8}d.$ to $2\frac{3}{16}d.$) per lb. less than that imported through Bombay. But the Peshawar merchants, being representatives of Indian firms, gave evasive answers and made no response.

The writer stated further that four and five of the large Russian firms had established permanent agencies in China, and purchased and exported direct from there to Central Asia about 20,000 chests of green tea.

Whether these figures are correct or not (they are probably exaggerated) the report is confirmed in so far that the Russian merchants in Bokhara and Turkistan have made arrangements to make purchases in China and to ship the consignments direct to Batoum.

This must result in great loss to India, which profited considerably by importing the article from China and then re-exporting it to Central Asia.

It is understood that the Russian merchants have been, and are, trying to take the tea trade out of the hands of the Indian traders, who have up to this time, been the chief importers; but that they have not succeeded yet, as the Indian traders, though they have not the monopoly of the trade now owing to Russian rivals having entered the field, continue to hold their own against them, and to import tea. The Indian traders in Bokhara make their purchases in Bombay and despatch the tea vid Batoum now, but owing to the Bokharan market being overstocked, they made very little profits during the year.

The consignments of tea take 36 to 50 days to reach Bokhara from Bombay vid Batoum. Though this time is much shorter than that occupied by the Persian route and the cost of carriage cheaper, the Batoum route is said to be rather unpopular with the Indian traders, because they have to pay the customs-duty in cash at Ashkabad or Bokhara immediately on the arrival of the goods there.

On the other hand, when they imported tea through Persia, it passed through the hands of Persian forwarding agents, who paid the dues and clearing and transport charges (though perhaps not from their own pockets, but from other Indian traders' money) and recovered the same from the consignees afterwards without requiring any advances.

This arrangement, the Indian traders assert, was very convenient to them.

For this reason, and in order to avoid several other difficulties and vexations which they have to encounter in dealing with the Russian customs officials, the Indian traders are making careful enquiries about the new trade route vid Nushki and Seistan, which, some of them say, might suit them better than the Batoum route.

The Indian tea traders residing in Bokhara, who are natives of the Peshawar, Rawalpindi, and other districts of the Punjab, do not care to have any dealings with China, and prefer to make their purchases near their homes in India, which is most convenient to them. Therefore, the Anglo-Indian tea planters in Kumaon, Dera Dun, and Kangra might well try to secure their custom again, and restore to its former position the green tea trade, the whole of which was in their own hands twenty years ago. In spite of the Russians trying to compete with them in importing Chinese green tea they might be able to beat them, as they can place on the market a tea of better flavour cheaper than the article imported from China, especially now that they will have no Afghan taxes to pay by the new Seistan route. But in order to succeed in this attempt they must not wait for the Peshawar and other traders to go to their gardens to obtain the tea, as they used to do before; they must exert themselves a little and search for the purchasers through European Agents in Amritsar, Karachi or Quetta. Thus they might be able to assume command of the Central Asian market again, and at the same time place a considerable quantity of Indian black tea of medium quality in the Seistan and Khorassan markets, and perhaps other places also in Persia.

Trial consignments of Indian tea.

It was mentioned in last year's trade report in connection with Indian tea that a respectable retired pensioner in Meshed was going to receive small consignments of pure tea from two or three firms, and try what he could do with them.

It may be interesting to Indian tea manufacturers to know the result.

The pensioner in question received from an Indian Tea Company, through their forwarding agents at Karachi, a trial consignment of five cases of black tea and five cases of green tea manufactured in India, each case containing 54lb.

The consignment consisted of the following teas :—

Black tea—

Orange Pekoe	1 case, containing	54 lbs.
Pekoe	2 cases	„	108 „
Pekoe Sauchang	2 cases	„	108 „

Green tea—

Young Hyson	1 case, containing	54 lbs.
Hyson	2 cases	„	108 „
Gun powder	2 cases	„	108 „

The consignment was despatched from Karachi to Bandar Abbas on the 25th May and arrived at Meshed in November 1896. The pensioner was informed by the forwarding agents that the tea company who had sent the teas expected to realize certain prices which included all expenses to Bandar Abbas, and that the 5 per cent. ad valorem duty payable at Bandar Abbas, and the carriage and expenses to Meshed were to be added to the rates quoted, in order to arrive at the prices at which the tea might be sold at Meshed.

These prices for tea delivered at Bandar Abbas, and the expenses from Bandar to Meshed, as reported by the pensioner in question, are given in the following table :—

Description of Tea.	Price per lb. for tea delivered at Bandar Abbas.		Carriage and other expenses from Bandar Abbas to Meshed per lb.		Cost of tea per lb. delivered at Meshed.
	R a. p.	£ s. d.	R a. p.	£ s. d.	R a. p.	£ s. d.

Gunpowder	0 12 6	0 1 0	0 3 4	0 0 $3\frac{1}{4}$	0 15 10	0 1 $3\frac{1}{4}$

According to the British pensioner's report the black tea was sold with great difficulty at the prices at which it was delivered at Mesh

The green tea could not be sold for ready cash at cost prices, which were much higher than market rates. Therefore, the young Hyson was sold at three months' credit, and Hyson at five months' credit, while gunpowder is still lying unsold.

These results are unsatisfactory and may not be encouraging to Indian tea manufacturers, but they will not perhaps be disappointed when it is pointed out to them that, owing to the Bokharan and Meshed markets being overstocked by large importations in 1894, in anticipation of the introduction of the new Russian tariff, prices have fallen considerably and may improve again when the stock in hand is cleared off; also that the cost of carriage by the new Nushki-Seistan route may be less than that by the Bandar Abbas-Kirman route. Besides this it should be noted that the trial consignment was too good for the Meshed market, that the prices quoted were said to be above the mark, and that there was no demand for it; but that pure teas of a medium quality and moderate prices might be sold better.

The same company despatched a second trial consignment of black and green tea of a cheaper quality to the Indian pensioner in question, but this consignment has not arrived as yet, and the result remains to be seen.

Were a European Persian-speaking commercial agent deputed by the Indian tea companies collectively to travel in the country, to study Persian tastes, and ascertain the quality of the tea that may be in demand and then to advise them to manufacture suitable tea, especially for the Persian market and make arrangements for its direct export and sale through a central depôt in charge of a European or a trustworthy Indian agent, the Indian tea trade with Khorassan might be expended to a large extent even now.

Trade routes.—The routes by which British and Indian goods are imported to Meshed have been fully described in previous reports.

Most of the tea, piece-goods, and other British imports from India to Meshed have come through the Persian Gulf and generally taken the following route of late:—

Names of places.	Distance in miles.	Number of marches.
Bandar Abbas	...	...
Saidabad	265	11
Kirman	114	5
Naiband	180	11
Birjand	130	5
Kain	63	3
Turbat-i-Haidari	137	7
Meshed	77	4
TOTAL	966	46 averaging 21 miles each.

This road is 966 miles in length, and can be traversed in 46 marches of 21 miles each, but camels take from 75 to 90 days, and consignments are often delayed in transit for a long time owing to—

(1) difficulties with the customs official at the port,
(2) laziness of forwarding agents,
(3) transport not being procurable always at Bandar Abbas or Kirman,
(4) unsatisfactory arrangements with the carriers,
(5) the goods changing hands three times, en route,
(6) Delays in getting fresh transport, and
(7) interferences and unjust demands of customs officials at intermediate stations.

A new direct and easy trade route between India and Eastern Persia.

With a view to removing all these obstacles which traders have to contend with on this and all other roads to Khorassan, and in order to improve British trade, the Government of India made arrangements in December 1896 to open a new direct and easy trade route between India and Eastern Persia. This route starts from Quetta and passes as follows:—

Names of places.	Distance in miles.	Number of marches.
Quetta
Nushki	80	4
Dalbandin	110	5
Amir Chas	184	8
Koh-i-Malik Siah	134	7
Sekoha	76	4
Nasirabad (Seistan)	21	1
Bandan	50	3
Neh	45	2
Birjand	115	5
Kain	63	3
Turbat-i-Haidari	137	7
Meshed	77	4
TOTAL	,092	53 averaging 20½ miles each.

The distance from Quetta to Meshed is 1,092 miles or 53 stages, averaging 20½ miles each.

Under the orders of the Government of India wells have been dug at convenient intervals, and levy posts established at different stages all along the road to secure the safety of caravans and to facilitate their traffic through the desert tracts.

As the new route passes entirely through territory which is under British control as far as the border of Seistan, the caravans have no fear of the imposition of heavy dues by Afghan officials. Camel grazing and wood are procurable at every stage and grass at most, while arrangements are being made for the provision of grain also. Cheap camel transport is available at Quetta, in Seistan, and at other places on the road. Although the distance is 126 miles longer than that of the Bandar Abbas-Kirman route, yet the journey would only occupy about two months (including halts) instead of at least 75 days or three months taken by camels by the Bandar Abbas-Kirman route. Besides this the sea voyage from Karachi to Bandar Abbas would be avoided, as well as the obstacles, troubles, and inconveniences mentioned above, which are often experienced on the Bandar Abbas-Kirman road. With proper forwarding Agents at Quetta and carriers engaged for the whole journey, which could be easily arranged, the goods would come from Quetta to Meshed without changing hands or delay in transit, as there are no towns on the road, and no customs officials to interfere with caravans.

The customs official on the Seistan frontier would give passes free of charge to the carriers and 5 per cent. ad valorem duty would be paid at Meshed.

The road is already showing signs of becoming very popular, and is likely to expand British Indian trade with Seistan and Khorassan to a great extent.

As the Peshawar tea merchants residing at Bokhara are taking great interest in it and might decide to import their tea from India to Bokhara by this route instead of the Batoum route, there is probably a great future in store for it.

British imports.

The total value of British imports into Meshed from India viâ Bombay and Bandar Abbas during the year 1896-97 amounted to £89,547 only.

This represents a falling off of £109,620 in the figures for the year under report, as compared with those of the year before.

These figures do not include goods imported viâ Turkey, Tabriz, and Teheran, which are mentioned separately.

Green tea.

The value of green tea imported into Meshed during the year 1894-95 amounted to £222,318. During the following year, at the beginning of which the Batoum route was opened and the trade diverted from Bandar Abbas to that route, it fell to £57,729, while during the year 1896-97 there was a further fall, the figures being £43,145 only, or £14,584 less than those of last year.

Of the total amount imported during 1896-97, £41,550 passed on to Russian territory.

Black tea.

During 1895 there was an increase in the import of black tea of £13,839 over that of the previous year (1894), but during the year under report the amount fell from £38,030 in 1895 to £10,865, which shows a falling off of £27,165.

Of £10,865 only, £780 worth passed on to Russian territory, as the Bokharan market was overstocked.

Besides the above teas, £7,545 worth of tea was also imported, the colour of which is not specified in the returns. Some of it was black and some green tea manufactured in India.

Indigo.

There was a marked decrease in the import of indigo amounting to £19,057. Out of the amount imported, £3,428 during 1896-97, against £22,485 in the previous year, only £180 worth passed on to Russian territory. The fall is due to the diversion of the Central Asian trade from the Bandar Abbas to the Batoum route, as mentioned above.

For the same reason there was a falling of £2,680 in the import of spices; of £875 in that of muslin; and of £539 in that of drugs.

Spices, Muslin, Drugs.

The other chief decreases in the import trade occurred under the following heads.

Sheetings.

Sheetings to the value of £2,793.

Long Cloth.

Long cloth, bleached, to the value of £2,396.

Long cloth, unbleached, to the value of £2,351.

Cotton yarn.

Cotton yarn to the value of £2,460.

These decreases are accounted for partly by the exclusion of the goods of this class from the Central Asian markets and partly by the slackness of trade in Meshed.

Cotton prints. Other Piece-goods.

The import of cotton prints declined slightly to the extent of £345 only, while a considerable increase (£4,862) took place in the import of other piece-goods, the total value of imports under that head being £7,290 against £2,432 in the previous year; but this does not mean that the demand increased as most of the articles remained in stock.

Copper sheets.

There was an increase of £1,677 in the import of copper sheets, also as the amount rose from £910 in 1895 to £2,587 during the year under report.

Books.

A decrease of £830 occurred in the import of Persian books printed in Bombay. This is attributed to the considerable rise in the price of food stuffs, on account of which the demand for books decreased to a great extent.

Coral.

£400 worth of coral was imported during 1895-96, but none at all during 1896-97. The reason is that it is now exported direct from Bombay to Central Asia by the Batoum route instead of the Bandar Abbas-Meshed route.

The decreases during the year under report in the import of other articles, such as tin, chinaware, preserved ginger, etc., are not of any importance.

Russian imports.

The Russian imports into Meshed during the year 1896-97, on the whole, show an increase of £5,618 over those of the previous year.

Sugar.

The value of loaf and crystallized sugar imported from Russian territory into Meshed rose from £35,435 in 1895-96 to £45,824 in 1896-97, showing an important increase, amounting to £10,389, which is attributable to the bounty given to exporters by the Russian Government and the increased demand.

Glass and chinaware. Sack-cloth.

The import of glass and chinaware also rose from £3,749 in 1895-96 to £1,947 in 1896-97; and that of sack-cloth from £182 to £1,401, showing an enormous increase of £5,398 in the former and of £1,219 in the latter.

Piece-goods. Iron materials.

The imports of piece-goods and iron materials remained stationary, being about the same as in the previous year.

Candles. Kerosine oil. Matches.

The value of candles imported during the year, as compared to the year before, declined by £1,462; that of kerosine oil by £4,148; and that of matches by £2,669.

The reason of these decreases was that the Ashkabad-Meshed road, by which almost all Russian goods are now imported, was blocked up by snow, in consequence of which large consignments of different articles, especially of kerosine oil, could not come on before the close of the year.

Paper.

The decreases in other imports were not important, except in paper, which declined from £1,115 to £390; and vitriol which decreased from £1,581 to £440, showing a falling off, during the year, of £725 and £1,141 respectively.

Under the imports from Merv and Bokhara, though an improvement took place in hides, the imports of carpets and camel-hair cloth declined; while no silk was imported at all. The total falling off under these imports amounted to £1,148, or nearly 40 per cent.

Imports from Merv and Bokhara.

The cause of his decline was dearness of provisions in Meshed, and a reduced demand of the articles in question, in consequence.

The imports vid Turkey, Tabriz, and Teheran amounted to £24,166 in 1895-96; but in 1896-97 they declined by £4,426, the amount being only £19,740, of which about £11,700 represented the value of English goods.

Imports vid Turkey, Tabriz, and Teharan.

These imports consist of articles of English, French, German, Austrian, and Swiss manufacture.

The piece-goods and cotton yarn and twist are chiefly English, and these showed a falling off of £2,338 and £950 respectively, the value of the piece-goods imported being £9,492 against £11,830, and that of cotton yarn and twist only £210 against £1,160 in the previous year.

Piece-goods, cotton yarn, and twist.

The import of broad cloth which is of German, Austrian, French and English manufacture increased during the year by £1,786.

Broad cloth.

The cloths imported were of common, thin and inferior quality, and included no serges, tweeds, or superfine cloth.

The proportion of English cloth was small, because English cloth being too good and expensive, does not find much sale in Meshed. There is a large demand here in blue broad cloth, which is generally worn by all middle and lower classes, but only a cheap article being required, Russia supplies the most of it.

The import of China and glassware which is chiefly of Austrian and French manufacture decreased by £697, and there was a falling off of £1,885 in the import of cutlery, watches, and fancy goods, which are of English, German, French, Austrian and Swiss manufacture.

China and Glassware.

Cutlery, watches and fancy goods.

During 1895-96, £708 worth of English long cloth arrived, but none was imported during the year 1896-97.

Long cloth.

All these decreases were the result of slackness of trade.

The imports from Afghanistan into Meshed during the year 1896-97 were reduced from £11,859 to £6,206, or about one-half owing to the closing of the road towards the end of the year, on the plea of the protection of Khorassan against the spread of plague to it from India through Afghanistan.

Imports from Afghanistan.

The chief decreases were under the heads of postins, barack (coarse woollen cloth), and sheep and lamb skins, large quantities of which are generally imported about the time the road was closed.

The most important article of export from Meshed towards India is opium. It is chiefly intended for the Chinese market, where it is in great demand.

Exports to India. Opium.

Opium being one of the most profitable articles of commerce at present, its cultivation is steadily increasing in the province, but the trade is in the hands of a few Persian merchants.

During the year 1896-97, the crop suffered from excessive rains, which fell just at the time when the juice was being extracted from the plants. Therefore the output was much below the average, and the opium turned out was not of the best quality.

Owing to a fall in the price in China, the merchants withheld their stock. Consequently a marked decrease amounting to £5,584 took place in the export of opium during the year, and although the exports of wool, pistachios, and turquoises increased, yet there was still a falling off of £ 2,588 in the exports to India, the total being £19,681 against £22,269 in the previous year.

Wool. Pistachios, Turquoises.

Horses.

Horses once formed an important part of the export trade from Khorassan to India, and it was believed in some quarters that the opening out of the new route between Quetta and Meshed vid Nushki and Seistan might foster this trade, Meshed being considered to be a good market for horses suitable for native Indian cavalry remounts.

Large numbers of horses formerly used to be exported from this province to India through Afghanistan, and by the Persian Gulf, but gradually the trade declined. This decline was attributed by some buyers in India to the prohibitive taxes levied by the Amir in Afghanistan through which country passed the shortest route to India from Khorassan, but this was not the real cause. The fact was that the supply of horses ran out in Khorassan.

In 1891 a Persian horse-dealer took down a batch of 65 horses, 75 mares and 60 mules from Meshed to Quetta through Seistan, but more than half of these animals were purchased by him in Herat and Merv, the rest being bought with difficulty from Meshed and the surrounding districts.

In 1895 an Indian pensioner from Hyderabad (Deccan) exported about 80 mares of an inferior class from Khorassan to Bombay vid Bandar Abbas, with the exception of these no other animals in any numbers have been exported since 1891.

With regard to mules it may be mentioned that Khorassan is not a mule breeding province and most of the mules in use here come from Ispahan and the southern districts of Persia. Sometimes muleteers coming with caravans of pilgrims who run short of funds after a long stay in Meshed, are willing to dispose of their animals, but these cannot be purchased for the Indian market, as the export of mules from Persia is prohibited by the Persian Government since the year 1894.

Dealers from India may still be able to buy a small number of mares and horses, but only of a very inferior stamp to that required by the Indian cavalry and they would, besides, have to pay double prices as a horse which could be got for 25 tumans (Rs. 76, or £5) a few years ago cannot now be purchased for less than 50 tumans (Rs. 152 or £10).

The real truth is that horses are not procurable in Khorassan at present in numbers sufficient to establish an annual trade with India. In former times a large number of horsemen had to be kept up in the country for checking Turkoman raids which were of frequent occurrence, but the occupation of Akhal by Russia in 1881 and of other Turkoman districts later on, put a stop to all raiding. This did away with the necessity, for the employment of horsemen, and carriages having been brought into use by wealthy Persians in which smaller and lighter animals than those required for riding are used, the result was that the demand ceased, consequently the people disposed of the breeding mares, gave up breeding and occupied themselves with other more profitable pursuits. What animals were left in the country were brought up and exported by dealers, and the stock is now exhausted. For these reasons the trade has died out, and there are small hopes of its revival.

Exports to Russia.

Export from Meshed to Russia during the year 1896-97 showed a considerable increase amounting to £12,431, the figures being £80,320 against only £ 67,889 in the previous year.

Wool.
Sheep and lamb skins.

This increase is chiefly made up by the rise in the rapidly increasing export of wool, which went up from £8,119 to £15,467, and that of sheep and lamb skins, for the reasons explained below.

At the beginning of the year 1896-97 the tanners, shoe-makers and saddlers of Meshed complained to the Persian Government that on account of large exports of skins to Russian territory, their business has suffered to such an extent that they were unable to pay their taxes. In order to remedy their grievances and to improve the industries, and with a view to preserve lambs which were killed in large numbers in order to export their skins, the consequence being a scarcity of sheep and a considerable rise in the price of milk, clarified butter and mutton, the Persian Government first issued orders directing the levying of a prohibitive tax of a Tuman (4s.) each on all lamb skins exported, but afterwards prohibited their export altogether with effect from the 14th July 1896.

The prohibition was enforced to a certain extent by the local customs authorities. In December 1896, it was represented to the Persian Government that foreign subjects had a large stock of sheep and goat skins in hand, which they had purchased before the prohibition was made known to them. Thereupon the Persian Government permitted all foreign subjects to export the stock which they had already purchased. This gave an opportunity to all traders in skins to export as many as they possibly could. Later on the Persian Government prohibited the export of sheep and goat skins with effect from 1st March 1897, but the prohibition was, on the recommendation of the Governor-Ceneral of Khorassan, confined to the town of Meshed only, and it was decided to allow the export to be continued from the country and district, in fact from all places outside the town of Meshed. As most of the skins are brought to the town of Meshed from outside, and as those inside the town can easily be taken outside by the dealers and quietly disposed of to the exporters, this prohibition was quite useless, and the export went on more than ever, accordingly, the value of lamb, sheep and goat skins exported to Russian territory during the year 1896-97, amounted to £12,902 instead of £8,608 only in the year before, exhibiting an increase of £4,294.

Cotton. Country cloth and prints.

The outturn of cotton during the year under report being much less than that of the year before on account of a partial failure of the crops, only £567 worth of cotton was exported instead of £1,153 in the previous year, but the decrease was more than balanced by an increase in the export of country cloth and prints.

Shawls. Carpets.

Owing to a decrease in the demand in Russia and Turkey to which shawls, carpets, and miscellaneous articles of Persian manufacture are chiefly exported from Meshed viâ Ashkabad, the exports of these articles declined by £2,845, £3,586, and £1,086, respectively; but the loss was made up by a corresponding increase in the export of turquoises.

Dried fruits. Tobacco.

Small unimportant decreases took place during the year in the export of certain articles such as dried fruits, tobacco, etc., but they were covered by the increases noted above.

Exports to Afghanistan.

There was an increase of £1,471 during the year in the exports to Afghanistan in shawls and miscellaneous articles.

Foreign goods which passed through Meshed to Afghanistan.

The value of foreign goods which passed through Meshed to Afghanistan rose by £934.

Indian green tea. Russian piece-goods. Russian sugar.

This increase was accounted for by the export of £580 worth of Indian green tea, none of which was exported through Meshed, the year before an increase of £1,291 in the export of piece-goods chiefly of Russian manufacture, a decrease of £680 in the export of Russian sugar, and small decreases in the export of other articles such as iron manufactures, candles, kerosine oil, etc.

Exchange. Persian currency and £ sterling.

The average rates of exchange between the Persian currency and £ sterling during the year 1896-97 were as follows :—

For the quarter ending.	Per £ sterling.
	Krans.
June 15th, 1896	49½
September 15th, 1896	48⅞
December 15th, 1896	49⅝
March 15th, 1897	50

These rates give an average for the whole year of krans 49$\frac{1}{3}\frac{1}{3}$. Therefore, the value of all imports and exports shown in the returns accompanying this report has been converted from Persian currency into £ sterling at the round figure of 50 krans per £ sterling.

As all calculations in the returns for the year 1895-96 were also made at the same rate, the work of comparison of the totals of imports and exports with those of the previous year is greatly facilitated.

Persian and Indian currencies.

The average rate of exchange between the Persian and Indian currencies for the year was 313$\frac{1}{4}$ krans per 100 rupees.

This rate is based on the following quarterly averages :—

For the quarter ending.	Per Rs. 100.
	Krans.
June 15th, 1896	315
September 15th, 1896	305
December 15th, 1896	303
March 15th, 1897	320

The Imperial Bank of Persia, the only European banking firm in Meshed having monetary transactions with foreign countries, sold during the year 1896, large amounts of £ sterling at rates varying from 48$\frac{5}{8}$ to 51$\frac{1}{2}$ krans per £ to their own branches, who made profits on their rates. They also found cover for their sales to some extent in Merv in Transcaspia, but hardly disposed of any bills in Meshed.

Partly for want of banking facilities, but chiefly owing to the absence of direct trade with England and a considerable decline in the trade with India, very little business is done between Khorassan and Great Britain or India in exchange.

Russian paper.

Native traders remitting money to India for the purchase of goods seldom send it by bills of exchange. They make their remittances by means of Russian rouble notes through Russia. A large number of these Russian rouble notes are annually brought to Meshed by pilgrims, travellers, and others, and disposed of locally at reduced prices. These are collected by native traders, and dispatched by post to Odessa where they are converted into £ sterling, and the amount remitted to Bombay through Russian Banks.

A regular trade in Russian paper money lately sprang up in Meshed and assumed large proportions. The result was that the price of rouble notes underwent great fluctuations and gave rise to considerable speculation. The rate which was only 330 krans per hundred roubles in 1887 gradually rose to a high figure. During 1893, it went up as high as 600 krans, and remained liable to sudden changes which seriously affected trade.

The amount of Russian paper money yearly imported to and exported from Meshed amounted to about 1,000,000 roubles in previous years. But owing to a reduction in traffic, the amount fell to about 500,000 roubles during the year 1896-97. These are, however, only rough estimates made by the leading native bankers, and it is impossible to arrive at exact figures. The price of the Russian paper rouble remained steady throughout the year, being about 510 krans per hundred roubles.

Russian gold.

A considerable quantity of Russian and Bokharan gold also used to find its way to Meshed in former years, but very little of it came during the year under report. The average prices were :—

Russian Imperial	New coin, 37 Krans each.
	Old coin, 40 Krans each.
Bokharan Tilla	30 Krans each.

Bokharan gold.

The greater portion of the Bokharan gold coming to Meshed used to be exported to Afghanistan and India, but the Russian Government is said to have forbidden its leaving Russian territory since the beginning of last year.

Persian silver coin.

The new Persian silver coin continues to be exported to Transcaspia, and the trade was carried on with some profit during the year.

Persian copper coin.

In spite of the efforts of the Persian Government to improve the value of their copper coinage in ratio with the silver Kran, great fluctuations occurred in the rates which led to a good deal of speculation. Some native bankers, however, made handsome profits out of the confusion which ensued.

The current rate at the close of the year was 26 copper Shahis per silver Kran.

Harvest.

At the beginning of the spring there was every prospect of a large and abundant harvest, but owing to excessive rains later on the hopes entertained were not realised.

As the season advanced, blight (Zardi) appeared and damaged the crops.

Barley.

The barley crop suffered considerably in consequence. The grain was greatly reduced in quantity as well as size, and although the crop did not actually fail, yet the output was much less than that of an ordinary year. The result was a great rise in the price as compared to last year. During the previous year the average price of barley was about 24 Krans per Kharwar (5*d.* per quarter), but during the year 1896-97, it gradually went up from 25 Krans per Kharwar ($5\frac{1}{6}d.$ per quarter) to 44 Krans per Kharwar ($6\frac{1}{10}d.$ per quarter).

Wheat.

The wheat crop also suffered, but not nearly to such an extent. In certain districts where blight did not appear, the crops were much better than those of the previous year, but many fields in the districts round Meshed were totally destroyed by hail-storms in June. Both the irrigated and unirrigated crops in most districts, however, came to maturity, and though the number of grains in the ear was somewhat deficient, the total outturn on the whole was above the average throughout the province, except in Turshiz, where the crops were destroyed by locusts.

The average price of wheat during the year 1895-96 was about 5 Tumans per Kharwar ($10\frac{1}{2}d.$ per quarter).

During the summar of 1896, that is, before the harvest, it remained almost stationary, but in the autumn, that is, after all the crops had been gathered, when wheat ought to have become much cheaper, the price rose to 6 Tumans per Kharwar (1*s.*-$1\frac{1}{3}d.$ per quarter), and later on, owing to no grain having been brought into the town from the surrounding districts, there was a scarcity which sent up the price to 8 Tumans per Kharwar (1*s.* $4\frac{1}{2}d.$ per quarter).

Cause of scarcity of grain in Meshed.

This scarcity was due to large exports of wheat to Russian territory from the Kuchan and other districts. which supply Meshed. The Persian Government have repeatedly issued orders strictly prohibiting the export of grain to foreign territory, but these orders are always ignored by the Governors and district officials.

During the year 1896-97 the Governor-General of Khorassan sold all the Government revenue grain of the province, at a low price, to the contractor of the Meshed-Ashkabad cart road. The latter having thus obtained the monopoly, allowed little or no grain to be brought into the town, and exported as much as he possibly could to Transcaspia.

In an ordinary average year Meshed produces about Kharwars 51,360 (tons 14,881) of grain; but this being insufficient for its requirements, it depends on the surrounding districts of Nishabur and Kuchan, especially the latter, which is the granary of Khorassan, to make up the deficiency.

When this deficiency is not supplied and no grain comes in from those districts, the result is a scarcity and a rise in the price.

Grain resources of Khorassan.

The total outturn in grain ($\frac{2}{3}$ wheat and $\frac{1}{3}$ barley) of Khorassan (excluding Seistan) in an ordinary average year is estimated at about Kharwars 376,280 (tons 109,020).

Grain required for the consumption of the people.

Grain exported to the interior of Persia.

Of this about Kharwars 298,280 (tons 86,421) are required for the consumption of the people in the province; and about Kharwars 30,000 (tons 8,691) are exported to the interior of Persia from the outlying districts.

Grain exported to Afghanistan.

Of the remainder about Kharwars 8,000 (tons 2,318) are exported to Afghanistan from the Khaf and Bakharz districts.

Grain exported to Russian territory.

The balance of about Kharwars 40,000 (tons 11,590) is exported to Russian territory from the Bujnurd, Kuchan, Daragez and Sarakhs districts, the resources of which with other details are given in the following table:—

Table showing the resources in grain, consumption and surplus of the Bujnurd, Kuchan, Daragez and Sarakhs districts of Khorassan in an ordinary average year.

Name of District.	Annual outturn in Persian Kharwars of 649 lbs. each.	Required for the consumption of the people in Kharwars of 649 lbs. each.	Surplus in Kharwars of 649 lbs. each	Remarks.
Bujnurd . .	27,840	20,840	7,000	About 3,000 Kharwars exported to the Yamut country and Ashkabad and the remainder to Transcaspia
Kuchan . .	71,440	30,440	41,000	About 11,000 Kharwars exported to Meshed and Sabzawar, and the remainder to Transcaspia.
Daragez .	14,000	9,000	5,000	Exported to Transcaspia.
Sarakhs .	3,000	2,000	1,000	Exported to Russian Sarakhs.
Total in Kharwars .	116,280	62,280	54,000
Equivalent in tons .	33,690	18,044	15,646

Out of the surplus of tons 15,652, the amount annually exported to Russian territory, as mentioned above, is about tons 11,524, which is made up as follows:

	Tons.
From Bujnurd	1,159
„ Kuchan	8,693
„ Daragez	1,449
„ Sarakhs	289
Total Tons .	11,590

Were effective steps taken to prevent this large quantity going across the frontier and to keep it within the country, it would effect an appreciable fall in the price and allay the distress which generally prevails among the poorer classes when grain is scarce and prices high.

Agricultural implements.

No improved agricultural implements of modern European manufacture have as yet been brought into use in Khorassan. If these were introduced, the output of grain might be increased to a large extent, and the surplus of grain left after the year's consumption, exported to Transcaspia with advantage to the country. At present the most primitive tools are used, and it might be worth the while of British manufacturers to send through some trustworthy agent at Karachi or Bombay some strong but cheap improved single share ploughs, horse threshing and reaping machines as a trial consignment to Meshed. Almost all land in Khorassan belongs to wealthy chiefs, merchant and leading men who can well afford to buy, and would be glad to acquire agricultural implements, if they were placed within an easy reach of them. Therefore a trial consignment of useful simple implements might create a demand and a new opening in trade, if the prices are low enough to compete with the similar articles of Russian make.

Temperature.

With reference to the remarks regarding the suitability of Meshed for European residence it may not be out of place here to give some details about its temperature.

The accompanying tables contain the results of thermometrical observations taken at this Consulate-General during the last six years.

The first table gives the average monthly temperature (Farn.) in shade recorded at 8 A.M. daily from 1891 to 1896. It will be observed that the coldest month in Meshed is January, during which the average of temperature for six years at 8 A.M. is 26·78 (Farn.), while the hottest month is July, during which the average temperature at the same hour is 80·15° (Farn.).

The second table give the average minimum, maximum, and mean temperature from 1891 to 1894.

Climate.

The results of this period may, however, be considered quite sufficient to give an idea of the climate. The highest temperature recorded is 90·51° (Farn.) in July and the lowest 15·37° (Farn.) in January. These are the extreme of heat and cold which are sometimes, though rarely, reached in Meshed after an interval of several years. On the whole, the climate is very temperate and healthy.

Rainfall.

The following table gives the total rainfall of Meshed during the past six years. It will be observed that the rains were excessive during 1895 and 1896, and that the rainfall of the year 1896 exceeded that of any of the previous five years.

Population.

The local Persian officials put down the number of the inhabitants of Meshed at something between 80,000 and 100,000. They base their calculations on the number of houses in the town, which, they say, are between sixteen and twenty thousand, each containing, on an average, about five souls. But these are overestimates which cannot be relied upon, as no attempt has ever been made to take a census or to count, even approximately, the number of houses. There is, however, no doubt that a large number of people from Azarbaijan, Yezd, and Kirman and from the Caucasus, who have come and settled permanently in the town during the past five years, have added considerably to the population which may now be estimated at about 60,000 souls, excluding a floating population of about ten thousand pilgrims.

The European population consists of the members of the British and Russian Consulates-General, and the staff of the Imperial Bank of Persia numbering fifteen persons altogether including five ladies. This number, however, does not include a few European servants and children.

Turquoise mines.

The turquoise mines of Khorassan were rented from the Persian Government by an Afghan banker at the beginning of the year 1895 for a term of ten years at an annual rent of Tumans 13,200 (£ 2,640). However, the former contractor of the mines outbid his successor and offered Tumans 23,200 (£ 4,640) a year, and thus caused the Banker's contract to be cancelled at the end of the year 1896-97, though only two of the ten years for which the lease was granted had expired. The new contract might also be cancelled at any moment should a higher bidder be forthcoming. Thus the contractors, being uncertain of being allowed to retain their contracts to the end of the term of their engagements, hesitate to incur any outlay on the improvement of the mines; and the result is that the mines which were well directed in the former times are being rapidly ruined by the unsystematic working of the contractors whose sole object is to make as much profit as possible.

Outturn during 1896-97.

The outturn of the mines during the year 1896-97 is stated, on good authority, to have amounted to Tumans 19,000 (£ 3,800).

Export of turquoises.

The value of the turquoises exported by the contractors and others holding stock in Meshed to foreign countries (Russia, India and Arabia) during the year amounted to £ 10,600, viz.—

To Russia	8,000
,, India	1,600
,, Arabia	1,000

However, there was no demand for them, and the prices realised were much lower than those expected by the exporters.

DEPARTMENT OF REVENUE AND AGRICULTURE.

Weather Review of India for the Week ending at 8 a.m. on Saturday, October 30th, 1897.

On the first day of the week under review a small but intense cyclone crossed the coast near Chittagong, occasioning heavy rain and severe gales over the north-east angle of the Bay and the surrounding coasts. When this storm disappeared the barometer rose everywhere, but more particularly over the area most directly affected by the storm. As this recovery proceeded the pressure rose to above the normal average everywhere, and this excess continued over a large part of the country up to the close of the week. It was most marked over the Peninsula, so that the pressure conditions were very unfavourable for the occurrence of the usual autumnal rains over the Madras Presidency. The weather in other parts of the country was, as is usual at this season of the year, fine and quiet, so that after the disappearance of the cyclone there was no disturbed weather in any part of the country. Owing to the absence of the usual rainfall the weather was warmer than usual over the Peninsula, but elsewhere the mean temperature was low.

Daily Summary.—Sunday, October 24th.—The storm noticed over the Bay in the preceding summary had proceeded along a curved path which had carried it to the north-east angle of the Bay. The barometer was consequently falling briskly to rapidly over North-East India. The winds were cyclonic in the neighbourhood of the storm and were blowing strongly at Saugor Island. Northerly winds prevailed down the Gangetic Plain and variable winds elsewhere. The mean temperature was high over the Peninsula and the greater part of North-East India and of Burma, but was lower than usual elsewhere. Rain had fallen over Central and Upper Burma, and a few showers had been received in Lower Bengal and the Peninsula.

Monday, October 25th.—The storm noticed over the head of the Bay on the 24th had crossed the Chittagong Coast in the evening. It had since moved east-north-eastward and lay as a large shallow depression over Cachar and Upper Burma. The barometer had risen, except over the extreme North-East and North-West of the Indian region, the recovery having been rapid in Arakan. Westerly winds were blowing down the Gangetic Plain and across Bengal, while southerly winds prevailed in Burma and north-westerly winds in Rajputana and North Bombay. Elsewhere the directions were variable. The mean temperature remained higher than usual over the Peninsula and a large part of North-East India, but was below the average elsewhere. At Cuddapah the variation was $+7^{\circ}\cdot5$ and at Negapatam $+6^{\circ}\cdot9$. Heavy rain had fallen at Chittagong (9·48 inches) and a few light showers at one or two stations in Upper Burma, Assam and the Peninsula.

Tuesday, October 26th.—Pressure had increased everywhere, the recovery having been rapid to very rapid over North-East India. The depression had disappeared, and barometric readings were uniform throughout the country, though rather higher over the central districts than elsewhere. The barometer read higher than usual all over Southern and Central India. The winds were westerly in the Gangetic Plain and north-westerly along the west coast of the Bay, but were variable in other places. The mean temperature remained high over the Peninsula and Lower Burma. The rainfall was light and unimportant.

Wednesday, October 27th.—The barometer had continued to rise everywhere. Pressure was higher than usual in all parts of the country, but particularly so over the east of the Peninsula. The winds were little changed. Temperature remained excessive over the Peninsula and part of Burma and below the normal elsewhere. Fine weather prevailed generally, with a few unimportant showers in Burma and Southern India.

Thursday, October 28th.—The barometer had fallen everywhere, but the change had been uniform and the general conditions of pressure were practically unaltered. The winds were light and were generally unaltered in direction. The mean temperature relatively to the normal was high in the west and south of the Peninsula and low elsewhere. A few showers had been received in Burma and the south of the Peninsula, but in general the weather was fine and quiet.

Friday, October 29th.—The barometer continued to fall. Barometric readings remained very uniform generally, though somewhat higher in the centre than elsewhere, but they were lower than usual over the north and north-east of India, though still high over Madras. The winds were northerly over the Bay, easterly along the west coast of the Peninsula and variable elsewhere. The mean temperature was low, except over the west and south of the Peninsula, Burma and Assam. The greatest deficiency was reported from West Bengal, the east of the Central Provinces and the North-West Provinces and the northern half of Madras. Within this area the night temperatures had been very low. Showers had been received over Burma, the south of the Peninsula and Ceylon.

Saturday, October 30th.—Pressure had risen again everywhere. The barometric readings were uniform and were higher than usual everywhere—most so in North and Central Madras. Northerly to westerly winds prevailed on the Madras Coast, north-easterly winds in Burma, easterly winds along the West Coast and variable breezes elsewhere. The mean temperature was low, except over North-West and North-East India and the west and south of the Peninsula. Local showers had been received over Burma, Malabar and South Madras.

Temperature.—The mean temperature has been generally in excess over the Peninsula and Burma and generally in defect elsewhere. The day temperatures have generally been about the normal, but the nights have been colder than usual, and on some occasions the minimum temperatures have been remarkably low.

The following table gives the temperature data for the week:

On most days the mean temperature of the whole country has been very nearly normal, but the provincial returns exhibit considerable variations. In Burma there has been an excess for the week of 0°·7 and in Madras and Bombay of 1°·8, while in Gujarat, Central India, Sind and Rajputana there has been a deficiency of over 2° and in the Central Provinces, the North-West Provinces and Bengal of over 1°. The coolest day was the 29th when only in Burma and Bombay was the normal temperature exceeded.

The following are the highest maximum temperatures recorded on each day:

October 24th	100°·3	at	Tinnevelly.
„ 25th	100°·3	„	„
„ 26th	98°·8	„	„
„ 27th	97°·5	„	Jacobabad.

„ 29th	95°·0	„	„
„ 30th	96°·5	„	„

Rain.—During the week under review the rainfall has been confined to two localities. The first included all the rainfall divisions in the southern half of the Peninsula, where scattered showers generally of small amount were received more or less throughout the week, the second rainfall area included the Burma divisions, the Assam divisions and the east and deltaic divisions of Bengal. The greater part of the rainfall in the latter area was due to the disturbed conditions accompanying the cyclone of the first day of the week, and hence fell generally in the early part of the week. In all other parts of the country there was no rain, no less than thirty-six of the rainfall divisions reporting actually no rain, or else a total fall for the week of less than one-tenth of an inch. Where effective rainfall was received the amounts ranged from 3·83 inches in Tenasserim, 2·86 inches in Arakan, 2·31 inches in Central Burma, 1·85 inches in East Bengal and 1·60 inches in South Madras, to 0·10 inch in Deltaic Bengal and 0·15 inch in Central Madras. In Burma, Assam and East and Deltaic Bengal, the rainfall as mentioned above occurred during the first four days of the week, while over the Peninsula the fall occurred as showers scattered throughout the week.

The total rainfall for the two weeks, October 17th to 30th, shows that the rainfall has been short over the Peninsula, where about the middle of the month fair rain is ordinarily expected, while the fall has been excessive over Burma and North-East India, where the weather has been unusually disturbed. In other parts of the Indian region the rainfall has been light and insignificant, but in these regions very little rain is anticipated at this season.

During the week under review the following largish totals were received:

Burma	Prome	3·46 inches.
	Moungdaw (Akyab)	6·33 „
Assam	Jorhat (Sibsagar)	3·11 „
Bengal	Chittagong	9·72 „
West Coast	Quilon (Travancore)	4·00 „
Madras	Mudakilathur (Madura)	4·58 „

RESOLUTION.

Simla, the 6th November, 1897.

Read the following reports on the proceedings taken by Customs officials under the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, 1889 during the year 1896-97:

From the Government of Bengal, No. 148-T. F., dated the 28th June 1897.
From the Government of Burma, No. 4—1-T.—25, dated the 1st July 1897.
From the Government of Bombay, No. 6815, dated the 11th September 1897.
From the Government of Madras, No. 794-A., dated the 17th September 1897.

RESOLUTION.—The reports from Bombay and Madras were much later than the prescribed date of 1st of August.

2. The number of detentions during the year (1,556) was smaller than in the preceding year (1,622) by about 4 per cent. In Bengal there was a decline in cases under clause (f) of sub-section (2) of section 10 of the Act which requires piece-goods to be stamped with their lengths, the total number of cases having been 134 compared with 181 in 1895-96. The decline in Bombay, (679 against 918 in 1895-96), was chiefly in cases under clause (e), and is ascribed to the fact that the prescriptions of the law as regards the indication of the country of origin are more generally known and the necessity of compliance therewith more fully realised. But as against this view it is observed that the number of such cases at Karachi largely increased (213 against 136 in the previous year), and the increase is attributed to a stricter observance of the law which requires origin to be shewn on the same label on which the name of a British or British Indian dealer, or the description in English, appears. In Madras and Burma there was also an increase, particularly in Madras where the number of detentions was 204 against 101 in 1895-96. Here, however, this relatively large increase is said to be due not to increased disregard of the law by importers but to the much larger number of packages opened by the Customs authorities. It is remarkable that the number of cases in Burma should be so much smaller than at Madras or Karachi.

3. The following table shews the number of detentions at each port at which detentions were made in the last five years:

4. Of these cases in 1896-97, there were 758 or nearly 49 per cent detained under clause (d) of sub-section (1) of section 10 of the Act, for counterfeit trade marks or false trade descriptions; in 1895-96 there were 755 such cases, being 47 per cent of the whole.

There were 444 cases under clause (c) of the same sub-section (1), non-description or false description of origin, against 494 in 1895-96, the proportion being about 29 per cent of the whole in 1896-97, and 30 per cent in 1895-96.

Under clause (f) of sub-section (2) of section 10, stamping of length on piece-goods, there were 354 cases, or between 22 and 23 per cent of the whole, while in 1895-96 there were 373 such cases, or about 23 per cent of the whole.

5. Confiscation followed detention in only 24 cases, this number being, however, much larger than in previous years. Fines were imposed in 74 per cent of the cases; in 22 cases permission was given to re-ship the detained goods, a fine being imposed at the same time in 19 of the cases. In 12 cases the goods were destroyed, and in the remaining cases the goods were passed merely with a warning.

6. The question of the test for the measurement of yarns, mentioned in the reports from Bengal, has been referred for the opinions of the Manchester and Glasgow Chambers of Commerce.

7. In the opinion of the Government of India the cases to which reference is made in the letter from the Government of Burma, were treated with unnecessary leniency. Every package of mixed or adulterated paint should be marked in accordance with the practice in Calcutta and Bombay, and descriptions on a package indicating that the contents are lead or zinc when there is practically no lead or zinc in the package should undoubtedly be treated as false and fraudulent.

ORDER.—Ordered, that the foregoing Resolution and the papers read in the preamble be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India for general information, and that copy be forwarded to the Governments of Madras, Bombay, Bengal, and Burma.

J. F. FINLAY,
Secretary to the Government of India.

BENGAL.

No. 148 T. F., dated 28th June 1897.

From—H. H. RISLEY, Esq., C.I.E., Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Financial Department,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

In accordance with the orders conveyed in paragraph 4 of the enclosure of the Finance and Commerce Department letter No. 295 S., dated the 28th November 1890, I am directed to submit, for the information of the Government of India, the accompanying copy of a letter from the Board of Revenue, No. 452 B., dated 8th June 1897, and its enclosure, from the Collector of Customs, Calcutta, reporting on the working of the Merchandise Marks Act, IV of 1889, in the port of Calcutta during the year 1896-97. No proceedings were taken under the Act by the Collector of Customs at Chittagong, Narainganj or the Orissa ports during the year.

2. The correspondence referred to in paragraph 4 of the Board's letter relates to the complaint made by the Bengal Chamber of Commerce of the insufficiency of the test of measurement applied by the Calcutta Custom House to imported yarns in the administration of the Merchandise Marks Act. A complete report on the subject was submitted to the Government of India with my letter No. 30 F., dated the 4th May 1897.

No. 452 B., dated 8th June 1897.

From—H. LUSON, Esq., I.C.S., Officiating Secretary to the Board of Revenue, L. P.,

To—The Secretary to the Government of Bengal, Finance Department.

With reference to paragraph 4 of the instructions of the Government of India, enclosed in the letter from your office No. C. L.A 16, dated the 8th December 1899, I am directed by the Board of Revenue to submit, with the following remarks, copy of a report received from the Collector of Customs, Calcutta, No 303, dated the 13th April 1897, on the working of the Indian Merchandize Marks Act IV of 1889, during the year 1896-97.

2. The following table contains particulars of the number of detentions at the Calcutta Customs House for infringement of the Act during the past five years :

YEARS.	Number of cases in which detention was made.	Detention followed by confiscation.	Detention followed by release.		Detention ordered on information received.	Detention ordered without information.
			With fine	Without fine.
			Rs.	Rs.
1892-93	344	8	285	48		342
1893-94	334	4	302	23		333
1894-95	285	...	244			285
1895-96	93	...	321	49	1	392
1896-97	373	11	218	133	7	366

The total number of cases in which goods were detained under the Act during the past year was 373, as compared with 393 in 1895-96, showing a decrease of 20 cases, or 5 per cent. The falling off was entirely in the number of cases coming under clause (f) of section 10 of the Act, which requires that the length should be stamped on piece-goods. These cases are gradually diminishing, but it is, as the Collector observes, remarkable that they are still so numerous. The number of detentions under clause "d" which relates to goods bearing counterfeit trade marks or false trade descriptions, is on the other hand increasing, the figures for the past three years, 1894-95, 1895-96 and 1896-97, being 91, 201 and 227, respectively. The number of cases dealt with under clause "e" relating to non-description or false description of origin bears, as usual, a very small proportion, viz., 3 per cent, to the total number of detentions. Their number increased from 11 to 12 during the past year. In 133 cases, as compared with 49 in 1895-96, the goods were released without fine, while the number released with fine fell from 321 to 218 in the year of report. The amount of fines realised considerably increased, viz., from Rs. 6,790 in 1895-96 to Rs. 15,945 in 1896-97, owing to the imposition of heavy penalties on certain fraudulent importations of Bombay yarn.

3. The importations of reduced white lead in kegs bearing no marks, noticed in paragraph 5 of the Collector's report, points to a defect in the law, which will, the Board presume, have to be remedied if such instances become more frequent.

4. The action taken by the Collector of Customs in regard to paint, oil, turpentine, &c., as reported in paragraphs 3 and 4 of his letter seems judicious, and meets with the Board's approval. As regards the short reeling and testing of yarn alluded to in paragraph 6, a full report was submitted to Government with the Board's letter No. 100B., dated the 18th February 1897.

5. No proceedings were taken under the Merchandise Marks Act by any of the Collectors of Customs at outports.

No. 303, dated Calcutta, the 13th April 1897.

From—E. N. BAKER, Esq., Officiating Collector of Customs,

To—The Secretary to the Board of Revenue, L. P.

I have the honour to submit the report on the working of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act for the year 1896-97. The attached statement shows the number of cases dealt with during the year under each of the clauses D, E and F of section 10 of the Act and the manner in which they were disposed of.

2. The total number of cases was 373, as compared with 303, during the previous year, the decrease being entirely among cases under clause (F), relating to the stamping of piece-goods, which numbered 134 against 181. The provisions of the law in regard to the stamping of lengths on piece-goods are well known in the trade, and it is rather remarkable that instances of infringement continue so numerous.

3. Of the 227 cases under clause D, 27 related to importations of dry white and red lead, white zinc and paints of those materials; and 15 related to turpentine and linseed oil. The trade has not yet fully adapted itself to the ruling finally laid down in Customs Circular No. XXII of 1896, and the argument is not infrequently put forward that the words "Red lead" on a keg are a correct description of an adulterated article, the absence of adulteration being denoted by the use of the word "Genuine." Similarly, attempts are made to defend the use of the description "Crystal turpentine" as denoting turpentine which is not commercially pure. These contentions are always rejected; and the use of the words "reduced" or "adulterated" is invariably insisted on.

4. In order to give full effect to the Government orders,* and with reference to a complaint made by Messrs. Blundell Spence and Company, of London, forwarded to this office by Board's No. 233-B., dated 22nd April 1896, I have caused a list of minimum prices for each genuine description of paint, oil, turpentine, &c., to be made, and the appraisers have instructions to detain every consignment which is invoiced at a lower rate, (i.e., if the article purports to be pure) and to submit samples to the Chemical Examiner. Samples are also taken in all other cases and submitted for analysis, but in such cases the goods are not detained.

* No. 2407, dated 17th April 1896.

5. I regret to notice that occasional instances have occurred in which reduced white lead has been imported in kegs bearing no marks whatever. In such cases the Customs authorities can do nothing, even though there may be reason to suspect that it was intended to mark the goods before placing them on the market.

6. Under clause "D" there were 27 cases relating to the importation from Bombay of yarn, of which the count was falsely described, and which reeled short of 840 yards to the hank and seven others of similar yarn falsely labelled and bundled. The circumstances under which these cases were dealt with, are described in the correspondence ending with my letter No. 104, dated 4th February 1897. A vigorous effort had been made in 1895 to stop the importation of short-reeled yarn from Lancashire, and this was extended in 1896 to Bombay yarn, in respect of which the practice of short reeling seems to have been more deliberate than in the European article. In the 34 cases dealt with in the year under report, heavy penalties aggregating Rs. 9,895-15 were imposed, as compared with Rs. 1,912-3, in the previous year. In seven of the worst cases reshipment was ordered in addition to the payment of a fine.

7. Seven cases occurred in which consignments of German imitations of brandy, whisky, gin, port and other liquors were dealt with. These were usually got up in imitation of the bottles and labels of the genuine article. In some cases the labels bore the words "Made in Germany," but the corks and capsules were not branded with the country of origin. One case, in which a consignment of 150 cases of German "whisky," which involved an undoubted fraud on the public, was confiscated, occasioned a good deal of local interest and a number of well-known firms wrote to the papers to disclaim any connection with the importation.

8. In seven cases goods were detained as exhibiting counterfeit trade marks. One of these related to a consignment of umbrella cloth, in which the "Balloon" ticket and No. 9000, employed by Messrs. Barlow and Company, were imitated by a Marwari firm. The latter were fined Rs. 500. In four other cases the "pagoda" mark employed by Messrs. Ralli Brothers on a certain description of grey drills was the subject of imitation. In these cases, however, the bond fides of the later importer was established, and the goods were passed without a penalty, after the counterfeit mark had been defaced. The two other cases related to importations of blacking, in which the "two-boot" mark of Botlow and Company was imitated. The goods were reshipped without a penalty.

9. Twenty-two cases related to consignments of woollen shawls of German and Austrian make, labelled with the English words "all wool," with no indication of the country of origin.

10. In one case a shipment of cotton shawls was imported from Germany by Messrs. _____. The goods were got up to closely resemble wool, and ticketed with the English words "all wool" and bore labels marked with sizes which were largely in excess of the actual measurements. The explanation given by the importers was not satisfactory; and as it was a bad case of fraud, and the importers had been penalized on 19 previous occasions during the past two years, a heavy penalty of Rs. 500 was imposed.

11. Two cases occurred of infringement of copyright. A work called "Webster's Encyclopædic Dictionary" printed in America, was found to contain matter taken from an English copyright work. One consignment was inadvertently passed, but on notice being given, the importer brought back 80 unsold copies to the Custom House, which were eventually confiscated. In the other case, which related to the same work, the books, 48 in number, were seized, and are now under detention.

12. Under clause E there were 12 detentions. These consisted chiefly of shawls from Germany ticketed with the names of British Indian traders in English and the vernacular, with no mention of the country of origin.

13. The number of detentions under clause F was 134. These were consignments of cotton and woollen piece-goods from both British and continental ports, either wholly unstamped or with the lengths stamped in numerals only, or on strips almost severed from the body of the piece, or with chalk or other effaceable material.

14. In 11 cases confiscation was adjudged. These included one consignment of red lead, two of printed books, seven of imitation whisky and other liquors, and one of matches.

15. In seven cases reshipment was ordered on payment of a penalty, and in three cases without penalty.

16. In 218 cases the goods were released on payment of penalties and after due compliance with the law.

17. In 133 cases the importers were warned and the goods passed after being marked or stamped in accordance with the law.

18. The penalties imposed amounted in all to Rs. 15,945-3, as compared with Rs. 6,790 in the previous year. This large increase is entirely due to the heavy penalties imposed on certain fraudulent importations of Bombay yarn, referred to in paragraph 6.

19. With the exception of seven cases, in which information was received from interested parties, all the other detentions were made by the appraising staff.

20. One or two decisions of interest were come to during the year. A medical practitioner and dispensing chemist of Calcutta imported a number of glass medicine phials having his name and address engraved on them. The phials were made in Germany, and bore no indication of the country of origin; and it was found that the previous practice of the Calcutta Custom House had been to treat such cases as a breach of clauses (D) and (E). I held that as the phials were not ordinarily sold apart from the medicine they contain, the words engraved on them would be taken by purchasers, to refer, not to the phials themselves, but to the contents, in which case there was no false trade description. I accordingly passed the goods; and this view was upheld on a reference to the Board of Revenue.

21. A similar decision was arrived at in respect of a consignment of cardboard folding boxes and paper wrappers imported by the North-West Soap Company, Limited, for doing up their soap in packets for sale. The wrappers and boxes, which set forth the name and advertisement of the Company were made in Germany, and bore no indication of the country of origin, and it was ruled with the Board's approval that no breach of the law was involved.

22. The question arose during the year whether the use of the English letters K. S. on Japanese copper ingots, unaccompanied by any indication of the country of orgin, constitutes a breach of the law. The Bombay Customs House ruled that it did: and required all such ingots to be stamped with the words "Made in Japan." Feeling unable to accept this view, I referred the matter to the Board, and it was eventually ruled* by the Government of India that as the letters of the Roman alphabet did not pertain exclusively to the English language, their use could not be held to suggest an English origin for the goods, and that no breach of the law was involved.

* Orders of the Government of India, No. 3734-S.R., dated the 5th September 1896, enclosed in the Bengal Government order No. 339-T.—F., dated the 10th idem.

23. During the year the system of registering trade marks, which had been introduced in 1895, was abolished by order of the Bengal Government. The system was regarded with distrust by the mercantile community, and though it might have been of advantage had it been applied universally throughout India and worked by an adequate and organised staff, in the absence of these conditions its abolition is not to be regretted.

24. Good work was done during the year by the Head Appraiser, Mr. C. C. Bonnaud and by Mr. H. Erskine Girard, who has been specially in charge of yarn-testing operations

BURMA.

No. 4—1-T-25, dated 1st July 1897.

From—C. G. Bayne, Esq., Revenue Secretary to the Government of Burma,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

I am directed to submit for the information of the Government of India a copy of letter No. 84-8, dated the 4th May 1897, from the Chief Collector of Customs to the Financial Commissioner, reporting on the working of the Merchandize Marks Act in Burma in the year 1896-97.

2. The only cases which call for notice are those connected with paints of which 14 occurred. As is mentioned in the Collector's report the offence committed in these cases consisted in the importation of adulterated paints under false trade descriptions which stated or implied that the paints were pure. In all these cases fines were imposed by the Chief Collector whose orders were upheld by the Financial Commissioner. The importers appealed to the Local Government. On examination of the cases it appeared that they fell into three classes—

(a) cases in which the quantity of pure material (lead or zinc) exceeded 50 per cent;

(b) cases in which the quantity of pure material was less than 50 per cent. but was still considerable;

(c) cases in which the quantity of pure material amounted to only 3 or 4 per cent. or did not exist at all.

From enquiries made it was ascertained that the practice of importing these adulterated paints with false trade descriptions of the kind mentioned had existed for many years. It appeared therefore, to the Chief Commissioner that it would be a harsh measure to impose penalties, without previous warning to the importers, at any rate in cases of the two classes (a) and (b). Accordingly in the cases of these two classes he remitted the penalties and authorised the importation of the consignments on the conditions prescribed in Finance and Commerce Department Resolution No. 4146 S-R., dated the 30th September 1896.

3. In the case of the consignments of class (c) the Chief Commissioner caused enquiries to be made for the purpose of ascertaining whether the trade of importing paints which contained practically no lead or zinc was a fraudulent one, in other words whether the persons who bought these paints were imposed upon or whether they were aware when they bought the paints that they contained practically no lead or zinc. The result of the enquiry was to show that the persons who bought these paints were aware of the adulteration to which they were subjected and that no fraud was practised on them by the importers. Under these circumstances the Lieutenant Governor remitted the penalties and permitted the importation of the consignments on the condition that the proportion of lead or zinc contained in each drum was marked on it.

No. 84-8, dated 4th May 1897.

From—G. C. Knyvett, Esq., Chief Collector of Customs, Burma,

To—The Secretary to the Financial Commissioner, Burma.

I have the honour to submit the report on the working of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, 1889, in Burma for the official year 1896-97 with a statement showing the number of cases dealt with under the Act during that period.

1. The total number of detentions under the Act during the year was 87 of which 84 occurred at Rangoon and 3 at Moulmein, against 74 detentions (all at Rangoon) in the previous year.

2. There were 28 detentions during the year under section 10, sub-section 2, clause (f), of the Act which requires all piece-goods to be stamped with their lengths, while in the preceding year there were 47 such detentions. Shippers are gradually becoming more careful to comply with the provisions of the law.

In 22 cases moderate fines were imposed on the importers and the goods were released after having been duly stamped under Customs supervision. In the majority of these cases the goods had come from the United Kingdom. In the remaining 6 cases the goods, which were continuation shipments of goods on which fines had already been imposed, were passed with a warning after the requirements of the law had been carried out.

3. Under the head of "false trade descriptions" there was an increase from one detention in 1895-96 to 17 detentions in 1896-97. Of the latter year's cases, three were consignments of cotton thread on cards from Calcutta. All of these cases occurred at Moulmein. The thread was held to be falsely described in regard to length, because each card was marked with the figures "8" and "50," the former believed to be intended to represent the quality and the latter the number of yards of thread on the card, although neither the word "warranted" nor the word "yards" appeared on the card as in an instance which occurred in 1895-96 at Rangoon, whereas the thread was found on measurement to average from 6 to 10 yards in the first consignment, from 17 to 21¼ yards in the second, and from 8 to 10¼ yards in the third. Penalties of Rs. 72, Rs. 48 and Rs. 100, respectively, were imposed on the importers, with a redemption fine in each case of Re. 1 in lieu of confiscation. In the first case the penalty and fine were paid and the goods were released after the ends of the cards had been cut off under Customs supervision. In the second case also the penalty and fine were paid but the goods are still lying in the Customs warehouse at Moulmein, while in the third case the penalties have not been paid and the goods are consequently still under detention. The remaining 14 cases were consignments of paints, the descriptions of the kegs containing which were held by the Rangoon Custom House to be false trade descriptions. These paints were branded and declared as "red lead," "white lead," and "white zinc" paints, it being thereby inferred that the contents were pure lead or zinc, but on analysis by the Chemical Examiner they were found to contain very varying and in some instances almost infinitesimal percentages of red lead, white lead, and white zinc, respectively, the balance being described as composed, for example, of so much sulphate of barium or (in one case) of an "organic colouring matter and brick dust." Ten of the consignments were subjected to penalties ranging from Rs. 50 to Rs. 1,000 and to redemption fines in lieu of confiscation ranging from Rs. 10 to Rs. 1,930, and the orders of the Chief Collector of Customs imposing these penalties were upheld on appeal to the Financial Commissioner as Chief Customs authority. The penalties were paid in each case. Subsequently, however, certain of the consignments were allowed to be dealt with under the ruling of the Government of India contained in Customs Circular No. XXII of 1896, and on the importers causing the description on the kegs to be altered in accordance with the terms of that circular, under customs supervision, the goods were released and the penalties were remitted by order of the Chief Commissioner except in one case where the importer of the goods had in the meantime been allowed to re-ship them to Europe. The whole of the lots of paint that were allowed to be passed contained a fair percentage of the genuine article. In a few cases in which the percentage of foreign matter was very high, the final orders of the Local Government have not yet been received (vide correspondence ending with my letter No. 931-5, dated the 15th March 1897). In four cases towards the end of the year no fines were imposed and the goods were passed after being correctly labelled in accordance with Customs Circular No. XXII of 1896.

4. There were 42 cases of detention under section 10, sub-section 1, clause (c), of the Act against 26 cases in 1895-96 for non-description or false description of place of origin. In 20 of the cases, as some attempt had been made to comply with the law, no penalty was imposed and the goods were released after having been duly stamped with the name of the country of origin. In the remaining 16 cases fines ranging from Rs. 5 to Rs. 100 were inflicted on the importers, and the goods were passed after the requirements of the Act had been complied with except one instance where re-shipment was allowed to the Straits Settlements.

5. None of the detentions of goods during the year were due to information received from importers or consignees. All of them were made by the Customs appraisers in the ordinary course of their duty.

6. The fines imposed for breaches of the Act during the year amounted to Rs. 8,544 of which sum Rs. 5,832 8-0 were realized. After deducting the amount of fines remitted, namely, Rs. 1,455 the fines actually realized amounted to Rs. 4,377-8-0 against Rs. 1,435 in 1895-96.

BOMBAY AND SIND.

No. 6815, dated 11th September 1897.

From—The Honourable Mr. J. Monteath, C.S.I., I.C.S., Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

I am directed to forward for the information of the Government of India a copy of the papers noted in the margin containing the reports received from the Collectors of Customs, Bombay and Karachi, on the working of the Merchandise Marks Act, IV of 1889, during the year 1896-97, together with a copy of the Resolution No. 6794, dated 10th September 1897, recorded on the reports by this Government, Memorandum from the Commissioner in Sind, No. 2647, dated 21st May 1897, and its accompaniments.

Memorandum from the Commissioner of Customs, Salt, Opium and Abkari, No. 3923, dated 19th August 1897, and its accompaniments.

No. 2647, dated 21st May 1897.

From—The Acting Commissioner in Sind,

To—The Chief Secretary to the Government of Bombay, Revenue Department.

Submitted to Government.

No. 2004, dated 3rd May 1897.

From—R. N. Coghlan, Esq., Collector of Customs, Karachi,

To—The Commissioner in Sind, Karachi.

I have the honour to submit my seventh annual report on the working of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, IV of 1889, during the year 1896-97.

2. From the attached statement it will be observed that the cases adjudicated during the year were as follows: 90 cases under clause D, 114 cases under clause E, 9 cases under clause F, of Section 10, against 102 cases under clause D, 17 cases under clause E, 17 cases under clause F, in the preceding year.

On a comparison of the figures it will be noticed that, whilst the number of cases under clauses D and F has fallen, the increase under clause E is considerable.

3. Of the 90 cases under clause D in 43 the goods were released on payment of fines, the others being passed with a warning after compliance with the law, as imposition of fine did not appear to be called for. The goods in these cases either bore English descriptions unaccompanied by indication of foreign origin, or false trade descriptions.

4. The 114 cases under clause E were either of omission of origin, or of irregular indication of origin on goods bearing the names of British or British Indian dealers. Eighty-two of these were permitted to be cleared on payment of fines, whilst the others were passed with warnings after the goods were duly marked.

The large increase under this head is due to a stricter observance of the law which, as pointed out in the Government of India Resolution No. 2914-S.R., dated 6th July 1896, requires origin to be shewn on the same label on which the name of a British or British Indian dealer on the description in English appears.

5. There were only nine infringements of clause F. These were in respect of piece-goods not marked with lengths at all, or marked with some easily effaceable material. Fines were imposed in three cases and the goods in all the cases were allowed to be passed after they had been properly marked.

6. There were no noteworthy features connected with any of the above cases which call for special mention.

7. There were no appeals during the year under report against the decisions passed.

8. All the detentions were made by Customs Officers in the ordinary course of their duty.

From—The Collector of Land Revenue, Customs and Opium, Bombay,

To—The Acting Commissioner of Customs, Salt, Opium and Abkari, Bombay.

I have the honour to submit the seventh Annual Report on the administration of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act for the official year 1896-97.

2. Statement A. The statement marked A has been prepared in accordance with the instructions of the Government of India conveyed in Government Resolution, Revenue Department. No. 8960, dated the 15th December 1890. It shows that the total number of cases under the Merchandise Marks Act during the year under report was 679 against 918 in 1895-96, showing a total decrease of 239 over last year. The decrease is mainly due to the fact that the provisions of the Act as regards the indication of origin of merchandise are more generally known and the necessity of compliance therewith more fully realized.

3. During the year under report 348 infringements under clause (d), 204 under clause (e), and 127 under clause (f) of section 18 of the Sea Customs Act, as amended by Section 10 of the Merchandise Marks Act were detected. Fines and confiscations were adjudged in 610 cases out of the total number of detected cases. In the remaining 69 cases the goods under detention were passed without penalties after such qualifications as seemed necessary as the requirements of the Act were held to have been partly complied with. In one case the goods are still under detention under an injunction of Her Majesty's High Court.

4. Except 23 cases which infringed both clauses (d) and (e), all the cases adjudicated were under clauses (d), (e) or (f) of section 18 of the Sea Customs Act as amended by Section 10 of the Merchandise Marks Act.

5. One case relating to cigarettes imported with a label alleged to be an infringement of another importer's trade mark and falling under clause (d) is still pending in Her Majesty's High Court. Several other cases of false trade descriptions under clause (d) of section 18 were detected chiefly as regards place of manufacture, material, number, weight or measure. Other false trade descriptions consisted of the application to goods of descriptive expressions in languages (mostly in English) other than those of the country of origin.

6. The 127 cases under clause (f) arose chiefly out of omissions to stamp piece-goods with their length, cognizance being taken of some cases in which a pretence of stamping was made. In all except four cases fines were adjudged and the goods passed, on the pieces being conspicuously stamped with their length at the Custom House.

7. Statement B. shows that of the total number of cases, 679, during the year under report, 38 were adjudicated by the Collector, the fines amounting to Rs. 2,197, 9 by the First Assistant Collector, the fines amounting to Rs. 46, and 632 by the First Assistant Collector of Customs in charge Prince's Dock Custom House, the total of the fines levied by him amounting to Rs. 6,655.

8. In only 11 out of the 679 adjudicated cases were the decisions appealed against, two appeals being made to the Commissioner against the orders of the Collector, and nine to the Collector against the orders of the First Assistant Collector in charge Prince's Dock. The result of these appeals was that in one case the fine of Rs. 20 imposed by the First Assistant Collector in charge Prince's Dock was reduced to Rs. 10 by the Collector. In the remaining ten, the order passed in each case was confirmed by the appellate authority. The total recoveries under fines and penalties in lieu of confiscation amounted to Rs. 8,242, showing an increase of Rs. 693 over the last year's realizations which amounted to Rs. 7,549.

9. Statement C. During the year under report, 33,609 packages of different kinds of goods, 3,131 bundles and plates of steel and iron, 288 bars of iron and 5,155 bars of steel were detained. The Statement C shows in detail the disposal of the detained packages.

10. With the exception of those noted below, none of the cases adjudicated during the year under report presented any features of special interest or importance.

(1) Messrs. * * * * * imported some corn flour from Singapore on which free entry was claimed on the ground that the flour was manufactured in Bombay. When the goods were examined, the tins were found to bear a label as follows:

G. H. & Co.'s
Patent Corn Flour,
Odessa
Victoria Garden Road,
Royal Starch Works,
Duncan Road.

The importers, on being informed that if the corn flour was Indian the above label constituted a false trade description within the meaning of the Merchandise Marks Act, thought it advisable to exonerate themselves by alleging that the flour was Russian, thus foregoing the claim to free entry. The allegation was primâ facie incredible and further inquiry conclusively showed that the flour was manufactured and packed at Bombay. The corn flour was confiscated subject to a substantive redemption penalty which was not paid. The corn flour was therefore sold after destroying the labels, and the sale proceeds credited to Government.

(2) Several merchants imported separate consignments of grey dhotis manufactured in England and stamped in rough Gujarati characters "Bengali," "Padampore," and "Radhanagore," the object in applying these stamps being undoubtedly to induce purchasers to believe that the goods were hand-made Indian cloths of well known makes. All the consignments were confiscated subject to redemption on payment of substantial penalties, and the importers were required to stamp on the cloths the words "manufactured in England" in the same language as that of the fraudulent marks.

(3) A third case is more or less typical of the methods of certain manufacturers and importers of German goods. Messrs. * * * * imported a consignment of German made clinical thermometers, marked with the words "5 minutes," "1 minute," or "1½ minutes." On being tested, the thermometers were found not to register the temperature of the human body in the time stated, and the marking was held to constitute a false trade description. Furthermore the name "F. B. Foster and Sons" was cut into the glass, while the country of origin was so indicated as to be readily effaceable. That this difference in the method of marking was not accidental, and that the indication of origin was intended to be removed, was conclusively established by the fact that the invoice description of the goods contained a statement to the effect made in Germany washable.

A substantial fine was levied, and the thermometers were confiscated subject to redemption for reshipment to Germany on payment of a penalty. As the redemption penalty was not paid, the thermometers were destroyed in due course.

11. As in previous years, the bulk of the work of adjudication fell upon the First Assistant Collector of Customs in charge of the Prince's Dock Custom House, Mr. Jehangeer Dosabhai Framjee. The small number of appeals lodged against his decisions, and the fact that in every instance the latter were upheld, amply testify to the intelligence and care with which that officer administered the Act. The appraising, gauging, and inspecting staff performed their duties on the whole satisfactorily.

Submitted to Government in the Revenue Department.

2. The number of detentions under the Merchandise Marks Act during the year under report was 679 as against 918 in the previous year, and 352 in 1894-95. The decrease in 1896-97 is due to the fact that the provisions of the Act regarding the indication of origin are more generally understood and complied with.

3. Fines and confiscations were adjudged in 610 cases, and the total recoveries under fines and penalties in lieu of confiscations were Rs. 8,292 compared with Rs. 7,599 in the previous year.

4. In every case in which appeals were preferred, the decisions appealed against were upheld. This fact testifies to the efficient working of the Act.

5. The appraising, gauging and inspecting staff worked well, and Mr. Jehangir Dosabhai Framji, First Assistant Collector of Customs in charge of the Prince's Dock Custom House, on whom the bulk of the work falls, fully deserves the high encomium bestowed on him by the Collector.

Memorandum from the Commissioner of Customs, Salt, Opium and Abkari, No. 3923, dated 19th August 1897.—Submitting a report No. C.—14357, dated 16th idem, from the Collector of Land Revenue, Customs and Opium, Bombay, on the administration of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act, IV of 1889, during the year 1896-97.

RESOLUTION.—In the year under report 892 cases of breaches of provisions of the Merchandise Marks Act were dealt with at Bombay and Karachi as compared with 1,054 cases in the preceding year. There was an increase of 77 in the total number of cases dealt with at Karachi, principally in those falling under clause (e) of section 18 of Act VIII of 1878, as amended by section 10 of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act. This increase is attributed to a stricter enforcement of the law which requires origin to be shown on the same label on which the name of a British or British Indian dealer or the description in English appears. On the other hand, there was a decrease of 239 in the number of cases dealt with at Bombay, which is mainly due to the fact that the provisions of the Act as regards the indication of origin of merchandise are now generally understood and complied with. In Karachi no appeals were preferred during the year under report. In only 11 of the 679 cases adjudicated in Bombay were appeals preferred, and in all these cases the decisions appealed against were upheld.

2. Government notice with pleasure the praise bestowed by the Collector of Land Revenue, Customs and Opium, Bombay, and the Commissioner of Customs, Salt, Opium and Abkari on the appraising, gauging and inspecting staff and specially on Mr. Jehangir Dosabhai Framji, on whom the bulk of the work of adjudication fell.

3. A copy of the papers and of this Resolution should be forwarded to the Government of India for information.

Read the following letter :

From W. B. AYLING, Esq., Acting Collector of Tanjore, to the Secretary to the Commissioner of Salt, Abkári and Separate Revenue, dated 17th May 1897, No. 2250-Rev.

I have the honour to report on the working of the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889) during 1896-97. A statement in the form prescribed in Board's Proceedings, No. 29, dated 30th January 1891, showing the cases disposed of during the year is enclosed.

2. In the year under report, there was only one case of infringement of the provisions of the Act against two in the previous year, two cases containing 400 pieces of cambric which were imported into Negapatam from Penang were detained, as none of the pieces was stamped with the length thereof in standard yards (section 10, sub-section 2 (f) (i). As that was the first mistake of the importer which came to notice, the consignment was allowed to be cleared after stamping the pieces with their lengths in English numerals.

3. During the year, there was no instance of importation of goods bearing a counterfeit trade mark or a false trade description.

4. The working of the Act appears to have been satisfactory.

Read also the following letter :

From J. N. ATKINSON, Esq., Acting Collector of Sea Customs, Madras, to the Secretary to the Commissioner of Salt, Abkári and Separate Revenue, dated 18th June 1897, No. 4027-G.

I have the honour to submit the following report on the working of the Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889) at this port during the year 1896-97, and to enclose the usual statement showing the number of cases dealt with under the Act during the year.

2. There has been a very considerable increase in the number of detections during the year, the total being 205 cases against 99 detected last year, or an increase of 104 cases due to the larger number of packages opened, which were 8,775 as against 3,711.

3. No outside information was received which lead to the detections of any case.

4. The cases brought to light are classified as follows :

	Cases.
Under section 10, clause (d)	76
„ „ „ (e)	72

and involved provisions, paper, paints and oils, turpentine, dry colours, medicines, lametta, gilt thread, glassware, hardware, clocks and watches, beer, wine and spirits, piece-goods, yarn, &c. I shall now proceed to detail some of the most important of them.

5. In all the cases dealt with, confiscation was ordered, but in three the goods were destroyed, in twelve they were permitted to be reshipped, and in one they were abandoned and sold on behalf of Government. Twenty-two importations of foreign yarn were reeled with the following result. In eighteen cases the average lengths of the hanks were found to be correct, but in four cases they were considerably short of that required by the Government of India Notification. Two of these were grey yarn from Ceylon and two Turkey red yarn from Germany. The former were confiscated, but allowed to be reshipped on payment of penalties, and of the latter one has been confiscated and directed to be reshipped (April 1st), while the other is still pending.

6. Of the cases under clause (d), seven were in respect of turpentine imported with the words " turpentine " or " genuine turpentine " stencilled on the drums. The oils were tested and found to be adulterated and confiscation ensued with the usual redemption penalties which were paid and the goods were then passed into town with the drums marked with the word "adulterated." The penalties amounted to Rs. 750—

(1) Six importations of what was declared to be linseed oil were marked "double boiled oil" or "raw oil" on the drums. The oil was tested and found mainly to contain mineral oils with little or no linseed in them. They were confiscated but allowed to be removed after the word "adulterated" had been marked on the drums while fines amounting to Rs. 550 were inflicted.

(2) Nine consignments of white zinc powder had the casks marked "white zinc." The powders were found to be adulterated and were confiscated but allowed to be stamped "adulterated" and passed on payment of penalties amounting to Rs. 600.

(3) A consignment of white zinc powder was stencilled with the words "white zinc powder reduced." The powder was found to be impure and the term "reduced" not being at that time considered a sufficient qualification, the word "adulterated" was stamped on the casks without penalty and the powder passed.

(4) The description "white zinc paint" on two consignments of 400 kegs was objected to, as the paint was, on analysis, found to be adulterated. The kegs were ordered to be marked with the word "adulterated" and passed, fines amounting to Rs. 150 being inflicted.

(5) A parcel of labels marked "white zinc paint" intended to replace defaced labels on the above kegs of adulterated paint and imported with the paint was abandoned by the importer, and destroyed, as the importer declined to qualify them with the term "adulterated".

(6) The kegs in a consignment of red lead were stencilled with the words "red lead" and the article was found, on analysis, to be adulterated. The kegs were marked "adulterated" before removal from the Custom-house on a penalty of Rs. 57-8-0.

(7) Two consignments of white lead were found marked "white lead reduced," the qualification being considered to be insufficient, the word "adulterated" was ordered to be stamped on the casks without penalty before removal from the Custom-house.

(8) In seven importations of lemon chrome the colours were found to be impure. The labels on the packets contained in four of the consignments were found marked "lemon chrome." The word "adulterated" was stamped on the packets and the goods passed on payment of fines amounting to Rs. 60. In the remaining three cases, the labels were printed with the words "best lemon yellow," on the outer side and "best lemon chrome," inside so that the wrappers had only to be reversed for the description "best lemon chrome," to be seen. The wrappers were ordered to be stamped "adulterated" on both sides and the goods passed on payment of penalties amounting to Rs. 35.

(9) Subsequent to the disposal of the above cases, the decision of the Government of India on the question as to the trade descriptions which should be affixed under the Indian Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889) on packages containing adulterated goods, such as oils turpentine and paints was received, and the term "reduced" is now accepted as signifying adulteration.

(10) In two consignments, the wrappers used in packing gilt lametta and wire were printed with the descriptions "gold lametta" and "goldwire", respectively. The descriptions on the wrappers were qualified with the words "silver gilt" or "imitation" and small penalties imposed.

(11) The reels in two other consignments of gilt lametta were stampted "1,000 yards" while on reeling them, they were found to be from 40 to 160 yards short of the lengths marked on them. In one case the description was removed and the goods passed on payment of a fine of Rs. 125. In the other case, the goods were reshipped at the request of the importer and on payment of a penalty of Rs. 75 for the importation.

(12) The paper wrappers of gilt thread packets in four consignments were printed with the description "gold thread" which was false. They were stamped with the words "silver gilt" or "imitation" before being passed. Small penalties were levied in two cases and the others were passed with a warning.

(13) One consignment of gilt thread was stamped with the words "silver thread on silk deep gold." The Chemical Examiner having certified that there was no gold and that the thread was composed of silver alloy and copper coiled round silk, the packets were stamped "imitation" and the description "deep gold" removed on payment of a penalty of Rs. 20.

(14) Strips of paper printed with the words "gilt silver" were pasted over the words "best gold" on the wrappers on packets in three consignments of gold thr[illegible] strips were capable of being easily removed by the application of a little moisture when the original objectionable description "best gold" would be left, the wrappers were stamped "silver gilt" and fines to the extent of Rs. 93-10-0 imposed. In one of the cases an appeal was made to the Board which was rejected.

(15) In six consignments of gilt thread, the English description used was quite correct, but two others in Tamil and Telugu were printed at both ends of the wrappers described the article as "best gold thread on silk"; these descriptions were removed and the importers fined Rs. 307-12-0.

(16) In five consignments, the wrappers put on gilt thread packets bore the words "best gold thread" printed in large and conspicuous letters, but with the word "silver" in very small and indistinct type between "gold" and thread." The word "gold" was removed and "silver gilt" stamped on the packets before the goods were passed and fines amounting to Rs. 366-3-0 imposed.

(17) In three consignments of dyes (roccaline), the vernacular description on the labels pasted on the tins described the contents as "fast sticklac dye for colouring silk." Analysis proved, however, that the article was not a sticklac, but an aniline dye. The objectionable description was removed and penalties of Rs. 325 imposed.

(18) The labels on the bottles of two importations of sandalwood oil were printed with the words "Oleum santali." On analysis proving that the oil was not genuine, it was confiscated. In one case, the oil was allowed to be mixed with ordinary hair oil under customs supervision on payment of a penalty of Rs. 50. In the other case, the oil was destroyed and the importer fined Rs. 20.

(19) There were eight importations of olive oil, all of which were found to be impure. As the labels on the bottles bore the false descriptions "fine sublime olive oil" they were orders to be removed or stamped with the word "adulterated" as the importer desired, and small penalties imposed.

(20) In a consignment of note paper put up in packets purporting to be ream-packets examination disclosed that the inner packets contained only 100 sheets each, but with the words "quarter ream" printed on them. As each quarter ream was short by 20 sheets, the words "quarter ream" were removed on payment of a penalty of Rs. 125.

(21) Another importation of note paper had the packets distinctly labelled "one ream" each, while each really contained 400 sheets only. The paper was confiscated but allowed to be passed into town on payment of a penalty and on removal of the words "one ream."

(22) There were two consignments of 50 bales of grey yarn from Ceylon. Hanks from these were tested in accordance with the Government of India Notification with the result that they were found shorter than the standard length. The goods were confiscated but allowed to be reshipped to the port of original shipment on payment of a penalty.

There were 72 infringements under clause (c).

(23) A consignment of German tobacco bore English descriptive words with the name of the German town of manufacture instead of the country of origin on the labels. The words "made in Germany" were permitted to be stamped on the labels on payment of a nominal penalty.

(24) The labels on the ream packets of two consignments of Belgium note paper bore English descriptions without the required indication of the country of origin which was ordered to be stamped on the imposition of a penalty of Rs. 5 in each case.

(25) A consignment of Italian foolscap paper was imported with the sheets bearing a representation of Britannia on one side and the words "extra strong" on the other without the country of origin. The paper was confiscated but allowed to be reshipped on payment of a penalty of Rs. 50.

(26) The sheets in a consignment of Belgium-made note paper were water lined on the left hand top corner with the words "under quarter tola" without any indication of the country of origin. The case was ordered to be reshipped on payment of a small fine.

(27) Three consignments of Dutch cheese were imported with English descriptive labels. The country of origin was allowed to be stamped on them on payment of small penalties. A fourth consignment in which ball cheese of German origin but intended to imitate Dutch cheese bore an English description on the labels, without the name of the country of origin to qualify it. This consignment was permitted to be reshipped and a penalty of Rs. 15 imposed.

(28) Two consignments of Dutch margarine and butterine bore English words without any indication of the country of origin. The tins were similar to those in which butter is usually sent out. They were ordered to be stamped with the words "Margarine" and "Butterine", respectively, and "made in Holland" on payment of a small penalty in each case.

(29) In two consignments of German lavender water, the bottles were moulded with the English words "lavender water" without any indication of the country of origin. The consignments were reshipped to the port of shipment on payment of fines amounting to Rs. 50.

(30) Boxes of Italian cards and envelopes contained in a case were printed with English descriptive words without any indication of the country of manufacture. The words "made in Italy" were ordered to be stamped on them on payment of a small penalty.

(31) There were five consignments of Belgium sheet and silver plate glass, and the boxes which contained them were stamped with English words but without the required indication of the country of origin. This was ordered to be done on payment of fines amounting to Rs. 45-8-0.

(32) Two importations of Belgium-made crown glass bore English descriptions and the words "made in France" to show the country of origin. As this would have enabled the importers to sell inferior Belgium glass as French glass, which is a superior article, they were fined and allowed to pass the consignments on removing the words "made in France" and stamping the name of the country of origin conspicuously alongside the English descriptions.

(33) Thre were two importations of foreign made glass bottles, one moulded with the name of a British Indian dealer, and the other with the words "not to be taken" but without any indication of the country of the origin. The former consignment was reshipped on a penalty of Rs. 20 and in the latter the bottles were destroyed.

(34) In a consignment of Japan made clocks, the labels on the back boards were in the English language without any indication of the country of origin. The words "made in Japan" were allowed to be stamped on them on payment of a nominal penalty.

(35) There were two importations of Swiss watch dials and Geneva watches with the names of British Indian dealers on the dials, but without the required indication of country of origin. In the former case, the goods were confiscated, but the importer was allowed to redeem and reship them on payment of a penalty of Rs. 5. This penalty not having been paid, the goods were destroyed at the request of the importer. In the other, the works only were passed to the importer who elected to return the dials to the shippers to have the name of the country of origin engraved on them. This was allowed on a small penalty.

(37) The labels on two consignments of German beer bore English words in large characters and the country of origin in very small ones. They were allowed to be stamped conspicuously with the words "made in Germany" on payment of a small penalty.

(38) The bottles contained in a case of Italian brandy bore two separate labels—one with English words and the other with the country of origin. The country of origin was ordered to be stamped on the main label with a warning.

(39) In a consignment of ordinary French brandy, the capsules were marked with the name of a British Indian dealer without the required indication of country of origin. The capsules were removed and the goods passed with a waraing.

(40) Another consignment of 50 cases of German brandy had the words Vieux Cognac and La Esmeralda on the corks without any qualification as to the country of manufacture. A penalty of Re. 1 per case was charged for the importation and the goods were, at the request of the importers, permitted to be reshipped.

(41) In a consignment of wines of German manufacture, the labels on the bottles were printed with English words but without any indication as to the country of origin. The labels were qualified with the words "made in Germany" without penalty.

(42) In a consignment of 25 cases port wine and 5 cases sherry of German origin, there were two labels on each bottle—one bore English descriptive words and the other, which was a detached slip, showed the country of origin to be "Germany." The main label was stamped with the words "made in Germany" and the goods passed on payment of Re. 1 per case.

(43) Fifteen cases of German whisky bore only English words on their labels without the indication of the country of origin. The labels were stamped "made in Germany" on payment of a fine of Rs. 2 per case, it being the second offence against the importer.

(44) The bottles in ten cases of Belgium gin had labels with English words only printed on them. The words "made in Belgium" were stamped on payment of a fine of Re. 1 per case.

(45) Three cases of samples of German liquors were imported with English labels on the bottles. The goods were confiscated and the importer fined for the importation and an option allowed him to redeem them. He failed to do this and they were sold and the proceeds credited to Government.

There were 55 cases under clause (f)—

(46) In 33 of these the yardage was not stamped on the pieces and in the other 22 the stamping was insufficient. In all these cases the lengths were allowed to be stamped on payment of small penalties in fifteen cases without penalty in the others.

(47) The usual statement showing the number of cases dealt with under the different clauses of section 18 of the Act is attached.

Resolution—No. 328, dated the 5th August 1897.

The reports of the Collector of Sea Customs, Madras, and the Collector of Tanjore on the administration of the Merchandise Marks Act (IV of 1889) during 1896-97 are submitted to Government. There were no detentions under the Act in the other districts.

2. The total number of detentions under the Act during the year under report was 204 against 101 in 1895-96. Of these, 76 were cases of false trade descriptions under section 18 (d) of the Sea Customs Act as amended by section 10 of the Merchandise Marks Act, 72 were under section 18 (e) which requires the country of manufacture to be stated on the labels of certain goods, and 56 were under section 18 (f) which requires all piece-goods to be stamped with their length. The following statement shows the particulars of detention:

Districts and ports.	Detention ordered.	Detention followed by confiscation.	Detention followed by release.		Detention ordered on information received.	Detention ordered without information.
			With fine.	Without fine.
Madras	203	5	157	41	...	205
Tanjore (Negapatam) ...	1	...	...	1	...	1
Total ...	204	5	157	42	...	204

The number of cases in which goods were detained under the Act in the port of Madras was 203 against 99 in the previous year, the large increase being reported to be due to the larger number of packages opened. Of these cases, 76 were of false trade descriptions and referred chiefly to importations of turpentine, paints, oils, dry colours and gilt thread. Prior to the receipt of the decision of the Government of India communicated in G. O., No. 530, Revenue, dated 19th October 1896, on the question as to the trade descriptions which should be affixed under the Act to packages containing adulterated goods, the term "reduced" was not accepted at this port as equivalent to "adulterated." Penalties were imposed in 66 cases of false trade descriptions; three consignments were allowed to be reshipped on payment of fines; in five cases either no penalty was imposed or a warning was considered sufficient and in two others the goods were destroyed.

3. In 72 cases detention was ordered under clause (e) of imported liquors, glassware, provisions and sundry goods on the ground that, while they had been made or produced beyond the limits of the United Kingdom and British India, the labels on them were in English either without any, or with insufficient, indication of the country of origin. Fines were imposed in most cases and the goods were passed after being properly stamped; in seven cases the goods were allowed to be reshipped on payment of fines; in two cases the goods were destroyed and in two others the consignments were passed with a warning. In three cases the importer having failed to redeem the goods, they were sold and the proceeds credited to Government.

4. The remaining 55 cases of detention in Madras were under clause (f). Of these, 33 were cases in which the yardage was not stamped on the pieces and in the remaining 22 cases the stamping was insufficient. Small fines were imposed in 15 cases and the goods were passed after being stamped with their lengths.

5. Only one case is reported from Tanjore under clause (f). It related to a consignment of cambric imported from the Straits Settlements into Negapatam; the goods were passed after they had been properly stamped.

Bills introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for making Laws and Regulations, Reports of Select Committees presented to the Council, and Bills published under Rule 23.

GOVERNMENT OF INDIA.

LEGISLATIVE DEPARTMENT.

The following Bill was introduced in the Council of the Governor General of India for the purpose of making Laws and Regulations on the 5th November, 1897:

No. 19 of 1897.

A Bill to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886.

WHEREAS it is expedient to further amend III of 1886. the Petroleum Act, 1886, It is hereby enacted as follows:

Short title and commencement.

1. (1) This Act may be called the Petroleum Act, 1897; and

(2) It shall come into force at once.

III of 1886.

Substitution of new definition of "petroleum" in section 3, Act XII, 1886.

2. In section 3 of the Petroleum Act, 1886, for clause (1) the following shall be substituted, namely:

'(1) "petroleum" includes also—

(a) the liquids commonly known by the names of rock oil, Rangoon oil, Burma oil, kerosine, paraffine oil, mineral oil, petroline, gasoline, benzol, benzoline and benzine;

(b) any inflammable liquid which is made from petroleum, coal, schist, shale, peat or any other bituminous substance, or from any product of petroleum; and

(c) any liquid or viscous mixture with other substances of any of the liquids aforesaid:

but it does not include any oil ordinarily used for lubricating purposes and having its flashing point at or above two hundred degrees of Fahrenheit's thermometer:.

Addition of new sub-section to section 4, Act XII, 1886.

3. To section 4 of the said Act the following sub-section shall be added, namely:

"(3) The Governor General in Council may, by notification in the official Gazette, alter or add to the schedule to this Act by prescribing new or varied tests, and directions for preparing and using them; and all references in this Act to the schedule, when altered or added to, shall be construed as referring to the schedule as so altered or added to for the time being."

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE necessity for taking precautions to meet the case of the importation, possession or transport of paints, varnishes and other similar substances containing inflammable material has been brought to the notice of the Government of India and formed the subject of correspondence with Her Majesty's Secretary of State. It is in consequence now proposed, by clause 2 of this Bill, to make the provisions of the Petroleum Act, 1886 (XII of 1886), apply to such substances by extending the definition of "petroleum" so as to include any liquid or viscous mixture with other substances of any of the liquids already referred to therein. The opportunity has, it will be observed, been taken to improve the form of the whole definition, but the only material alteration consists in the addition of the words which have, for the sake of convenience, been italicised.

2. Experience has also shown that there are tests and apparatus, other than those prescribed by the Schedule to the Act, which might with advantage be used in certain cases. The addition to section 4 contemplated by clause 3 of the Bill is, therefore, designed to enable the Governor General in Council from time to time, by notification in the Gazette of India, to alter or add to that Schedule.

The 27th October, 1897.

Secretary to the Government of India.

1866	XIV	The Indian Post Office Act, 1866.	The whole.
1882	III	The Seditious Publications Act, 1882.	So much as is unrepealed.
1895	III	The Indian Criminal Law Amendment Act, 1895.	Section 7.
1896	XVI	The Indian Post Office Act (1866) Amendment Act, 1896.	The whole.
1897	XIV	The Indian Short Titles Act, 1897.	So much as relates to Acts III of 1895 and XVI of 1896.

STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS.

THE present Post Office Act was enacted in 1866, and has been amended since that date by the addition of three sections only. In 1882, section 60-A was added by Act III of 1882 authorising any officer of the Post Office, empowered in this behalf by the Governor General in Council, to search for newspapers regarding which a notification has been published under the Sea Customs Act. In 1895, Section 66 was added by Act III of that year, providing powers, in accordance with the general policy of the Postal Union, for dealing with fictitious or previously-used postage stamps of other countries found on letters or other articles received from abroad; and last year a further section was added by Act XVI of 1896 authorizing the recovery of customs duty, when paid in advance by the Post Office, in the same manner as postage under the Act.

During the last thirty years certain defects and omissions in the Act of 1866 have been brought to light, and experience has shown that express provisions of law, as contained in the Act, in respect of various matters are not suited to the present requirements of postal work. It has also been found that further protection is needed by the Post Office and further powers to enable its officers, for instance, to deal with articles posted in contravention of the Act. Various schemes, moreover, which have been introduced of late years such as postal insurance and the value payable and money order systems have remained outside the provisions of the Act, and now require to be based on a legislative enactment. Finally with the development of the Post Office, and the knowledge of the course of English postal legislation, the necessity for some new penalties has become apparent.

The present Bill proposes to supply the defects and omissions which have been brought to notice in the Act of 1866, and to confer the protection and powers which have been found necessary in the extension and increase of postal business. It includes within its scope postal insurance, the value payable post, and the Post Office money order system, and declares and limits the liability of Government in respect of these matters. The Bill is to a large extent an enabling Bill reserving to Government the power of dealing by rule with numerous questions of postal practice and procedure affecting the public.

A number of the sections of the Post Office Act, 1866, have been omitted as unnecessary, the drafting of the sections retained has been in a great measure revised, and the subject matter has been re-arranged. The material alterations and additions are referred to in the notes on clauses given below.

For facility of reference a comparative table has been prepared showing how each section of the Post Office Act, 1866, has been dealt with, and is appended to this statement.

Notes on clauses.

Clause 2.—All the definitions in this clause are new, but introduce no change in existing practice. It has not been necessary to reproduce any of the definitions in the Post Office Act, 1866.

Clause 6.—In this clause the provisions of the corresponding section in the Post Office Act, 1866, in respect of the liability of officers of the Post Office have been amended.

Clause 9.—This clause embodies the provisions as to the registration of newspapers which were introduced last year.

Clause 12.—In this clause the provisions of the corresponding section of the Post Office Act, 1866, in respect of the recovery of postage have been amended.

Clauses 14 and 15.—These clauses are new and reproduce the provisions of the English law as to Post Office marks being primâ facie evidence of the facts denoted.

Clause 18.—In this clause the provisions of the corresponding section of the Post Office Act, 1866, have been amended, so as to make it clear that the redelivery of postal articles, once posted, may be made without reference to the consent of the addressee.

Clause 20.—This is a new clause, supplying an omission in the Post Office Act, 1866, and prohibiting the transmission by post of obscene and indecent articles.

Clause 22.—This is a new clause, founded on the provisions of the English postal law, reserving the power of postponing the despatch or delivery of certain postal articles other than letters, postcards or newspapers.

Clause 23.—This is a new clause, founded on the provisions of the English postal law, providing powers for officers of the Post Office to deal with postal articles posted in contravention of the Act.

Clause 25.—In this clause the provisions of the corresponding section of the Post Office Act, 1866, have been amended, so as to empower search to be made for any goods notified under the Sea Customs Act, 1878, which may be contained in postal articles.

Clause 26.—This clause, based on the analogy of the Indian Telegraph Act, 1885, gives power to Government to order in certain cases the interception of postal articles.

Clauses 30 to 33.—These are new clauses providing for the insurance of postal articles, and declaring and limiting the liability of Government to pay compensation in respect of such articles.

Clauses 34 and 35.—These are new clauses providing for the transmission by post of value payable postal articles.

Clause 39.—In this clause the provisions of the corresponding section of the Post Office Act, 1866, have been amended, so as to provide that money and the sale proceeds of saleable property, found in postal articles which cannot be delivered, shall be credited to Government after such money or property has been detained for a year in a Dead Letter Office.

Clause 42.—By this clause the provisions of the corresponding section of the Post Office Act, 1866, have been amended, so as to provide that the gratuities payable to masters of ships for carrying ship letters may be fixed from time to time by Government.

Clauses 43 to 46.—These clauses are new. They provide for the remitting of small sums of money through the Post Office by means of money orders, and clause 44 prescribes the period after which the amount of a money order which cannot be paid to the payee or returned to the remitter becomes forfeited.

Clause 47.—This clause is new, and provides a summary procedure for the recovery of the amount of a money order wrongly paid to any person, if he refuses to refund the amount.

Clause 48.—This is a new clause exempting Government and officers of the Post Office from liability in respect of delay, etc., in the payment of money orders, in accordance with the English law and the present rules on the subject.

Clause 50.—This clause provides a new penalty, introduced with the object of preventing desertion on the part of mail-runners.

Clause 51.—This clause provides a new penalty, introduced with the object of preventing false entries being made in a postman's register with the intention of making it appear that he has visited villages which he has not visited.

Clause 53.—This clause provides a new penalty supplying an omission in the Post Office Act, 1866. The opening of a letter by an officer of the Post Office contrary to his duty, or the wilful delaying of a letter is now made punishable in accordance with the English law.

Clauses 58 and 59.—In sub-clause 2 of each of these clauses the provision of the corresponding sections of the Post Office Act, 1866, has been altered in respect of continuing breaches of the privilege of the Post Office.

Clause 61.—This clause provides a higher penalty for sending dangerous and injurious substances by post than the corresponding section in the Post Office Act, 1866. The provisions of the English law have been followed.

Clause 62.—This clause provides a new penalty, taken from the English Post Office Protection Act of 1884, for the protection of letter-boxes and their contents.

Clause 63.—This clause provides a new penalty, taken from the same English Act, to prevent the disfiguring of post offices and letter-boxes.

Clause 64.—This clause is new, but the penalty is the same as in section 43 of the Post Office Act, 1866, which deals with false certificates under that Act.

Clause 69.—This clause provides a new penalty, taken from a recent English Post Office Act, for diverting letters from the person to whom they are addressed.

Clause 70.—This clause extends the provisions of the corresponding section in the Post Office Act, 1866, so as to cover the case of attempts to commit offences.

Clause 72.—This clause introduces a new provision making the authority of the proper postal officials necessary to the institution of prosecutions for offences under the Act.

The Hon'ble Major-General Sir E. H. H. Collen, K.C.I.E., C.B.

The Hon'ble A. C. Trevor, C.S.I.

LEPERS BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Bill to provide for the segregation of pauper lepers and the control of lepers following certain callings be referred to a Select Committee consisting of the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Mr. Sayani, the Hon'ble Mr. Nicholson, the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Pandit Suraj Kaul and the mover. He said that the Bill was introduced in the Council on the 30th July, 1896, and was circulated in the usual way for opinions. These opinions had been received, and the Bill had now arrived at the stage when it should be referred to a Select Committee. After having consulted the Hon'ble Legal Member, he now proposed that the Committee should consist of the Hon'ble Members named in the motion.

The motion was put and agreed to.

COURT-FEES ACT (1870) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ said:—"The Bill to amend the Court-fees Act of 1870 was introduced in this Council by the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn on the 8th July last, and a Select Committee was appointed, composed of the Hon'ble Sir James Westland, the Hon'ble Mr. Chalmers, the Hon'ble Sir H. Prinsep, the Hon'ble Nawab Sir Amir-ud-din Ahmad, and the Hon'ble Sir J. Woodburn. As the Hon'ble Sir J. Woodburn has taken leave and the Hon'ble Nawab Sir Amir-ud-din Ahmad has been replaced in the Council by the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Pundit Suraj Kaul, I beg leave to move that the Hon'ble Rai Bahadur Pundit Suraj Kaul be substituted on the Select Committee for the Hon'ble Nawab Sir Amir-ud-din Ahmad, and myself for the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn."

The motion was put and agreed to.

OUDH COURTS ACT (1891) AMENDMENT BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Bill to amend the Oudh Courts Act, 1891, be taken into consideration. He said:—"This Bill was introduced in this Council by the Hon'ble Sir John Woodburn on the 1st October last; and, as then explained, the present Act provides for a Court of two Judicial Commissioners, but owing to the pressure of work it will be necessary to appoint a third Judicial Commissioner for a time. The Bill therefore provides for a third Judicial Commissioner being appointed for one year in order to bring the list of appeals which have been accumulating for some time within reasonable limits. It is also provided that in the case of a difference of opinion between the two Judicial Commissioners sitting as a bench a reference shall be made to the third Judicial Commissioner, and not to the High Court at Allahabad as was the case under the Act of 1891; and the judgment will be given in accordance with the opinion of the majority of the Judges of the Court. Opportunity has also been taken to add to the law in Oudh a provision which has been taken from the Lower Burma Courts Act by which the Judicial Commissioner is empowered to make rules for the recording of judgments, and the taking of evidence, in order to shorten and simplify the procedure of the Court. This, it is hoped, will speedily dispose of the great mass of litigation now pending. The Bill is not one on which it has been found necessary to collect opinions, and I beg now to move that it be taken into consideration."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Bill be passed.

The motion was put and agreed to.

PETROLEUM BILL.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved for leave to introduce a Bill to further amend the Petroleum Act, 1886. He said:—"It has been found necessary to extend the definition of 'petroleum' as contained in the present Act so as to meet the case of the importation, possession or transport of paints, varnishes and other similar substances containing inflammable material. Accordingly an addition has been made to the definition of 'petroleum' in section 5 of the Act, after consulting experts in England. Provision has also been made with regard to the Schedule to the Act, which refers to tests and apparatus, to enable the Governor General in Council from time to time to prescribe such additional tests as may be necessary on notification in the Gazette of India by altering or adding to the Schedule."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ introduced the Bill.

The Hon'ble MR. RIVAZ moved that the Bill and Statement of Objects and Reasons be published in the Gazette of India in English, and in the local official Gazettes in English and in such other languages as the Local Governments may think fit.

The motion was put and agreed to.

INDIAN POST OFFICE BILL.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND moved for leave to introduce a Bill to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Post Office in India. He said:—

"The existing law governing the Post Office is an Act of 1866, and it is notorious that during the last thirty years the business of the Post Office has very largely expanded. The law by which the Post Office is governed, therefore, is more out of date in this sense than that of any other Department of the Government. The progress of the Post Office since 1866 has been both in developing the then existing branches of business in respect of which that legislation gave it authority and powers, and also in adding new branches to its business. Moreover, the Postal Union has brought us into close relations with foreign countries, and has laid down rules and systems of business in which we must necessarily co-operate if we are to follow the progress of the Post Office in other countries, but which were not contemplated in the Act of 1866. In that Act practically only two branches of business were contemplated. The first relates to letters and newspapers, and the Act necessarily takes no cognisance of the subsequently introduced system of postal cards and of reply postcards; reply postcards are peculiar in this respect that the sender has the privilege of sending through the Post Office the fee which has to be paid upon the reply sent to him—a procedure which was not provided for in the Act of 1866. The second branch of business referred to in the Act of 1866 is what we now call the parcel post, and so far as the existing parcel post is concerned, it is based entirely upon the legislative provisions of the Act of 1866. But the mere name given to it in the Act of 1866 is a proof of the singular anachronism, and the inadaptibility to present conditions, of the law. The parcels post is there called 'the banghy post'—a banghy being that double-headed bamboo which a coolie lays across his shoulders to bear a burden. The only conception which the Act of 1866 had of the parcel post was that of a coolie plodding his weary way along the road between his double burden, and section 14 of the Act, which lays down the rates of postage, contemplates a journey of this kind of 1,200 miles. Provisions of that sort are suitable enough for a state of the country such as that which existed in 1866, when there was less than 4,000 miles of railway open; but it is quite impossible to adopt them in 1897, when the number of miles open is 20,000. The charge according to the Act of 1866 is proportional to distance, but this reckoning has long been abandoned, and the charge is now regulated by executive order in exactly the same way as the letter post, that is to say, entirely irrespective of distance. In the case of parcels, carried over any considerable distance, the charge which the Post Office demands now is in some cases only a fifth part of the charge contemplated in the Act of 1866. Then, of the new branches of business added for which there is no legislative provision whatever, are the system of insurance, the value payable post, and money orders. These have no legislative basis at all; that is to say, the business of the Post Office is conducted under the executive orders of Government, and the result of that system is that each transaction becomes a contract between the Post Office on the one side and some individual on the other, and is regulated by the ordinary provisions of the law, exactly in the same way as a transaction between an individual and a private firm carrying on business would be regulated. The Post Office in these respects has no special powers and no special protection. Many inconveniences have arisen out of this condition of affairs. The business is far too vast to be carried on under the ordinary provisions of the law. Even a private Railway Company requires special laws, as ordinary carriers, for the conduct of its business with the public, and with a business so vast as the system of money orders and value payable parcels, it is necessary in the same way, for the conduct of business, to ask the Legislature for special powers and for special protection. It must be remembered that the Post Office in dealing with these matters has no choice whatever of its constituents. It cannot refuse any business brought to it, and the Department has to deal with many thousands—I should say rather, with many millions—of uneducated people.

"This enumeration of defects will show the direction in which it is necessary to ask the Legislature to modify the existing law. The general lines on which the Bill is based are those of a Bill which was introduced into Parliament two years ago, namely, that, apart from the provisions for protection and the special powers given, and the penalty clauses, the ordinary administration of the Department is left to be provided for by rules and regulations issued partly by the Governor General in Council and dealing with such matters as the fixing of fees, or rules, for the breach of which it is necessary to impose penalties; and partly by rules or orders issued from time to time under the authority of the Director General. The English Bill has not yet passed into law, but it has been of great assistance to us in drafting the Bill now before the Council.

"I wish now to make a few remarks on some of the sections, chiefly on those in which the old law has been modified, or which introduce new provisions on matters which are not regulated by the law of the country. The first of these is section 12—one which provides a summary procedure for the recovery of petty sums due to the Post Office. The application of this section is not very clear in the Act of 1866, or at any rate there are Magistrates in the country who declare that it is not clear. We therefore make the language of that section, and the power of the Post Office to recover sums due to it, more clear than they are in the existing law. One of the penalties which the Post Office is empowered to impose of its own motion upon persons who owe it money and refuse to pay, is that of declining to deliver to them postal articles until they do pay. Under the existing law this power may be exercised by any officer in charge of a Post Office; by the Bill proposed the power is only enforceable by the Post Master General.

"Another power which it is necessary to take is in section 14, which declares that the official marks of the Post Office—marks of date, etc.—are to be taken as primâ facie evidence of the facts which they are intended to indicate. The necessity of providing this means of giving evidence of the facts which it is necessary to establish before a Court of Justice will take any action in respect of complaints brought before it, is obvious.

"Section 18 makes a certain provision regarding the redelivery of letters once posted. The present Post Office Act provides that letters or other articles once posted may be redelivered to the sender as a matter of grace, subject to such rules as the Governor General may prescribe; and this provision it is proposed to retain in a modified shape. The declared principle of the Postal Union Convention to which India is a party is to allow the writer or sender of a letter or other article to recall it, or require that the address should be altered, at any time previous to its actual delivery, subject to the payment of certain charges and to considerations of postal convenience. The article of the Convention, however, in which this principle is laid down is permissive, and England and the Colonies, other than the Australian Colonies, have not accepted it, and India has also declined to accept it. In England it is well known that a letter or other article, once posted, cannot be recalled. In these circumstances we have not thought it right altogether to adopt the Union principle in introducing new postal legislation; but, with a view to remove a doubt which has been raised, it has been expressly provided in this Bill that if and when it is adopted the redelivery of a letter or other article in accordance with rules framed by Government can be made without reference to the consent of the addressee.

"Section 20 is a new and obviously necessary section, its object being the prohibition of the transmission of obscene and indecent articles. Another section of the law provides for their destruction.

"Section 22 gives a power to postpone parcels when the work of any post office is too much to enable the ordinary post to be despatched within time. It will be seen that this provision does not permit the postponement of newspapers; and I gather from some portions of the Public Press that a postponement or a mistake in the delivery of a newspaper is an offence of the most serious magnitude and calls into question the whole constitution not only of the Post Office but of the Government of India generally. We do not therefore in any way diminish the preference given to newspapers along with letters, but we provide that books, parcels and similar articles, if they accumulate in too great measure, may be kept back for such time as may be found necessary in the post office.

"Section 26 gives in the case of articles submitted through the Post Office the same power of interception on the part of the State as that which exists in the case of telegraphs. In this respect we copy the English law. The English Bill does not directly make any special provision of this kind, but it implies it in imposing a penalty upon a Post Office official who delays or intercepts any article otherwise than by direction of the State; and a special section is added at the end of the Bill which indicates that such powers as legally or constitutionally vest with the Governor General in Council in cases of this kind are not in any way diminished by the legislation now proposed.

"Chapter VI relates to the system of insurance and value-payable post and is, therefore, mostly new. It defines the limit and conditions of insurance which may be accepted by the Post Office.

"Chapter VII relates to undelivered articles. These, by the present law of 1866, must in every case be kept for a year before being destroyed or in any way disposed of. The result of that provision is that the post offices in this country are blocked with heaps of newspapers, magazines and trade circulars for which it is impossible to find an addressee. They have to be piled up for a whole year before any postal official can do anything to get rid of them. The provisions we intend to introduce in respect to these articles will be of a wider and more varied character, and will depend on rules which will be laid down by the Governor General in Council.

"Chapter VIII relates to ship letters: that is to say, the obligation on ship-masters generally to carry postal articles when called upon to do so. Very little change is made in the law as it at present stands in this respect.

"Chapter IX relates to money orders, and, as I have already mentioned, it is entirely new, so far as the law of the country is concerned. In 1880 the Post Office undertook the work of issuing and paying money orders, which had previously been done, under certain restricted conditions, by the civil treasuries, and the work has hitherto been carried on under the authority of the executive orders of Government. It is unnecessary at the present moment to dwell upon the popularity of the Post Office agency for the purpose of remitting small sums of money. The number of money orders issued yearly has risen from 1½ millions in 1881 to 11 millions in 1896, the average amount of each order being less than twenty rupees. We now propose to place this system on a legislative basis; and in doing this we have provided that, when neither the payee nor the remitter of a money order can be found, the amount of the money order will be forfeited to Government at the end of a year from the date of its issue. As a matter of fact, if a claim can be substantiated after the expiry of this period, the amount would always be repaid; but, with the millions of orders issued yearly, it is necessary that a legal period should be fixed beyond which claims cannot be entertained as of right, and in fixing this period at one year we have followed the regulations of the English Post Office on the subject. We have also followed the English law in exempting Government and officers of the Post Office from liability in respect of loss caused by delay in paying money orders, and have further provided, in accordance with the present rule on the subject, that Government and such officers are not liable for a wrong payment when it is caused by incorrect information given by the remitter, or by incomplete information given by him if the officer who issued the money order had reasonable grounds for believing that the information was sufficient for the purpose of identifying the payee. We have also introduced a new provision that the amount of a money order wrongly paid to any person may be recovered from him, if he refuses to refund the amount, by summary procedure, as if it were an arrear of land-revenue due from him.

"Chapter X relates to penalties. It has been found necessary in this Bill to introduce one or two new penalties. By an omission in the present law the wilful detention of a letter or other article by an officer of the Post Office is not punishable, nor is the opening of a letter by an officer of the Post Office punishable, unless it is known that this was done with the intention of fraudulently appropriating the contents. It is now provided, in accordance with the English law on the subject, that the opening of a letter by an officer of the Post Office contrary to his duty, or the wilful detention of a letter by such an officer, shall be an offence. Another new penalty has also been provided to strengthen the hands of the Post Office executive. Serious inconvenience and even loss of mails has occasionally been caused by the desertion of mail runners or by their taking leave without permission. In some parts of India difficulty is always experienced at certain seasons of the year in retaining the services of these servants of the Department, and occasions not infrequently arise when a sudden demand for labour and the offer of high wages, in connection with railway works, for instance, leads to something like a general desertion on the part of the runners employed on mail lines in the vicinity of such works. On these occasions the continuity of the mail service is imperilled, as there is no power to prevent runners from giving up their employment under the Post Office without warning. It has, therefore, been determined that the withdrawing from employ on the part of mail carriers, without permission, or without giving previous notice of one month, should be constituted an offence punishable with fine which may extend to fifty rupees.

"These are the provisions of the proposed legislation which I lay before the Council, and, in doing so, I wish, on the part both of the Hon'ble Legal Member and myself, to express our obligations to Mr. Fanshawe, Your Excellency's Director General of the Post Office. In the preparation of this Bill he has given us the most valuable assistance. The Post Office is a Department of most minute organization; and it requires very expert knowledge of the working of the Department to realize both in what respects legislation is required and to prevent what may appear to be most harmless provisions of the law from interfering with its work. Few people who receive a letter have any conception of the amount of organisation and arrangement which is necessary to enable that letter to proceed from the place where it is posted to the place of its delivery. Yet a million such articles pass every day through the Post Office addressed in half a hundred different languages and in a dozen different alphabetical characters. They are delivered, with the whole history of their transit stamped upon them, with a regularity and a punctuality which is almost perfect; the number of cases in which letters go astray, or in which they are undelivered, is an infinitesimal fraction of the number which is posted, and even of that infinitesimal fraction, in respect of only a small part can the blame be laid at the door of the Post Office.

"The legislation which I now propose to the Council will, if the Council accepts it, enable the officers who control this vast organization to maintain the perfectness of their work and to realise what has been their constant wish and effort, namely, to make the Post Office Department still more worthy of the confidence which the public place in it."

The motion was put and agreed to.

The Hon'ble SIR JAMES WESTLAND introduced the Bill.

articles, if they accumulate in too great measure, may be kept back for such time as may be found necessary in the post office.

"Section 26 gives in the case of articles transmitted through the Post Office the same power of interception on the part of the State as that which exists in the case of telegraphs. In this respect we copy the English law. The English Bill does not directly make any special provision of this kind, but it implies it in imposing a penalty upon a Post Office official who delays or intercepts any article otherwise than by direction of the State; and a special section is added at the end of the Bill which indicates that such powers as legally or constitutionally vest with the Governor General in Council in cases of this kind are not in any way diminished by the legislation now proposed.

"Chapter VI relates to the system of insurance and value-payable post and is, therefore, mostly new. It defines the limit and conditions of insurance which may be accepted by the Post Office.

"Chapter VII relates to undelivered articles. These, by the present law of 1866, must in every case be kept for a year before being destroyed or in any way disposed of. The result of that provision is that the post offices in this country are blocked with heaps of newspapers, magazines and trade circulars for which it is impossible to find an address. They have to be piled up for a whole year before any postal official can do anything to get rid of them. The provisions we intend to introduce in respect to these articles will be of a wider and more varied character, and will depend on rules which will be laid down by the Governor General in Council.

"Chapter VIII relates to ship letters: that is to say, the obligation on ship-masters generally to carry postal articles when called upon to do so. Very little change is made in the law as it at present stands in this respect.

"Chapter IX relates to money orders, and, as I have already mentioned, it is entirely new, so far as the law of the country is concerned. In 1880 the Post Office undertook the work of issuing and paying money orders, which had previously been done, under certain restricted conditions, by the civil treasuries, and the work has hitherto been carried on under the authority of the executive orders of Government. It is unnecessary at the present moment to dwell upon the popularity of the Post Office agency for the purpose of remitting small sums of money. The number of money orders issued yearly has risen from 1½ millions in 1881 to 11 millions in 1896, the average amount of each order being less than twenty rupees. We now propose to place this system on a legislative basis; and in doing this we have provided that, when neither the payee nor the remitter of a money order can be found, the amount of the money order will be forfeited to Government at the end of a year from the date of its issue. As a matter of fact, if a claim can be substantiated after the expiry of this period, the amount would always be repaid; but, with the millions of orders issued yearly, it is necessary that a legal period should be fixed beyond which claims cannot be entertained as of right, and in fixing this period at one year we have followed the regulations of the English Post Office on the subject. A Dictionary of the Economic Products of India.

BY DR. GEO. WATT, C.I.E.,

Reporter on Economic Products.

The first five volumes and Volume VI, Parts I, II, III, & IV of the Dictionary are ready at the Office of the Superintendent of Government Printing, No. 8, Hastings Street, Calcutta, and will be supplied to non-subscribers on receipt of the price for the complete set, which is R45 in India, and 3 guineas in England (exclusive of the Index, for which a separate charge will be made): packing and postage, in India, 8 annas per volume; for England, 2 rupees 6 annas per volume. For copies bound in half calf or half morocco, R6 and 8 shillings, respectively, will be charged extra for the whole set.

The Dictionary is intended to deal with the products of India—animal, vegetable, and mineral; each product being treated after a uniform plan, the paragraphs of which give the scientific, vernacular, and European names; habitat or source; history; properties and uses (both chemical and industrial); trade statistics; markets, etc. The work is arranged alphabetically according to scientific nomenclature, but commercial and important vernacular names are also given as cross-references, so that little difficulty need be experienced in finding the account of a product even when its scientific name is unknown to the reader.

An important feature of the Dictionary consists in the fact that derived information is in every instance given under quotation marks, and with a reference to the original publication. Numerous contributors have, however, furnished the results of new discoveries, and confirmed the vernacular names, so that the Dictionary is not only a complete compilation of published information, but has been brought abreast of the most recent inventions and discoveries.

Volume I contains the letters A and B, and consists of 559 royal 8vo pages; Volume II embraces the letter C in 689 pages; Volume III contains the letters D, E, F, and half of G; Volume IV, latter half of G to middle of L; and Volume V contains the latter half of L to end of O; Vol. VI (which consists of four parts), Part I, contains letters P to R. The whole work completed in nine volumes (including Parts II to IV of Vol. VI), but a tenth volume may also be issued, consisting of an Index to all the vernacular and other names contained in the Dictionary. The Index will practically be a glossary of the vernacular and European names of the plants, animals, and minerals of India, and, as such, will be a work of reference, which, it is hoped, may prove of considerable value.

From—A. U. FANSHAWE, Esq., C.S.I., Director-General of the Post Office of India,

To—The Secretary to the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

I have the honour to submit the Annual Report on the operations of the Postal Life Insurance and Monthly Allowance schemes for the year 1896-97.

2. In the year under report, as in the preceding one, no advantage was taken by the women employed by the Post Office and Telegraph Departments of the extension of the benefits of the two schemes to them.

3. During the year 223 new policies were granted of the aggregate value of Rs. 2,96,300, against 195 issued in the previous year for sums amounting in all to Rs. 2,52,550. Eleven applications for Life Insurance were refused on account of unfavourable medical reports on the lives of the applicants. Of the 223 persons who insured their lives, 43 were servants of the Telegraph Department, and the total amount of the policies issued in their favour was Rs. 93,000: the remaining 180 persons were postal servants and the aggregate amount of their policies was Rs. 2,03,300. Compared with the results of the previous year there was an increase of 31 in the number and of Rs. 46,800 in the gross amount of new policies issued in favour of Post Office servants, and a decrease of 3 in the number and of Rs. 3,050 in the gross amount of new policies issued in favour of servants of the Telegraph Department.

4. The total sum realized on account of premia on both old and new policies amounted during the year to Rs. 1,07,316 as compared with Rs. 1,01,215 in the previous year. Claims to the extent of Rs. 47,604 were discharged as compared with payments amounting to Rs. 43,074 during the preceding year, and 33 policies representing a gross assurance of Rs. 32,800 as compared with 26 policies representing Rs. 22,850 in 1895-96 either lapsed, or were surrendered or cancelled. The general results of the past two years are summarised below.

8. As in 1895-96 the scheme of monthly allowances made practically no advance, only two new contracts for immediate monthly allowances being entered into. There were thus at the end of the year only nine contracts for monthly allowances, the total of the monthly allowances contracted for being Rs. 135-8-0.

12. During the year under review, with the sanction of the Chief Commissioner, Central Provinces, a life annuity of Rs. 5-8-0 per month was purchased under Article 867 of the Civil Service Regulations, by the several municipalities in the Saugor District in favour of an Octroi Daroga of the Garhakota Municipality.

STAMPS.

No. 5036-S. R.

The 12th November, 1897.

RESOLUTION—By the Government of India, Finance and Commerce Department.

RESOLUTION.—In his speech in moving for leave to introduce the Indian Stamp Bill in the Legislative Council on Friday, October 15, 1897, the Honourable Sir James Westland made the following remarks:

"Besides the exemptions which are mentioned in the Act itself there are a large number which have been effected by notification. These refer chiefly to documents which arise in the course of the business of public departments. If we bring these into the new Act, we will crowd the schedule largely with matters of no general public interest. We therefore propose to continue the present practice and to provide for all these exemptions by notifications and not by bringing them into the Act itself. There are a few documents of this character which are exempted under the provisions of the Act as it stands, but we have cut out these exemptions with the intention of including them in the list of similar instruments which have been from time to time exempted by notifications. This list it is intended to print and make public as soon as possible, so that any person who has any interest in these documents will see that the removal of them from the schedule of exemptions is not to be interpreted as an intention to levy any duty upon them."

The following list of exemptions from stamp duty is now published for information in pursuance of the undertaking made in the above extract:

The Reports on the Administration of Jails in the Provinces of British India for the year 1896, with the orders of the Local Governments and Administrations thereon.

RESOLUTION.

The Provincial Reports on the Administration of Jails, due with the Government of India on 1st June, were on the whole submitted with fair punctuality. The statement in the margin shows, however, that the Reports of three Provinces were delayed beyond the month in which they were due. In all three instances the Local Government or Administration had to deal with famine and the delay in the receipt of the review of the Bombay Province.	Date of receipt by the Government of India of the Report for 1895.	Date of receipt by the Government of India of the Report for 1896.

Madras	18th June 1896	... 12th July 1897

Coorg	17th June 1896	... 12th June 1897.
Hyderabad	25th May 1896	... 25th May 1897.

Government was due to their being specially occupied with famine, plague and other matters. The Government of India regret the delay in the issue of this Resolution, but recognize that it was unavoidable.

2. Statement No. 1 appended to this Resolution shows the general distribution of prisoners of all classes in the Jails and Subsidiary Jails of British India. The number of Central Jails (40) was the same as in 1895, but the number of District Jails (191) and of Subordinate Jails and lock-ups (495) diminished by one. The jail population at the commencement of the year (viz., 101,061, of whom 97,883 were males and 3,178 were females) was considerably larger than at the beginning of 1895 (96,422, of whom 93,405 were males and 3,017 females). More prisoners (476,180) were, owing chiefly to the scarcity which prevailed, received during the year 1896 than in the previous year and the aggregate number (577,241, of whom 550,965 were males), and the daily average number (103,687·54, of whom 100,408·3 were males) were consequently both higher than in 1895, when the figures were, respectively, 556,971 (531,860 males) and 101,085·48 (97,869·62 males).

3. Statement No. 2 contains the statistics relating to the number and disposal of convicts. The year opened with 94,052 convicts in the Jails, as compared with 89,472 in the previous year. Excluding those received by transfer, the total number of convicts rose from 267,446 to 276,075. The increase was distributed over most Provinces, but occurred chiefly in Bengal (from 48,939 to 51,586), Burma (from 31, 71 to 33,439), the Central Provinces (from 12,461 to 14,207), the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (from 76,030 to 77,729) and the Punjab (from 31,945 to 33,006). Burma, where a large portion of the increase was due to the increase in the number of persons (1,015) imprisoned under the preventive sections of the Criminal Procedure Code, is the only Province in which the prevailing scarcity was not the cause of the rise in the jail population. The number of convicts released in the years 1895 and 1896, respectively, is shown below :

			Males.	Females.
Released on appeal		1895	13,560	362
		1896	13,380	384
Released on expiry of sentence		1895	120,411	8,894
		1896	119,155	9,074
Released under remission rules		1895	25,977	620
		1896	28,165	715
Released by order of Government.	(a) on the ground of sickness	1895	107	4
		1896	131	4
	(b) on other grounds.	1895	105	153
		1896	1,063	208

		Males.	Females.	Total.
Total	1895	160,160	10,042	170,202
	1896	161,894	10,385	172,279

4. The number of convicts released by order of Government on the ground of sickness was still highest in Bengal, where the number (57) was the same as in 1895. This number excludes 4 convicts released in a moribund condition, who are returned among the deaths in the jail statistics. Twenty-six convicts were released in Burma on account of sickness ; 25 in Assam, and 10 in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh. The number released on this ground in the remaining Provinces was 17. One thousand and forty-two convicts were released by Government on grounds other than sickness in the Central Provinces. In the previous year 224 convicts were similarly released in these Provinces, and for both years the action taken is accounted for by the necessity of relieving the overcrowding which threatened to become serious in its sanitary consequences. In 1896 the existence of cholera along the routes by which convicts would have to be transferred with a view to relieving the pressure in particular jails afforded an additional reason for adopting the alternative of releasing a certain number of the inmates. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, 176 convicts were liberated in view of their offences having been committed under the pressure of want.

5. The number of convicts transported to Port Blair, or from Burma to Indian Jails, rose from 1,060 in 1895 to 1,444 in 1896 in spite of the fact that a number of convicts who had been received in the Thana Jail for transportation have not yet been sent to Port Blair on account of the existence of plague at Bombay. Sixty-seven convicts were transferred to lunatic asylums, as compared with 61 in 1895. The number of escapes diminished from 62 to 54. There were 420 executions, against 395 in the previous year. The number of deaths increased from 2,491 to 2,690. After deducting the number of casualties (releases, transfers, escapes, executions and deaths), the number (99,589) of convicts left on the rolls at the close of the year showed an excess of 5,536 over the number of the preceding year. The daily average number of convicts (95,033·83) was also higher than in 1895 (93,212·26).

6. The decline in the number of escapes is satisfactory. In three Provinces (Burma, Coorg and Hyderabad) no escapes occurred. In only two Provinces (Assam and Madras) was there an increase. The number of convicts who escaped and had not been recaptured at the close of the year was, as before, highest in Assam (14) and the Punjab (12). In the former Province the number of escapes was 44, 16 from inside and 28 from outside the jails. The Chief Commissioner, while of opinion that the large number of escapes from Assam jails may be partly due to the large extent to which, in that Province, extramural labour has hitherto been resorted to, considers that laxity of discipline and supervision is to some extent responsible for them. The Governor General in Council concurs with Mr. Cotton in thinking that what is chiefly needed is closer and more constant supervision by the superior authorities, and trusts that a result of the orders for securing a regular inspection of the jails both by the District Magistrates and by non-official visitors will be a reduction in the number of escapes. In the Punjab the escapes were apparently due, as observed in the Resolution on the Jail Reports for 1895, to the insecurity of the jail buildings. His Honour the Lieutenant-Governor hopes to be able to remedy the defects as soon as Provincial funds are available for expenditure on ordinary public works.

7. Statement No. 3 shows the religion, age, education and previous occupation of convicts admitted into jail during the years 1895 and 1896. There was an increase in the number of Muhammadans (from 45,046 to 47,256), Buddhists and Jains (from 15,645 to 17,273) and of those belonging to "all other classes" (from 4,172 to 5,043). There was a decrease in the number of Christians (from 2,386 to 1,834), while the number of Hindus and Sikhs (110,578) was almost the same as in 1895 (110,641). The decrease in the number of Christians was distributed among Europeans, Eurasians and Natives, the numbers in which classes were, respectively, 550, 183 and 1,101 in the year under review, as compared with 828, 230 and 1,328 in 1895.

8. The following figures contrast the number of convicts admitted in the years 1895 and 1896 according to the four main age-periods:

	No. of convicts admitted.
	1895.	1896.
Under 16 years of age	1,822	1,694
From 16 to 40 years of age	140,931	144,048
From 40 to 60 years of age	31,565	32,875
Over 60 years	3,571	3,367

There was an increase in the number of convicts between 16 and 40 years of age, and of those between 40 and 60 years of age; while the numbers under the remaining two heads diminished. The decline in the number of juvenile offenders is satisfactory, but it is clear from the remarks recorded by some of the Local Governments that there is still room for improvement. Local Governments and Administrations have, where necessary, drawn attention to the provisions of Section 31 (1) (b) of the Reformatory Schools Act, VIII of 1897, and it is hoped that this power of discharging first offenders, coupled with the option of taking action under Section 10 of the same Act, may result in the reports for the current year exhibiting a still further decline in the number of youthful offenders confined in jails

9. It is usual to refer in some detail to the figures from the different Reformatory Schools. The year opened with 153 boys at the Chingleput Reformatory School, and closed with 154. Thirty-three boys were admitted during the year, of whom 23 were old offenders, 9 had been convicted for the first time, and one was a State prisoner. In addition to the classes for general education, technical instruction was imparted in carpentry, blacksmith's work, weaving, tailoring and drawing, and the examination that was held in these technical subjects was productive of very satisfactory results. The conduct of the boys is said to have improved. Three boys escaped, but all were recaptured. Of the 32 pupils discharged during the year, 12 were following the trades learnt in the school; 14 secured useful avocations as petty dealers, peons, bricklayers, blacksmiths, etc.; 2 were unemployed, and no report was received of the remaining four. The health of the boys was on the whole satisfactory. Although, owing to epidemics of influenza and chicken-pox, the number of admissions into hospital increased from 122 in 1894 and 164 in 1895 to 186 in 1896, no deaths occurred.

There were 105 boys in the Yeraoda Reformatory School at the beginning of the year, and 40 were admitted during the year. Twenty-three boys were released on expiry of sentence, one was transferred to a jail, and 12 were released by order of Government. The year therefore closed with 109 boys. As in the preceding year, the trades taught were painting, blacksmith's work, tailoring, carpentry, book-binding, cane-work, and polishing. Reports received regarding 32 of the 35 boys released during the year show that no boy was reconvicted, and that 2 were still following the trade taught in the Reformatory. The conduct of the boys showed an improvement on the previous year and was satisfactory. No serious offences were committed and no escapes occurred. The mark system is reported to have worked satisfactorily, and, with a very healthy year, the record of the school was gratifying.

At the Alipur and Hazaribagh Reformatory Schools there were, respectively, 207 and 328 boys at the end of the year. In addition to the general education imparted at the schools, the boys were taught carpentry and blacksmith's and tinsmith's work. The boys at Alipur were also employed on book-binding, printing, cane-work, and the preparation of quinine packets; at Hazaribagh they were, in addition to these industries, engaged in cotton and blanket weaving, tailoring and shoe-making. Drill and gymnastics were continued regularly throughout the year. Two boys escaped from the Hazaribagh Reformatory, one of whom has not been secured. Out of 47 boys released at Hazaribagh during 1896, 36 were reported to be well conducted, 3 were pursuing the trade taught in the school, 4 were not traceable, 2 were in jail, one was viewed with suspicion and one had died. Inquiries regarding the subsequent movement of boys released from the Alipur School during 1896 had not been completed when the Report was submitted. The health of the boys at Hazaribagh was seriously affected by a severe epidemic of influenza, and the six deaths which occurred are attributed indirectly to this cause. Of the two deaths at Alipur one was caused by fracture of the skull inflicted by another boy in the Reformatory.

There were 208 boys in the Reformatory School at Bareilly at the close of the year. Their health was very satisfactory, and no deaths occurred. Discipline and conduct are reported to have been excellent, and there were no escapes. Some difficulty is experienced in imparting technical instruction in trades, and it is reported that carpentry, blacksmith's work and weaving had to be given up for want of orders and that cane-work is now the chief industry. The abandonment of instruction in industries such as carpentry and smith's work which are likely to be useful to the boys in after life is to be regretted, and the Government of India hope that efforts will be made to revert to it. Of the 104 boys discharged within the past three years, who have been reported on, 2 had died, 37 had been lost sight of, 20 had been convicted of criminal offences, and 37 of the remaining 45 were pursuing various avocations, while 8 had no occupation. The character given of 39 out of these 45 was good.

The year closed with 128 boys at the Jubbulpore Reformatory School. Of 56 boys who have been discharged since the opening of this institution on 16th August 1891, one has died, 6 have relapsed into crime, 15 cannot be traced, and the remaining 34 are doing well and bear a good character. The chief industries on which the boys were employed during the year were tailoring, carpentry, blacksmith's work, painting and varnishing, shoe-making and dyeing. Drill and gymnastics were regularly attended to. The conduct of the boys was good, the offences being chiefly trivial. The inmates enjoyed fairly good health, and only one death occurred.

The Paungdè Reformatory School contained 88 boys at the end of the year, or 15 more than at the beginning of the year. Of the 17 boys released during the year, 9 were liberated on expiry of sentence, 4 by order of Government,

2 were returned to jail, one was sentenced to jail on revision by the Judicial Commissioner of Upper Burma; and one was licensed out under the Reformatory Schools Act. The health and conduct of the inmates were satisfactory. The School was transferred to Insein in December 1896.

10. Out of 181,984 convicts admitted into jail during the year, 10,512 (10·7 per cent.) were able to read and write, 5,713 (3·2 per cent.) were able to read only, and 156,759 (86·1 per cent.) were illiterate. In 1895 the corresponding percentages were 10·8, 3·6 and 85·6. Burma was the Province in which the largest number (10,741) of convicts were able to read and write, while the largest number (44,807) of illiterate convicts belonged to the North-Western Provinces and Oudh.

11. The avocations pursued by the male convicts previous to their admission into jail in 1895 and 1896 are shown by the following figures:

	1895.	1896.
Employed under Government or Municipal or Local authorities.	4,384	4,149
Professional persons	7,340	6,950
In service or performing personal offices ...	15,760	16,943
Engaged in agriculture or with animals ...	94,644	96 154
Engaged in commerce and trade	7,913	8,402
Employed in mechanical arts, manufactures, engineering operations, etc.	5,656	5 057
Engaged in miscellaneous pursuits ...	31,811	33,617

The number of persons engaged in agriculture or with animals who were admitted into jail has shown, as might, having regard to the bad seasons that have prevailed, be expected, a steady increase during the past three years. There was also an increase in 1896, as compared with the previous year, in the number of persons in service, in commerce and trade and among those classed as "engaged in miscellaneous pursuits."

The condition of the female convicts before admission in the last two years is shown below:

	1895.	1896.
Married	6,616	6,780
Unmarried	501	495
Widows	2,872	3,108
Prostitutes	393	329

12. The following statement contrasts the distribution according to length of sentence of the convicts admitted into jail during the years 1895 and 1896:

	Number of admissions.		Ratio per cent. on total admissions.
	1895.	1896.	1895.	1896.
Not exceeding one month	56,022	56,019	31·49	30·78

Transportation (b) for a term	385	360	0·22	0·20
Sentenced to death	638	610	0·36	0·34

or 13·91 per cent., were found to have been previously convicted. The number of convicts who had been convicted once previously was 16,435, or 9·03 per cent.; the number convicted twice previously was 4,927, or 2·7 per cent., and the number convicted more than twice was 3,956, or 2·17 per cent. The percentage of these was highest in Burma (22·2) and in the Central Provinces (21·36). In the Bombay Presidency the percentage was 15·67; in the Punjab 13·02; in Bengal 12·38; in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh 11·93; and in the Madras Presidency 11·65.

14. The anthropometric system of identifying old offenders, which has been adopted in all provinces except Coorg and Hyderabad, appears to have worked with some success. In Bengal where the system has been longest in use, 334 old offenders were recognized after their admission into jail, as compared with 207 in 1895. In Coorg there appears to be no regular system for identifying persons who had been previously convicted. The introduction into the Hyderabad Assigned Districts of the anthropometric system was sanctioned in 1895; but its working has been delayed by the non-arrival of the instruments. It has now been decided, on the Report of a Committee appointed to enquire into the system of identification by finger impressions, that this system, which is simpler and more effective than the anthropometric system, should be adopted in preference to the anthropometric system hitherto in force, and in a Circular letter No. 328—335, dated the 12th June last, Local Governments and Administrations were asked to introduce it generally. The Governor General in Council trusts that the change will result in the more frequent identification of old offenders by the police.

15. The manner in which convicts were employed is shown in Statement No. 6. The average number under sentence of labour on working days increased from 90,259 in 1895 to 92,054 in 1896, and the number actually available for labour rose from 80,180 to 81,748. The following figures show the distribution of convict labour during the past year:

Unremunerative labour	1,572
Prison officers	8,269
Prison servants	9,398
Gardening	5,972
Preparation of articles for consumption in jails... ...	12,330
Jail repairs	3,517
Jail buildings	3,496
Manufactures	35,275
Labour under the Public Works Department	1,210
Labour under Municipalities	713

Of the average number under sentence of labour (92,054), 8·96 per cent. were employed as prison officers, 10·21 per cent. as prison servants, and 38·3 on manufactures.

16. Statement No. 7 shows the prison offences committed by convicts, and the punishments inflicted on them. The number of offences which had risen from 134,284 in 1893 to 147,319 in 1895, rose to 160,115 in 1896. The increase to some extent corresponded with the rise in the daily average number of convicts from 93,211 in 1895 to 95,033 in 1896. The number of offences (17,600) recorded in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh, where the daily average population (30,784) was about twice as high as in Bengal (15,895), the Punjab (10,940) or Burma (14,031), was only about half that recorded in each of those Provinces. Admitting that the differences in the character of the population of different Provinces may to some extent account for such results, they cannot adequately explain the diversity between the returns for Bengal and the Punjab on the one hand and for the North-Western Provinces and Oudh on the other. This must, it appears to the Governor General in Council, be in a great measure due to a difference of system. The record of offences in North-Western Provinces and Oudh is indeed considerably higher than it was in 1895 (10,713) and it appears from paragraph 33 of the Report and paragraph 5 of the Local Government's orders on it that special attention has been paid to the disparity between the record of offences and punishments in that Province and that in Bengal. The Inspector-General of Prisons, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, is of opinion that the explanation lies in the course of procedure necessary to punish a prisoner, and he thinks that the easier the procedure is for a subordinate, the more reports are made and the more punishments awarded. He observes that while in Bengal a prisoner's history ticket is kept by the convict overseer of his gang, and the offence committed is at once noted on the ticket, it is necessary in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh for the reporting jail official to go to the jail office, have the prisoner removed from his gang, and to make a record in the jailor's order book—a system which is more troublesome and involves more clerical work to the reporting official, and, consequently, results in fewer offences being recorded than in Bengal. This argument would appear to show that the system in force in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh results in offences not being recorded and it is apparent that any system under which it is possible for offences to remain unrecorded is defective and contrary to the recommendations of the Prison Conference of 1892 (paragraph 18 of their Report) approved in paragraph 18 of Home Department Resolution No. $\frac{\text{10-Jails}}{610-23}$, dated 9th November 1892. The Governor General in Council is therefore of opinion that the system described by the Inspector-General of Prisons, North-Western Provinces and Oudh, needs to be modified in such a way as to secure that all offences shall be recorded. The number of offences relating to work was again highest in the Punjab (21,732), but, as in 1895, the numbers relating to the use of prohibited articles (4,452), to assaults, mutiny and escapes (689), and to all other breaches of jail rules (19,052) were greatest in Burma.

17. Punishments inflicted on convicts rose from 147,422 to 160,099. The bulk of the increase occurred among minor punishments, which rose from 134,209 to 142,951, and was largely accounted for by the great number of formal "warnings" (33,405 as compared with 31,518 in 1895) and minor punishments other than penal diet, separate and solitary confinement, handcuffing and link fetters. The number of these "other minor punishments" increased from 58,024 to 66,922. The increase in the number of major punishments (from 12,925 to 16,829) was almost entirely due to the rise in the Punjab from 1,765 to 4,558. The Lieutenant-Governor has ordered an investigation into the causes of the large number of punishments administered in the Abbottabad, Rohtak and Amritsar Jails (where the ratios exceeded 600 per cent. of average strength) as well as into the question whether the small number of punishments inflicted in the Umballa, Dera Ismail Khan, Ferozepore and Kohat Jails (where the ratio in each case was below 150 per cent. of average strength) was due to any relaxation of discipline in those jails. The rise in the number of cases in which prisoners were placed in separate, cellular and solitary confinement was also due mainly to the number of instances (3,894) in which this form of punishment was resorted to in the Punjab; the number of cases (1,345) in which penal diet was combined with solitary confinement was highest in Burma. The number of cases in which reduced diet was ordered as a punishment increased somewhat in Assam. Fetters were imposed as a punishment more frequently in Bengal than elsewhere. The number of corporal punishments, which had fallen from 1,696 in 1894 to 1,580 in 1895, rose to 1,753 in the year under review. The number was highest in Burma (362) and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (329). The figures for 1895 in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh showed a very material decrease both from those of the previous year and the average of the previous three years and the increase in the year under review is very slight and still leaves the number much lower than it was before 1895. The Lieutenant-Governor of Burma has ordered an inquiry into the high rate of whippings in the Tavoy and Yaméthin Jails, where it seems to him to have been excessive. The general proportion (1·09 per cent.) borne by corporal punishment to the total of all punishments was slightly higher than in 1895 (1·07). The general ratio was exceeded in Coorg (13·11 per cent.), Assam (11·88 per cent.), the Hyderabad Assigned Districts (3·7 per cent.), the Central Provinces (2·96 per cent.), the Bombay Presidency (2·24 per cent.), and the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (1·82 per cent.). The proportion of whippings to the total number of major punishments diminished from 12·28 to 10·42 per cent. Excluding Coorg, where the number of whippings was only 16, the ratio was highest in Assam (61·79 per cent.), and lowest in the Punjab (4·23 per cent.).

18 Statement No. 12 shows the remissions earned by convicts for good conduct under the mark system. The number of convicts who came under the system has risen steadily from 24,613 in 1894 and 26,662 in 1895 to 28,953 in 1896. Of this number only 77 failed to earn some remission of sentence. As in other years, the great bulk (77·1 per cent.) of those who earned remission were under sentences not exceeding two years. The greatest amount of remission (1,611 days as compared with 1,580 days in 1895) was earned by a convict in Burma. The largest amount of remission gained in 1896 by a convict under sentence for one year was 80 days, or a little less than one-fourth of the period of sentence. The highest remission earned by a convict under sentence for not more than 10 years was 691 days, or, roughly, about one-sixth of the period of sentence. Gratuities were paid to convicts in Madras, Bombay, the Punjab, the Central Provinces and Coorg. The maximum gratuity (Rs. 36-11) was earned by a convict released in Bombay, while the average gratuity earned during the year was Rs. 2-13.

19. In paragraph 24 of their Resolution of the 25th September 1896, the Government of India observed that the plan upon which the registers of prison offences were prepared in the several Provinces was clearly not uniform, but that it was probable that in each Province the local method had been followed for some years without variation. The general conclusion that then suggested itself was that there had not been in any Province the improvement in behaviour and discipline among the convicts which was expected to be the immediate result of the mark system. Local Governments were accordingly requested to examine the matter with special care in reviewing the Jail Reports for 1896, and to consider what conditions operate against the efficacy of the system. The result of this inquiry has been to elicit a very large body of opinion favourable to the mark system and its results. The Governments of Madras and Bengal consider that the mark system is productive of excellent results in the case of convicts of some intelligence and education and the Governor General in Council is disposed to concur with the Government of the Punjab in thinking that if the system were carefully explained to all convicts by Jail Superintendents more extended results would follow. In estimating the effect of the mark system upon the general behaviour of convicts there is, of course, the difficulty noticed by the Chief Commissioner of the Central Provinces, namely the absence of a uniform and adequate record of jail offences; and it can scarcely be anticipated that this difficulty will be entirely overcome, since the record of jail offences must, to some extent, depend on the subordinate jail officials. The Inspectors-General of Prisons in Bombay and in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh have examined the existing system for awarding marks at length and have suggested alterations of the system with a view to making it more readily understood and appreciated by the prisoners. Their proposal is, briefly, to credit each prisoner, on admission, with the total number of good conduct marks which he can earn during the period of his sentence and explain to him that this means that he will, if he conducts himself well, be entitled to release after a period shorter than that for which he was sentenced. For every instance of misconduct deserving forfeiture of marks the reduced period of imprisonment would then be extended by the period of remission so forfeited. It is contended by Mr. Filgate and Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel Hall that such a system as this would appeal with far greater force to the less intelligent classes of prisoners who fail to appreciate the present system. This proposal was, as explained by the Inspector-General of Prisons, Bombay, laid before the Prison Conference in 1892 and rejected by them. The decision of the Prison Conference was accepted by the Government of India and the Governor General in Council agrees with the Lieutenant-Governor of the North-Western Provinces and Oudh in thinking it would be premature at present to modify the rules so recently issued after careful discussion.

20. Statements Nos. 8 and 9 which exhibit the financial aspect of the Jail Administration in 1896 show the cost of guarding and maintaining prisoners, as well as their cash earnings, during the past two years. It was observed in the Resolution on the Reports for 1895, that comparison was considerably narrowed as it had not everywhere been possible to introduce, with effect from the 1st January 1895, the revised classification of expenditure ordered in Home Department Resolution No. $\frac{10\text{-Jails}}{664\text{-}79}$, dated 13th December 1894. The statistics for the past two years have been given in the revised form with the single exception that those for the Assam jails for 1895 were furnished in the old form. The gross expenditure has risen from Rs. 56,16,756 in 1894 to Rs. 57,37,114 in 1895, and Rs. 62,45,874 in 1896. The gross cost per prisoner, which had fallen from Rs. 58-11-9 in 1894 to Rs. 57-2-2 in 1895, rose to Rs. 60-8-6 in 1896. The increase in the gross expenditure and in the gross cost of each prisoner was due to the growth in the jail population and to the rise in the cost of provisions respectively.

21. The cost of establishment (permanent and temporary) diminished slightly from Rs. 22,00,290 to Rs. 21,89,809, and the cost per head from Rs. 21-14-7 to Rs. 21-3-7. The charges on account of temporary establishment aggregated Rs. 48,846 and the largest expenditure on this account again occurred in the Punjab (Rs. 19,951), though this was considerably less than the expenditure for 1895 (Rs. 27,389). As the jails in the Punjab are brought under the new organization it is anticipated that the charge for temporary establishment will gradually be reduced to the figure at which it stands in other Provinces. The cost of establishment per head was (excluding Coorg) again highest in the Punjab (Rs. 29-1-4) and lowest in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (Rs. 13-3-5).

22. Dieting charges rose from Rs. 23,72,681 to Rs. 27,38,724. Expenditure under this head increased chiefly in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (from Rs. 5,92,955 to Rs. 7,87,424), in Bengal (from Rs. 4,56,975 to Rs. 5,00,470), in Burma (from Rs. 3,91,795 to Rs. 4,68,114), and in the Punjab (from Rs. 2,20,679 to Rs. 2,88,890). Madras was the only Province in which the dieting charges showed a substantial reduction. Excluding Coorg the cost per head was highest in Burma (Rs. 32-7-6), and lowest in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (Rs. 23-10-6). Hospital charges rose from Rs. 2,85,169 to Rs. 3,19,936. This increase was accompanied by a rise in the cost per head of average strength (from Rs. 2-13-5 to Rs. 3-1-7), and in the cost per head of average number sick (from Rs. 65-14-9 to Rs. 78-5-4). The average hospital expenses of a sick prisoner were highest in Bengal (Rs. 135-9-4) and lowest in the Central Provinces (Rs. 36-3-8). The figure in Bengal was higher than in 1805 (Rs. 116-14-10), and resulted from high prices of food as well as from the issue of extra diet on a more liberal scale. The advantages of purchasing provisions in advance at harvest time, and of so avoiding subsequent fluctuations in market prices, have been well brought out by the results shown where it was resorted to; and the Governor General in Council trusts that Local Governments and Administrations will consider whether further orders are necessary with a view to the still more general adoption of some such method of supply.

23. The cost of the clothing and bedding of prisoners increased from Rs. 2,95,607 to Rs. 3,45,299, and the cost per head from Rs. 2-15-4 to Rs. 3-5-9. The cost per prisoner was highest in Assam (Rs. 7-0-9) and excluding Coorg, lowest in Burma (Rs. 2-7-1).

24. The cash earnings of prisoners diminished from Rs. 14,16,565 to Rs. 13,42,653. The greatest decrease occurred in Bengal (from Rs. 2,80,006 to Rs. 1,89,903), and in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh (from Rs. 2,39,740 to Rs. 1,54,894) though in both these Provinces the number of convicts available for labour increased. In the North-Western Provinces and Oudh the Inspector-General of Prisons attributes the decline mainly to stagnation of trade, and to the absence of demand for jail-made articles. This position is criticized by the Local Government, and the Governor General in Council concurs in its remarks, and trusts that all Local Governments and Administrations will make it clear to the Head of their Jail Departments that the fostering of jail industries particularly with a view to meeting the requirements of the spending Departments of Government is one of the important duties of Jail Superintendents. The Governor General in Council has at present under consideration the question whether the rules regulating the supply of articles by the Jail Department to the consuming

Departments cannot be improved. The cash earnings increased in Madras (from Rs. 86,262 to Rs. 1,56,661), Bombay (from Rs. 88,354 to Rs. 98,228), and the Central Provinces (from Rs. 46,476 to Rs. 1,17,160). There was a decline in the Punjab from Rs. 1,56,557 to Rs. 1,27,281, in Burma from Rs. 4,49,204 to Rs. 4,45,487, in Assam from Rs. 44,542 to Rs. 30,570, in Coorg from Rs. 9,631 to Rs. 9,563, and in the Hyderabad Assigned Districts from Rs. 15,792 to Rs. 12,906. Whereas in Bengal a profit accrued from the preparation and sale of pice packets of quinine, in the Bombay Presidency this industry resulted in a small loss, accounted for by the fact that the price of the drug in the open market had risen. The Inspector-General of Prisons, Bombay, urges the establishment of a printing press in the Yeraoda Central Jail and it is understood that this measure has been deferred only on account of the existing financial pressure. Deducting the cash earnings of prisoners from the gross cost of maintenance, it appears that the net cost of jail administration rose from Rs. 43,20,549 to Rs. 40,03,221. The average net cost of a prisoner in India increased from Rs. 41-1-11 in 1894 to Rs. 43-0-5 in 1895 and Rs. 47-8-4 in 1896. The cost in each Province during the past two years is compared below:

25. The Government of India observe with satisfaction that on the whole the health of the prison population improved during the year under review. A series of valuable notes by the Director-General of the Indian Medical Service on the statistics for the jails in each Province is appended to this Resolution. Although the daily average strength was higher than in 1895, and although some of the prisoners must have been admitted to jail in a poor condition, the number admitted into hospital diminished from 101,285 to 97,004, and the daily average number of sick from 4,326 to 4,084. The ratios of admissions into hospital and of the daily average number sick also declined, from 1005·56 and 42·95 per 1,000, respectively, in 1895, to 939·08 and 39·54 per 1,000 in 1896, but the ratio of deaths increased slightly from 26·59 to 27·79 per 1,000. Of the prisoners (108,214) discharged during the year, 108,402 or 57·6 per cent. had gained weight, 36,280 or 19·2 per cent. had neither gained nor lost weight, and 35,955 or 19·1 per cent. had lost weight. Particulars of the remainder are not available.

26. The statement in the margin compares the number of deaths and the mortality in each province during 1895 and 1896. It is especially gratifying to notice the further diminution of the death-rate in the Bengal jails. It was observed last year that the then ratio (27·47) was the lowest on record, but this rate has now been brought down to 25·78. The Government of India have no doubt that this result, which reflects great credit on the jail authorities, is mainly attributable to the increased attention that has in the past two or three years been paid to the dieting of the prisoners as well as to the measures which have recently been taken in Bengal to rectify the sanitary defects of the Bengal jails. The Director-General of the Indian Medical Service draws particular attention to Chapter VIII of the Bengal Jail Report, and, as it shows, in the most interesting manner, the steps taken in Bengal towards remedying defects and securing improvements, the Government of India agree with him in thinking that it should be circulated for the general information of all concerned in jail administration. A copy is accordingly attached to this Resolution. The Governor General in Council concurs with the Chief Commissioner of Assam in considering that, though lower than last year, the ratio of deaths in the Assam jails (50·8) is far higher than it should be, and that there is no reason, prima facie, why the rate should be higher than in Bengal. His Excellency in Council trusts that the attention which Mr. Cotton is paying to the subject will show its result in improved returns for 1897. Outbreaks of cholera account for the high rate of mortality in the Thana Jail in the Bombay Presidency and in the Darbhanga Jail in Bengal, where the ratios were 113·6 and 106·4 respectively. It appears that in Madras every jail is provided with segregation huts to enable Jail Superintendents to deal effectively with outbreaks of epidemic or other disease and the Governor General in Council would suggest that this arrangement, if not already adopted, might well be followed in other Provinces. The death-rate in the jail at Shikarpur in Sind continued very high (71·07), and it is hoped that this jail will be removed to Sukkur as soon as possible. There was overcrowding in some of the prisons of most Provinces, and it was perhaps most accentuated in Bombay and the Central Provinces. In the case of the former Province, however, it is explained that there was unusual difficulty in effecting transfers on account of the presence of plague, and through the stoppage on that account of the removal of prisoners sentenced to transportation. In the jails of the Central Provinces overcrowding was almost general throughout the year, and it was owing to this that a large number of convicts under short sentences were released before their time had expired. This, and the condition of many of the convicts when admitted, account in a large measure for the excessive death-rate in the Central Provinces jails. At the same time there are some features in the jail administration of the year in the Central Provinces which seem to show that greater care in the distribution of special diet might have secured better results. The sickness and mortality, for instance, in the Jubbulpore Central Jail where the death-rate among convicts was 81·71 per thousand, were excessive. The prevalence of the chief cause of mortality, viz., dysentery, was doubtless due to the condition of many convicts on admission, and though the form the disease takes may be to some extent communicable, the Governor General in Council cannot but think that greater attention to the diet of the prisoners in general, as well as to the patients themselves, in the Jubbulpore Central Prison, might to some extent have checked it. His Excellency trusts that this matter will receive the careful attention of the Chief Commissioner.

27. The circumstances which tended to affect the health of convicts in 1896 prejudicially and to increase the expenditure on jails will, the Government of India fear, affect the statistics of sickness and mortality, and the financial results of the current year even more seriously. Scarcity, which began to be felt chiefly in the North-Western Provinces and Oudh and the Central Provinces before the close of 1896, not only resulted in an increase of crime and consequently larger admissions into jail, but tended to raise the rates of sickness and mortality by overcrowding and through the emaciated condition to which many convicts were reduced before admission to jail. Owing to local outbreaks of cholera and influenza, outside jails, it became difficult to freely effect transfers with a view to remedy overcrowding; the presence of plague prevented the removal to Port Blair of transportation convicts from Bombay, and one of the consequences of the bad harvests was a general stagnation in trade, resulting in a diminution in the demands for jail manufactures. It is, therefore, hardly a matter for surprise to find that with a jail population of larger size and generally more liable to sickness than in the previous year, the gross cost of the administration of the Indian jails has increased, while no corresponding increase has accrued in the earnings of the Department. Looking to all the circumstances which characterized the year 1896, the Governor General in Council is, however, gratified to find that in most provinces the daily average number of sick declined, and that there was no material increase in the death-rate except in the jails of the Central Provinces. The statistics regarding the health of the jail population seem to the Governor General in Council, when the circumstances which characterized the year under review are considered, to reflect credit on the Superintendents of Jails generally. As has been observed by several of the Local Governments and Administrations, the question whether discipline has really improved is one on which it is difficult to form an opinion, in view not only of the differences in system in the several provinces, but also of the varying degree of care and accuracy exercised in different jails in the same province in recording prison offences. On the whole, however, as observed in paragraph 19 of this Resolution, there would appear to be reason to believe that the mark system has already begun to exercise an influence on jail administration, and there are grounds for hoping that, if Jail Superintendents insist on the working of the system being explained to convicts on admission still further beneficial results will ensue from it.

Ordered also that the Resolution be published in the Supplement to the Gazette of India.

[True Extract.]

J. P. HEWETT,

Secretary to the Government of India.

Note by the Director-General, Indian Medical Service, on the sickness and mortality in the jails under Local Governments and Administrations for the year 1896.

Madras.—The daily average strength of all classes of prisoners in 1896, was 9,587, and the daily average sick was 244. The total number of deaths, including two from cholera, was 187, equal to a ratio of 19·5 per mille, or 1·3 higher than in 1895.

The daily average strength of convicts was 8,263, and the daily average sick was 231, or 13·2 less than in the previous year. The deaths increased from 159 in 1895, to 168 in the year under review, and the ratio per mille from 19·26 to 20·33.

In central prisons, the average daily strength was 5,643·7, and the number of deaths was 124, or a ratio per mille of 21·9. The increase over 1895, when the ratio was 16·20, was chiefly due to the large mortality in the Rajamundry Central Prison, where there were 40 deaths, or a ratio per mille of 47·09. The ratio in the other six central jails in the Presidency was only 17·8. The excessive mortality in Rajamundry Central Prison is said to have been partly due to carelessness in the selection of prisoners for particular kinds of labour, and probably also to want of proper supervision, as it is stated in the report that "a change has been made in the medical and executive control."

In the Coimbatore Central Prison there were 26 deaths, against 12 in 1895. At the commencement of the year there was a severe outbreak of influenza, which accounted for 6 deaths, and 7 deaths were due to phthisis pulmonalis.

Weakly prisoners were transferred from the jails at Madura and Cuddalore to the central prison at Trichinopoly, and healthy prisoners from that jail were transferred to works at Mount Capper, but notwithstanding this the mortality was only 21, or 3 higher than in the previous year, when the prison was in a normal condition.

The average daily strength of convicts confined in district and subsidiary jails, including the leper ward, was 2,620, with 44 deaths, or a ratio per mille of 16·80—one lower than the ratio in the six central prisons referred to above.

Such results could have been obtained only by careful supervision, and attention to every detail connected with the feeding of the prisoners and the sanitary conditions under which they were placed.

As would have been expected from the low ratio of deaths in district jails, the mortality increased with length of residence. There was an average daily strength of 3,993·48 prisoners under six months in jail, and of these 64 died, or a ratio per mille of 16·03, while of those above six months in residence 104 died, being a ratio of 24·44 on an average daily strength of 4,259·44.

The year was stated to have been healthy, and the sickness generally was less than in the previous one. The ratio of admissions into hospital fell from 642·99 in 1895, to 582·58 in 1896, but the death-rate, as shown above, was slightly in excess of that of the former year.

There was an increase in the mortality from tubercle of the lung and from malarial fevers, but this seems to have been entirely due to the new system of classification introduced last year.

Only four cases of cholera occurred during the year, one each in the central prison at Rajamundry and the district jail in Berhampore, and two at Palamcottah. These cases were at once placed in the segregation huts, with which each jail is provided, an arrangement which might with advantage be followed in other provinces.

The admission-rate for dysentery and diarrhœa was 150 per mille of average daily strength, as compared with 134 in 1895, but the mortality among these cases fell from 4·15 to 3·07.

As in 1895, cases of beri-beri in the Rajamundry Central Prison were transferred to the Vellore Central Prison, and no deaths were reported from this disease, but in paragraph 102 of the report the Inspector-General expresses a doubt if the results can be entirely relied upon.

Quinine was issued as a prophylactic in some of the jails, but apparently in a desultory and irregular manner, and the results, as might have been expected, are not encouraging.

Bombay.—The average daily strength of all convicts confined in central and district jails was 6,816.

The number admitted into hospital was 6,252, and the total number of deaths 232. The daily average sick was 247·0, and the ratio of deaths per mille of average daily strength was 34·0. Both were higher than in 1895, when the figures were 232·2 and 32·0 respectively.

The average daily strength of the convicts in the three central jails was 3,005. The average daily sick was 114·1, and the death-rate 19·6 per mille, while in district jails, with an average daily strength of 3,811, the number of daily sick was 132·9, and the death rate 45·4.

The average daily strength of those in residence for six months and under was 3,185, among whom there were 91 deaths, or a ratio per mille of 28·6. The number of those above six months in residence was 3,633, and the number of deaths was 141, or a ratio per mille of 38·8.

The mortality in subordinate jails and lock-ups, in which mostly under-trial prisoners and those sentenced to very short terms are confined, was on an average daily strength of 430 and 689 respectively only 17·8 and 26·1.

No explanation is given of the excessive mortality in district jails as compared with that in central prisons. It appears from the above figures that the longer the residence in district jails the higher the mortality, and that therefore prisoners confined in these jails are unnecessarily exposed to preventable risks. This will be referred to later on, after noting the chief causes of sickness and mortality.

There were 484 admissions for respiratory diseases with 66 deaths; of these 187 were cases of pneumonia with 52 deaths.

Fifty per cent. of the cases of pneumonia occurred in the Sind jails—viz., Karachi 6 cases with 2 deaths, Hyderabad 26 cases with 5 deaths, Shikarpur 40 cases with 21 deaths, and the Sind gang 22 cases with 4 deaths, or a total of 94 cases and 32 deaths. The highest number of cases (48) occurred in the jail at Ahmedabad.

The admissions for dysentery amounted to 453 with 22 deaths, and for diarrhœa 382 with 20 deaths. There were 68 cases admitted with tubercle of the lung, 41 of which were treated in the hospital of the Ahmedabad Jail, from which, as noted above, 48 cases of pneumonia were returned. The cases admitted for anæmia and debility increased from 102 in 1895 to 128 in 1896, while cases returned as scurvy decreased from 74 in 1895 to 26 in 1896. Although the admissions for this condition are so much lower than in the previous year, yet the ratio to daily average strength is higher than that of any other province, except the Central Provinces.

Malarial fevers accounted for 1,905 admissions with 14 deaths, and cholera 51 with 25 deaths. Of the latter disease, 47 cases with 23 deaths occurred in the Thana Jail.

In the Thana Jail, with a daily average at strength of 616 convicts, the death-rate was 113·6 per mille of average daily strength. There was heavy and continuous rainfall from the 11th to 31st July, and the ground in the vicinity of the jail was, for the time being, converted into a swamp, but this in itself is hardly sufficient to account for the high death-rate. Exclusive of the deaths from cholera, the ratio from all other causes was 76·3 per mille. Of the 47 deaths on which this ratio is calculated, 23 were due to dysentery and diarrhœa. These diseases under ordinary circumstances are more or less preventable, and in the present case it must, I think, be assumed that they were so.

The jail is partly surrounded by a moat, which always contains a variable quantity of water with a large amount of vegetation, and the Inspector-General of Prisons believes that much of the sickness—particularly remittent fevers (there were 40 cases with 4 deaths)—is due to this cause. The opinion of the Sanitary Commissioner is to be taken as to the advisability of draining the moat.

The Inspector-General at page 21 of the report states that "the drinking water-supply for the Thana Prison is drawn from the same source as that of the town, namely, the Pokran Lake, and is conveyed to and distributed throughout the prison by means of iron pipes;" but the Medical Officer reports in the sanitary sheet submitted to this office that "the Chemical Analyser to the Government has repeatedly condemned the water supplied to the jail in pipes from the Pokran Tank as unfit for potable purposes." It seems desirable, under these circumstances, that measures should be taken for providing a pure water-supply which may be always available and of easy access, and that the use of the water from the Pokran Tank should be confined to washing and irrigation purposes.

The mortality in the Shikarpur Jail, with an average daily strength of 521, was equal to a ratio of 71·0. Twenty-one of the 37 deaths were due to pneumonia, the result, it is recorded in the sanitary sheet, of sudden variations in temperature and the dampness of the mud floors of the barracks. The occurrence also of 25 cases of erysipelas shows that the ventilation and construction of the barracks are defective. Proposals have been submitted for closing the jail and transferring the prisoners to Sukkur.

The high mortality in district jails as compared with that in central prisons, and the prevalence of pneumonia in the jails at Ahmedabad, Hyderabad, Shikarpur and in the Sind gang are deserving of attention, more especially in view of the remarks contained in my note for the year 1895.

A summary of the measures recommended during the year for improving the diet and clothing of the prisoners is recorded in paragraph 61 of the report, but the two scales of diets for labouring prisoners appear to be still in force.

It is noteworthy that only one case of plague occurred in the jails during the year.

Bengal.—The average daily strength of all classes of prisoners was 17,495·02. The total number of deaths was 501, a ratio per mille on the above strength of 28·6, or an increase of 1·2 on the ratio in the previous year, but otherwise the lowest on record. The average daily strength of convicts was 15,895·22, and of these 461 died, equal to a ratio of 29·0 per mille. In 1895 the ratio was 26·9. Although the mortality was slightly higher, the admission into hospital and the daily sick rates were lower in 1896 than 1895, the ratios in the latter year being 1,246·9 and 42·3, and in the former, 1,153·9 and 38·8.

The mortality in the eight central prisons, on an average daily strength of 8,464·52, was equal to a ratio of 19·37 per mille, while in the district jails, with an average daily strength of 7,430·7, it was 39·97 per mille, or slightly more than double that of the central prisons.

The effects of residence show somewhat similar results; the mortality in the case of prisoners under six months in residence was equal to a ratio of 31·8 per mille, and of those above that period a ratio of 27·04.

The mortality in the Midnapore Central Prison, in which is included the district jail, was much in excess of that in any of the other central prisons, chiefly due to dysentery, which occasioned ten deaths.

In the Hazaribagh Central Prison, which is "the infirmary jail of the province," there was an average daily strength of 912·52 convicts in confinement, and of these upwards of 600 had been transferred from other jails on account of malaria and its sequelæ and for enfeebled health, yet the death-rate was practically the same as the provincial average, being 28·4 per mille. This small mortality is reported at paragraph 111 of the report to be entirely due to the systematic arrangements for dietary introduced and supervised by Dr. Nott, the Superintendent, and to his constant attention to the selection and cooking of wholesome food for the prisoners.

With an average daily strength of 1,186·44 in the Bhagalpur Central and District Jails combined, there were only 9 deaths, equal to a ratio of 7·5 per mille. The reason for this exceptionally low mortality is stated by Dr. Buchanan, the Superintendent, to have been due to—

(1) The unusual healthiness of the year, malaria being practically absent.

(2) Good effects of prophylactic doses of cinchonidine carefully administered.

(3) Great care and attention bestowed on the sick by the medical subordinates.

(4) Careful supervision in the preparation and cooking of food.

The death-rates in the other central prisons of the province were considerably below the provincial average, and were—

In the list of the 26 jails, both central and district, noted at paragraph 113 of the report, with an average daily convict population of 10,798·65, the number of deaths was only 185, or a ratio per mille of 17·13.

Judging from the Sanitary Report, "fevers" were more prevalent in Lower Bengal in 1896 than in 1895, as the mortality in the former year rose to 24·76 per mille from 22·99 in the latter. In the jails, however, the admissions for malarial fevers and their sequelæ during 1896 fell from 5,500 in 1895 to 4,643. The latter figures are taken from the yearly sick returns, and include sequelæ of malarial fevers as in the new returns submitted for 1896.

Six grains of sulphate of cinchonidine, combined either with the sulphate or the tincture of perchloride of iron, were apparently issued daily, or in larger doses two or three times a week, during the unhealthy months of the year. In paragraph 104 of the report, the opinions formed by medical officers as to the results of this measure are stated as follows :—"The majority (of medical officers) are of opinion that much benefit has been derived and the number of cases of intermittent and remittent fever has diminished. In some cases in which the number has not decreased, the attacks have been of a milder type. The good effects extend to all diseases associated with malaria, and malarial cachexia and malarial dysentery have been less pronounced and severe * * * Several medical officers are unable to trace any good results from the administration of the prophylactic, or consider them so doubtful that opinion should be reserved until a more extended trial has been given." The Inspector-General of Prisons insists on the necessity for the administration of the prophylactic being under the immediate supervision of the Superintendent or Medical Officer.

There was a decrease in the number admitted for dysentery and diarrhœa from 5,666 in 1895, to 5,291, ratios per mille of 364·8 and 332·8, respectively. The deaths in 1895 amounted to 155, or 2·8 per cent. on cases, and in 1896, they were 134, or 2·5 per cent. on the cases.

There was a slight increase in the admissions for dysentery alone from 3,603 in 1895 to 3,693 in 1896, but the mortality on cases fell from 3·4 to 3·09.

The number of admissions for anæmia and general debility declined from 546 with 30 deaths in 1895, to 234 with 20 deaths. The decrease is doubtless more apparent than real, as cases previously returned under the above heading have been entered, under malarial fevers, as malarial cachexia.

Two sharp outbreaks of cholera occurred, one in the jail at Darbhanga and the other at Bankipur. In the former 28 cases were admitted with 22 deaths, and in the latter there were 36 admissions with 12 deaths. The admissions in other jails amounted to 48 with 26 deaths.

In a body of 424 prisoners in the above two jails, 224 were inoculated by M. Haffkine, with the following results:—There were 27 seizures after the date of inoculation, of which 11 occurred among the inoculated. There were 17 deaths among those attacked, 4 of whom had been inoculated.

There was a total of 998 admissions for diseases and affections of the lungs, which included 165 cases with 53 deaths from tubercle, 257 cases with 46 deaths from pneumonia and 576 with 8 deaths from other respiratory diseases. Owing to the re-arrangement of the headings in the return referred to before, it is impossible to compare the incidence of these diseases in 1896 with the previous year.

Among other works for improving the supply of drinking-water to the prisoners it may be noted that an installation of the Pasteur-Chamberland filter has been established in the jails at Motihari, Chaibassa, Bankipur, Jalpaiguri, Bogra, Dinajpur, and Rangpur.

Chapter VIII of the report shows that the same careful supervision and attention to details have been exercised by Dr. Comins, the Inspector-General of Prisons, in 1896 as in the previous year. The chapter is very instructive reading, and its perusal may be recommended to all those who are concerned or interested in the management of jails.

North-Western Provinces and Oudh.—The daily average strength of the convicts was 30,784, an increase of 209 on that of 1895.

Both the number of admissions into hospital and the death-rate were slightly higher than in the previous year. The ratio of daily average sick to average strength in 1895 was 58·64 per mille, and the ratio of deaths 27·34, as compared with the lower ratio of 51·6 and the higher of 29·43, respectively, in 1896.

The year was a dry one, and the free population suffered but little from malarial fevers. There was, however, widespread scarcity throughout the province, much more intense than in 1895, and the health of the classes from which the jail population is chiefly drawn was undermined and weakened. While the absence of rain lessened the malarial influences, it, on the other hand, led, owing to failure of the crops, to a contracted food-supply, and to enhanced rates, which appears to have been more effective than malaria in producing deterioration in the health of the poorer classes. A large majority of the admissions were consequently in bad health, and owing to the increase of crime, the jails were more or less overcrowded. The death-rate of 29·43 per mille on average strength under these circumstances must be considered as a low one, and shows that every attention was paid to preserving the health of the prisoners.

The mortality in central prisons as compared with that in district jails, and by length of residence, confirms the report as to the low state of health of the admissions. The ratio of deaths in central prisons was 19·96 per mille, while that in district jails was 36·37. Again, those under six months in jail, with an average strength of 11,889, had a mortality equal to a ratio of 32·71 per mille, while those above six months in residence, with an average strength of 18,955, had a ratio of only 27·27.

The principal causes of the admissions into hospital were, of course, much the same as in previous years, except that influenza, cholera and respiratory diseases were more prevalent than in 1895.

The admissions for malarial fevers amounted to 8,228 with 76 deaths, an apparent decrease of only 603 in the year 1895; but in the returns for 1896 malarial fevers include all fevers of a malarial origin, and their sequelæ, such as enlargement of the spleen and malarial cachexia, which was not the case in previous years. The death-rate appears to be high as compared with former years owing to the above new arrangement. The outbreak supposed to have been due to relapsing fever which occurred in the Moradabad Jail in 1895 extended into 1896, and it is stated that "during January almost the whole jail population was in hospital" with the same fever. During its continuance and up to the end of February none of the prisoners admitted were confined in the jail but in a camp which was formed outside. It is not stated, however, if any of these were attacked, and no conclusion appears to have been arrived at as to the exact nature of the fever.

It is satisfactory to find that there was a considerable decline in the admissions and deaths from dysentery and diarrhœa. In 1895 there were 3,483 admissions with 328 deaths, and in 1896, 2,932 and 225, respectively, the ratios being 113·91 and 10·72 in the former year, and 95·24 and 7·31 in the latter.

The admissions for anæmia and debility were 51·5 per mille on average strength, or a ratio of 19·6 less than in 1895.

The cases included under the old heading of "Respiratory Diseases" in Statement XV have since the commencement of 1896 been divided into "Pneumonia" and "Other respiratory diseases." The number of cases under these two headings in 1896 amounted to 2,059, while in 1895, the number was only 1,688. With the increase in cases the mortality rose from 165 to 252, percentages on cases of 9·8 and 12·2 respectively. In 1896 the number of cases of pneumonia included in the above was 1,001, which accounted for 214 of the deaths, or a case-mortality of 21·4 per cent.

In the temporary jail at Chunar, where only old and infirm male convicts transferred from other jails are confined, the mortality on an average daily strength of 1,465·75 amounted to 155, or a ratio of 105·74 per mille. In an extract at page 25 of the report, the Superintendent states that "the health as a whole (was) excellent." It is difficult to understand how such a statement could have been made in face of the above figures. Nothing approaching to such mortality occurs in any other large jail which receives old and infirm prisoners, and it may be justifiably surmised that the great mortality is probably due to the transfer of prisoners affected with active disease.

In paragraph 10 of my note for the year 1895, I pointed out the deficiency in the daily amount of salt and oil issued to the prisoners; the amount of the former has been increased from 100 to 150 grains and of the latter from $\frac{1}{25}$ of a chittack to $\frac{4}{25}$ of a chittack. The amounts are still below that recommended by the Committee on Jail Administration.

Punjab.—The average daily strength of all classes of prisoners was 11,858. The sickness and mortality were much less than in 1895. The ratio of admissions into hospital on the above strength was 1,237 as compared with one of 1,451 in 1895. The number of deaths fell from 248 to 186, or from a ratio per mille on daily average strength of 21·80 to 15·69. Among convicts the ratio in 1895 was 22·05 and in 1896 only 16·09.

These favourable results are stated in paragraph 69 of the report to have been due "to the general healthiness of the year, the practice of giving a daily dose of cinchonidine to all prisoners during the months when malarial fever is most prevalent, to the great care bestowed by medical officers and their subordinates, to the allotment of tasks and the treatment and care of the prisoners in their charge, and to the extra clothing issued to the convalescents and sick during the winter months."

The total mortality in the four central prisons was equal to a ratio of 18·68, while in district jails it was only 14·52. The higher ratio in the former was due to the outbreak of influenza which appeared in the Montgomery Prison in December 1895 continuing into 1896, and to the larger number of deaths from pneumonia and tubercle of the lungs which occurred in these central prisons, particularly in the one at Lahore. In the latter, 34 cases of pneumonia were admitted with 12 deaths, and 14 cases of tubercle of the lungs with 5 deaths. The ratio of deaths in this jail was, however, only 17·16, as compared with 16·39 in 1895.

In the Montgomery and Mooltan Central Prisons there was a decline in mortality from ratios of 51·35 and 20·44, respectively, in 1895, to 23·62 and 17·88 in 1896.

As noted above, the admission-rate into hospital was considerably lower than in the previous year; and the decrease was common to all the principal diseases.

The admissions for malarial fevers were 5,871, or a decrease of 1,036 on those of the previous year, although the former numbers include the direct sequelæ of these fevers, which was not the case in 1895. The provincial mortality from fevers was slightly higher in 1896 than in 1895, but the rate in both years was a comparatively low one, owing to the small rainfall.

The Inspector-General states in paragraph 74 of the report that "this satisfactory result may be attributed to a variety of causes, but more especially to the healthiness of the year, possibly due to the rainfall being scantier than usual, and to the practice in force of issuing cinchonidine in small doses to all the prisoners during the autumnal months."

There were 699 admissions for dysentery and 973 for diarrhœa, or a total of 1,672, being 284 less than in 1895. The number of deaths was the same as in the previous year, viz., 26, 19 of which were due to dysentery and 7 to diarrhœa. The percentage of deaths to cases in the former disease was only 2·72. In 20 of the jails there were no deaths from either of these diseases. It may be mentioned in this connection that the issue of boiled water for drinking is now limited to the Amritsar, Lahore Female, and Dharmsala jails.

There has been a marked reduction in the admissions and deaths for respiratory diseases. Tubercle of the lung gave 91 admissions with 22 deaths; pneumonia 202 with 43 deaths; other respiratory diseases 530 with 3 deaths, or a total of 823 admissions and 68 deaths, as compared with 1,085 admissions and 134 deaths in 1895.

Cases of anæmia and debility fell from 163 with 3 deaths in 1895 to 135 with 2 deaths in 1896.

No case of cholera occurred during the year.

Burma.—The average daily strength of all prisoners was 14,461, or 799 more than in the previous year.

In paragraph 18 (b), page 19 of the report, it is stated that "about half the jails in the province were in a chronic condition of overcrowding throughout the year, and the only jails which were not at one time or another in this condition were Kyaukpyu, Moulmein, Toungoo, Shwebo, and Magwe."

The ratio of deaths on the above strength was 18·19 per mille, or 0·26 higher than the ratio in 1895. The total number of deaths among convicts amounted to 249, which, on an average daily strength of 14,031, equals a ratio per mille of 17·75, or 0·58 higher than that of the previous year. There were, however, 26 convicts released on account of sickness, while in 1895 the number so released was only 15.

In the seven central prisons with an average daily strength of 10,279, the admissions into hospital were equal to a ratio on that strength of 840·8 per mille. In district jails with a strength of 3,752 the ratio was only 544·2. The mortality in the former was, however, only 17·6 per mille, as compared with 19·6 in the latter. On the other hand, the mortality among short-term prisoners was lower than among long-term ones. Those under six months in residence with a strength of 5,879 gave a mortality of 16·84 per mille, while those above six months, with a strength of 8,143 had a ratio of 18·42 per mille.

The death-rates were exceptionally high among convicts in the jails at Bhamo, Pagan, Mergui, Akyab, Moulmein, and Mandalay. In the three former, the population is small, 80, 94, and 31 respectively, so that a few deaths gave high rates, but in Akyab the average daily strength was 374 and the sickness and mortality were very high, the ratio of admissions being 700·53 and of deaths 50·80. Nearly one-half of the deaths, 9 out of 19, were due to dysentery. The admissions for this disease amounted to 133, and the ratio is considerably higher than that of any other jail in the province. It was also the highest in 1895, so that the instructions issued in 1895 regarding the early discovery and treatment of such cases do not appear to have had any effect. The district, it is understood, is an unhealthy one, and the free population are prone to affections of the bowels.

The majority of the deaths in the Moulmein Jail were due to dysentery and tubercle of the lungs. As this jail has been persistently unhealthy for the past ten years, the Local Government is of opinion that it should be converted from a central prison to a district jail, as soon as sufficient accommodation is available elsewhere.

In the central prison at Mandalay with a strength of 1,085, there were 33 deaths, or a ratio of 30·41. Five were due to dysentery, 7 to tubercle of the lung, 4 each to pneumonia and diarrhœa. Although the mortality was high, the admissions and daily sick-rates were lower than the provincial average.

The increase in the total deaths from tubercle of the lungs and respiratory diseases was doubtless influenced by the overcrowding referred to above.

Assam.—Both sickness and mortality were less than in 1895 among the convicts confined in the jails of Assam.

The daily average strength of convicts was 1,189. There were 1,242 admissions into hospital with 68 deaths, ratios per mille of average strength of 1,044·19 and 57·17, respectively. In 1895 the ratio of admissions was 1,305·26, and of deaths 69·20. Twenty-two prisoners were released on account of sickness, as against 12 in 1895. As the 10 prisoners in excess would have almost certainly died if kept in jail, they must for purposes of comparison be added to the total mortality, which raises the ratio of deaths to 65·6.

The conclusions arrived at by the Chief Commissioner as to the causes of the high mortality in 1895 led to the issue of orders in June 1896 restricting the employment of prisoners on extramural labour, and providing for the supply of dry and adequate clothing to those employed on such labour on their return to jail. As pointed out in the note on the sickness and mortality in 1895, it was considered probable that other causes besides extramural labour were probably at work in producing the sickness, and it was suggested that the scales of diet in use were probably defective and insufficient. Steps have been taken to introduce into the larger jails the following measures, and rules are to be drawn up to make them generally applicable in all jails and lock-ups:—

(1) A more liberal scale of diet, including a large quantity of good vegetables and an extra meal in the early morning for prisoners employed extramurally.

(2) The discontinuance of the use of new rice.

(3) The more extended use of iron and quinine as a prophylactic.

The improvement consequent on the introduction of these arrangements will doubtless be more marked in the results for the present year.

The admissions into hospital for malarial fevers were 446 with 11 deaths, as compared with 567 admissions and 11 deaths in 1895.

There was a small decrease, from 420 in 1895 to 393 in 1896, in the cases of dysentery and diarrhœa treated. The ratio per mille on daily average strength, viz., 330·5, is very high, and shows the necessity that exists for the introduction of the improvements in diet and clothing referred to above. The deaths fell from 36 to 24, or from a percentage on cases of 8·6 to 6·1.

There were 10 admissions with 4 deaths from tubercle of the lung and 11 admissions with 5 deaths from pneumonia.

Central Provinces.—The scarcity that prevailed in 1895 in the Central Provinces and led to a greatly increased mortality among the prisoners—nearly double of that in 1894—developed in 1896 into actual famine, extending over the greater part of the province. The condition of the prisoners on admission was consequently worse than that described in the report for 1895, and the results are seen in the great increase in the sickness and mortality, more especially of the latter.

The daily average strength of the convicts was 5,196·26, and of under-trial prisoners, 391·82. The deaths amounted to 404, 20 of which occurred among the under-trial prisoners. The ratio of deaths per mille of daily average strength was among convicts 73·90, and among prisoners under-trial 51·04. In 1895, the total mortality was 277, and the ratios among convicts and under-trials were 57·65 and 31·12 respectively.

The average daily strength of convicts in the three central prisons was 3,341·04, and the ratio of deaths 46·99 as compared with a ratio of 31·74 in 1895. The ratio in the Jubbulpore Central Prison was 81·71, in Nagpur 19·25, and in Raipur 18·49. The total deaths in Jubbulpore amounted to 122, and the principal cause of the mortality was dysentery. The 167 cases of dysentery which were treated accounted for 75 of the deaths, or a percentage of 61·5 on the total mortality. A special enquiry appears to have been instituted as to the cause and nature of a disease so severe as to produce a mortality of 45 per cent. on cases. It appears, as the result of the enquiry, to have been "established conclusively that it originated with the low state of vitality to which the outside population had been reduced, and that it was infectious was established by the circumstance that prisoners who had been long in jail contracted it from the new admissions." I would be inclined to add also the influence of local conditions and circumstances.

The mortality in district jails, and among short-term prisoners was, as might have been expected from the condition of the admissions, greatly in excess of that in central prisons. With an average daily strength of 1,855·22 convicts in district jails the death rate was 122·35. The total number of deaths among prisoners under six months' residence was 291, which, on an average strength of 2,701, equals a ratio of 107·72 per mille, while the deaths among those above six months' residence were 93, or a ratio per mille of 36·6, on an average daily strength of 2,539. The mortality among under-trial prisoners in the district jails was equal to a ratio of 50·75 on an average daily strength of 295·57. This might lead to the inference that the mortality was not altogether due to the miserable condition of the admissions, but may have been assisted by the conditions of life in jail. It must, however, be remembered that under-trial prisoners are, as a rule, only a few days in the lock-up. On the other hand, the comparatively low mortality in some of the jails, which is not clearly explained in the report, would lead one to suspect that local conditions did exercise an influence in producing the high mortality in others: for example, the Nimar District Jail had a ratio of 12·51, Raipur Central Prison 18·49, Nagpur Central Prison 19·25, Wardha District Jail 19·04, Chanda District Jail 32·65, Chhindwara District Jail 34·56, Betul District Jail 39·32, and Hoshangabad District Jail 40·66. Judging, however, by the returns of mortality from the districts in which these jails are situated, the pressure of scarcity in these districts was not so great as it was in some of the others.

The number of daily average sick, 217·62, or 48·72 higher than in 1895, does not show such a marked increase as would have been expected with the high mortality. The chief causes of the sickness were malarial fevers, dysentery, and diarrhœa. The two latter combined gave 1,522 admissions with 215 deaths, as compared with 986 admissions and 142 deaths in 1895. The admissions for dysentery alone amounted to 710 with 172 deaths. The disease was most prevalent in the central prison at Jubbulpore and in the district jails at Damoh, Seoni, Balaghat, and Narsinghpur, in which districts famine existed in a severe form.

The cause of the disease was undoubtedly due to a low and anæmic condition, the result of chronic starvation. A scorbutic form of dysentery, so called, is under such circumstances developed, and the patient, as a rule, rapidly succumbs. Any treatment, to be effective must be accompanied with a milk diet. Judging from the report, it appears that no special measures were sanctioned to meet the emergency: the expenditure in connection with the sick in hospital and the weak and infirm gangs was in fact less than in 1895. Rs. 4,581 were expended on sick diet and extras for patients in hospital, and Rs. 1,563 on extras and special diets for weakly prisoners not in hospital.

In paragraph 52 of the report the Inspector-General writes—"Vegetables were also issued in several jails in excess of the authorised rate on the score of health, and in instances in which purchases had to be made in the market the expenditure has been taken against rations. This has occurred in spite of repeated instructions that the prescribed diet scales cannot be exceeded except on medical grounds, and that when this happens the outlay should be charged under the head hospital expenses." The drift of the remarks on the vital statistics is to show that the whole body of the prisoners were in a more or less sickly condition, and the "medical grounds" for the issue of exceptional diets must therefore have been apparent.

As in 1895, the greater portion of the expenditure, Rs. 1,563 on extra diets, was incurred in the jails at Nagpur, Raipur, and Bilaspur. Rs. 1,156 were so spent in these three jails, and the two former showed the lowest mortality of all the jails in the province.

No mention is made of the issue of quinine or cinchonidine as a prophylactic.

The total death-rate of convicts in Statements XIV, XV and XVI do not agree, and Statement XV has been wrongly numbered as XVI.

Hyderabad Assigned Districts.—The average daily strength of convicts was 1,260. There were 731 admissions into hospital with 30 deaths, equal to a ratio of 580·08 and 23·81 respectively on the above strength. These results are more favourable than in the previous year, when the rates were 913·52 and 25·64.

The highest mortality occurred in the Yeotmal Jail, where, with an average strength of 86·65, there were 5 deaths—1 due to cholera—or a ratio of 57·7 on average strength. The prisoners admitted into this jail were nearly all in indifferent or bad health, but there was a good deal of overcrowding throughout the year. It appears from the sanitary sheet received in this office that the condition of the barracks is not satisfactory. The average ratio of deaths in the other jails was 21·30.

In the Akola Jail there were 12 deaths, or a ratio of 26·40 per mille on average daily strength, as compared with 39·61 in 1895. It is stated in the report that considerable improvements have been effected in the garden of this jail, thus rendering it more productive.

Coorg.—The average daily strength in the one jail at Merkara, including under-trial and civil prisoners, was 95·64. There were only 2 deaths, both among convicts; one was due to cirrhosis of the liver and the other to epilepsy. In 1895 there were 5 deaths.

The two scales of diets previously in use, one for prisoners under three months and the other for those above that period, have been discontinued, and the latter issued to all convicts sentenced to rigorous imprisonment.

General Remarks.—I have arranged in the following table, the sickness and mortality among convicts in the jails under the different Local Governments and Administrations, according to the rates of mortality, and would direct attention to the high mortality in the jails in the last three provinces as compared with that in the first three on the list:

(a) Includes the Madras debtors' jail.
(b) Includes two extra-mural gangs, the common jail, and the House of Correction, Bombay.
(c) Exclusive of lock-ups.
(d) Includes the female jail, Lahore.
(e) The figures for the Secunderabad Jail are incorporated in this and in the succeeding statements, but the figures for 1894 for the Wun subsidiary jail are not included under the orders contained in Berar Secretary's No. 83, dated 21 January 1895; this jail being merely a lock-up, not under the control or management of the Jail Department.
(f) The difference between the prisoners remaining at the end of 1894 and the number at the commencement of 1895 is due to the erroneous exclusion from the returns of 1894 of a recovered lunatic who was sent to the Madras penitentiary to undergo a period of probation.
(g) Includes 105 male and 5 female prisoners of the Thana Central Jail, which was reduced to the status of a subordinate jail.
(h) Excluding one State prisoner in the Dacca Central Jail, hence the difference between the prisoners remaining at the end of 1895 and those in jail at the commencement of 1896.
(i) Excluding the prisoners confined in lock-ups situated and controlled outside the Jail Department or in custody in magistrate's camps; hence the difference between the prisoners remaining at the end of 1895 and those in jail at the commencement of 1896.

The daily average strength of the jail population for the year was 15,553 convicts, of whom 15,157 were males and 396 females; 932 under-trial prisoners, of whom 893 were males and 39 females; and 58 civil prisoners. The number of male convict prisoners in jails on the 31st December 1896 was 16,434. Of these, 1,367 were in hospital and not in the ordinary wards. The number of female convict prisoners on the above date was 427. On the 31st December 1895 the number of male convicts in jails was 14,946, of whom 1,234 were in hospital and not in the ordinary wards. The number of female convict prisoners on that date was 344. After deducting from the daily average number of convicts the daily average number of sick prisoners given in column 7, Statement XIV, for whom separate accommodation exists in hospitals, which are excluded from the figures given in column 3, it is found that the daily average number of prisoners has exceeded the ordinary sanctioned sleeping accommodation in the following jails:—Bankura 4·72; Baraset 11·17; Rampur Boalia 39·83; Barisal 26·34; Buxar 12·10; Ranchi 20·89; Purulia 3·21. In order to prevent overcrowding of sleeping wards, the excess prisoners in these jails slept in worksheds, temporary sheds, or verandahs, especially prepared for them. In cases of under-trial prisoners received into jail over and above the sanctioned capacity, the procedure reported in 1895 was adopted. The capacity of under-trial wards was exceeded in the following jails:—Burdwan 0·43; Hooghly 1·62; Alipore 10·77; Khulna 1·55; Pabna 2·92; Dacca 0·74; Mymensingh 4·13; Faridpur 5·42; Barisal 25·32; Comilla 0·77; Gaya 17·52; Arrah 4·38; Chapra 22·97; Motihari 25·60; and Chaibassa 9·11.

Food.

92. This subject was fully dealt with in last year's report. The storage of grain in bulk has enabled Superintendents to lay in a store of wholesome grain of better quality than formerly used, and if a sufficient store is laid in, there is no occasion for the issue of any but old and well-matured rice. The ill effects of eating new rice or rice from paddy which has been newly boiled and husked are well known. Many Superintendents and Medical Officers have paid great attention to the subject of the cooking of food, which, if ill done, has the worst effect on the health of the prisoners. The new ranges now being introduced cook food in a superior way and with much more certain results. Badly cooked or husked dál is recognized as one of the commonest causes of bowel-complaint. It is a belief of the natives of this country that dál cannot be properly cooked in hard water containing lime. Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel R. H. Whitwell, who has given the subject much attention, has pointed out the advantages of using previously boiled water for cooking dál, the boiling having the effect of precipitating some of the lime and of rendering the water much more soft and suitable for cooking. Surgeon-Captain Buchanan has remarked that the hardness can be removed by the use of khar or crude carbonate of soda (1 oz. to every 100 prisoners), which is obtainable in every bazar, and renders the water soft and usable. Some jails experience a difficulty in obtaining good cooks among the prisoners. The highest caste prisoners are selected for the purpose, but it is remarked that Brahmins seldom cook food in their own households. The difficulty is to be met by training sufficient long-term high caste prisoners. The cooking and supply of invalid food to sick prisoners at sufficiently short intervals is a difficult matter to arrange in small jails, and requires constant attention. Miniature ranges with suitable cooking vessels are now supplied for hospital kitchens from the Alipore Jail.

The diet scales of the Jail Code allow of great variety of food, and the value or variety in improving weight and condition has been noticed by several medical officers. Variety is especially necessary during the unhealthy months of the year. During the year some experiments were made in the variation of diet by curries of different dáls and vegetables. These were tried in the central jails of the Province. Reports have now been received, which show that the curries form a palatable variety, which is most appreciated by weakly prisoners of feeble appetite and digestion, such as are found in the special, infirm, and losing-weight gangs. The supply of pure milk from jail dairies to old and weakly prisoners is of great benefit to their health.

The dieting of weakly prisoners is dealt with in the reports of medical officers, which show that better, more digestible, and more expensive food is given to the convalescent, the weakly, the old and infirm, to those losing weight or suffering from anæmia or malnutrition. By the careful separation of those prisoners with whom the ordinary jail diet does not agree, or who from causes of ill-health require special food, the Medical Officer is able to check the tendency to disease at the incipient stage, and to supply the special food requisite for return to health All those who are likely to swell the sick or death lists are thus constantly kept under the eye of the Medical Officer. A striking example of what results can be effected in this way is shown at the Hazaribagh Central Jail—the infirmary jail of the Province. Out of the 1,000 prisoners confined in Surgeon-Captian A. H. Nott's jail, at least 600 are malaria stricken or enfeebled men, who have been sent there for the benefit of their health. The jail therefore contains an unusual number of weakly or old prisoners who require better and special diet; yet so well have the prisoners been selected, the dietary arrangements systematized, and health improved, that the weakly-prisoner gangs contained in January only 213 prisoners, or 19 per cent. of the total population, many of whom are fed on the diet of the ordinary prisoner as ordered in the Jail Code for Bihari and Bengali prisoners. The death-rate is not above the average death-rate of the Province, and the cost of dieting and hospital charges combined, notwithstanding that the cost of food-grains in this district was almost the highest in the province, and owing to increased population large purchases had to be made at an unfavourable time, is below that of many jails more favourably situated. These prisoners are arranged in gangs from those newly left hospital receiving better and more expensive food, especially milk food, down to the gang of prisoners who receive the same food as the ordinary prisoner, but are constantly under the eye of the Medical Officer and subordinates. In this gang, too, are found prisoners with disabling physical infirmities, paralysis, etc., who cannot work, but do not require expensive diet; also persons of weak intellect, who are not fit for the discipline of the labour gangs. The idiosyncrasy of the Medical Officer will determine to what extent prisoners are allowed the special concessions of the weakly-prisoner gang, in which, as I have remarked in a previous year, the position of the prisoner is one of great comfort and ease, and in which he is an additional expense to the State. The Hazaribagh Jail may be quoted as an example of a jail containing an unusual proportion of invalids, where the wants of weakly prisoners are fully supplied and the death-rate reduced to an extraordinarily low figure, while, owing to careful selection, the number of prisoners expensively fed is few. At the Burdwan Jail the health and condition of the prisoners formerly very inferior is now good, and has been much improved by Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel W. H. Gregg, who has taken much care of individual prisoners. He has kept one-third to quarter of the whole of the prisoners in the jail in the weakly-prisoner gang, and has fed them on better and more expensive food, which has improved their health and condition, and greatly increased the hospital charges.

Vegetables.

93. The most valuable vegetables grown in jail gardens are English, country or Otaheite potatoes, onions and English vegetables, cabbages, etc., but in place of these it is too much the habit to grow sags, gourds and other worthless green stuff, which have no nutritive or antiscorbutic properties. Of the peculiar properties possessed by potatoes in removing the condition of the gums and teeth and the tendency to anæmia œdema sometimes attributed to a scorbutic origin, Surgeon-Major R. Davis of the Rangoon Jail has written a pamphlet during the year which supports the opinions previously expressed by jail medical officers in this Province. No mention, however, is made of onions or of that excellent antiscorbutic combination—potatoes and onions, which has been found so useful in Bengal. The China cabbage (brassica Chinensis) possesses many good qualities, making it suitable for cultivation in jail gardens. It can be grown at all seasons of the year, especially during the hot weather and rains, when native vegetables only of the most worthless description are ordinarily procurable. Good vegetables at any time, but especially at these seasons, have a marked effect in improving the health of the prisoners, and I have therefore circulated instructions as to the best methods of cultivation at different seasons of the year. In flavour it is not unlike sea kale and is succulent, easily digested, and grows to good size under favourable conditions, and though not equal as a food to good English cabbage, it is certainly superior to ordinary native vegetables. At the Alipore and Bhagalpur Central Jails it has been largely grown, and seed is now available at Alipore.

Water.

94. The principal works in progress during the year for the improvement of water-supply were—at Buxar, where Rs. 12,500 were allotted, Hazaribagh Rs. 5,000, Alipore Rs. 2,281, Bhagalpur Rs. 2,150, Comilla Rs. 1,907, and Gaya Rs. 600. In addition to these works, the sum of Rs. 14,486 was expended in Pasteur-Chamberland filter installations in the jails at Motihari, Chaibassa, Bankipore, Jalpaigori, Bogra, Dinajpur, and Rangpur. The arrangements for the introduction of Ganges water by pump and pipe into the Monghyr Jail were completed on the 16th May. The Buxar scheme includes the raising of water from the main stream of the Ganges by a powerful pump travelling on rails to meet the varying height of the water level, introduction to settling and disinfection tanks by pipe, filtration, boiling, cooling and distribution by pipe to hydrants. The work is well advanced, and a sum will be allotted this year for its completion. At Hazaribagh a sufficient and pure supply has always been a difficulty in dry years; a deep well is now being blasted through rock. The other proposed arrangements are similar to those at Buxar. The boiler is being fixed and several large tanks for settlement, disinfection and cooling are in progress. A sum sufficient to complete the work will be allotted during the present financial year. At Alipore a tank has been built capable of holding a reserve supply in case of accident to the municipal main, and the pipe supply system has been added to; pipes are now being introduced into the upper storied wards. At Bhagalpur the pipe system has been extended and improved. The water-works for the introduction of Ganges water were originally constructed by the Bhagalpur Jail for its own use. The extension of the pipe system to the town of Bhagalpur has not been beneficial to the purity of the water, and proposals have been made by this Department for its improvement. Allotments for the above works have been made from the grant for major works, and amount to Rs. 39,284. A number of improvements have been effected by allotments from other grants, the most important of which are the extension of the pipe supply system of the Rampur Boalia Jail by 4,800 feet, the river having changed its course and receded to the far side of a large sand-bank. At Bankura a large and deep well is being blasted through rock. These are all works of permanent utility and intended to give a constant and abundant supply of pure water.

The installation of Pasteur-Chamberland filters at Motihari was completed in September, and has worked without a hitch. Briefly, the arrangements are two wells side by side, from one of which the water is raised and the other is a dry well to contain the suction and force-pump. The second well is necessary to prevent contamination of the water by the prisoners working the pump, or from its oiling, examination and mending. To obtain pressure the water is pumped up to tanks on the top of the double-storied ward about 43 feet above ground level. From these tanks it descends in pipes to a filter of two cylinders, each containing over 100 candles and capable of filtering about 2,000 gallons in the 24 hours. The filtered water is collected in storage-tanks and distributed by pipe to the different yards, cook-shed, hospital, cells and warder's quarters. At Dumka Jail—

The Pasteur-Chamberland filter was completed and has been working since April last. An additional tank with necessary pumps to raise boiled water to a high level before filtration was completed on the 5th November, and the old filter was replaced by two improved ones at the same time.

The sum of Rs. 10,000 has been reserved from the allotment for major works for the further supply of Pasteur-Chamberland filters to the jails of this province during the present year. The arrangements for the supply of pure water include settlement, disinfection by permanganate of potassium, filtration, boiling, cooling and distribution by pipes, and are being gradually completed as funds are available, but every jail has, in boiling, at least one means of effective sterilization. In the case of jails supplied with Pasteur-Chamberland filter, arrangements for boiling are also made, so that in case of breakdown of the filtering arrangements the water can be sterilized by boiling. Those Medical Officers who mention the subject report favourably on the use of permanganate of potassium as suggested by Circular orders in 1895. The disinfection of water reservoirs to prevent infectious disease has since been directed by rule. The chemical and bacteriological examination of water were continued, and the thanks of the Department are due to Surgeon-Major L. A. Waddell, Chemical Examiner to Government, for the many examinations and reports made by him, and to Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel D. D. Cunningham and Dr. W. J. Simpson, Health Officer of Calcutta, for their bacteriological examinations of jail water for pathological bacteria. The simple test described in last year's report for counting the microbes in water has been in use during the year, and is of value in estimating the efficiency of the arrangements for water sterilization. Phenyle added to the bathing water has been found useful in preventing prisoners drinking this water. Lime has been used for the same purpose and in tanks.

Clothing.

95. There is little to add to the remarks in previous reports. An extra blanket was issued in some jails other than those in Bihar and Chota Nagpur during a burst of cold weather. At Buxar a cotton sheet was given to each prisoner to wear at night during the hot weather and rains, when a blanket could not be borne and chills were caught from lying without covering. The Medical Officer remarks that it resulted in a reduction of admissions into hospital from fever and pneumonia. Further experiments will be made. The permission to take one blanket out of the wards to be worn during the chill of the early morning and evening parades is much appreciated and has saved many chills. Difficulty has always been felt in providing any clothing to replace that wetted by sudden showers, etc. I therefore reproduce the remarks of the Superintendent, Hazaribagh Jail, who appears to have overcome the difficulty—

An attempt was made in 1895 to supply a complete change of cotton clothing, but it proved impracticable, as it caused a great loss of time in taking this into store in the evening and re-issuing in the next morning. Giving it to be kept entirely with the prisoners also led to an excessive amount of offences with regard to clothing. The most satisfactory way was found to be to give the prisoner a pair of extra partly worn janghias and to make him wrap up the remainder of his clothing in one of his blankets and to work in janghias and protected by the blanket kurtah. By this means he invariably had dry clothing to put on to sleep in.

Speaking of clothing and bedding, the Superintendent of the Rangpur Jail remarks—

Of this as of food the prisoner has more than enough. With an extra blanket-coat and janghias and blanket he never need be cold. To the convalescent and special gang even another blanket is allowed.

Weight test.

96. In accordance with the desire expressed in paragraph 2 of Government of India letter No. $\frac{4\text{-Jails}}{249}$, dated the 27th June 1895, the following table has been compiled from figures furnished by Medical Officers of the seven central jails other than the Bhagalpur Central Jail. The average weight for the seven jails in relation to height differs from the table prepared by Surgeon-Captain Buchanan—

Sanitary improvements.

97. The sanitary improvements noticed in previous years have been continued, and are only limited by exhaustion of funds. The number of wards constructed in accordance with modern ideas on sanitary requirements has been increased. Cubicles have been placed in some of them; verandahs are being added. Segregation of new-comers is being more generally done, but is impossible in many jails with the present full population owing to want of room and separate enclosures. The Medical Officer of the Bhagalpur Central Jail remarks—

On 12 different occasions infectious diseases attempted to gain admittance into this jail during the year, but failed owing to our strict system of examining at once all newly admitted prisoners, of quarantining for 7 to 12 days all newly admitted prisoners, and to our practice of isolating all infected cases for a period longer than the known period of personal infection in each disease.

The ventilation of wards has been increased, as at Bhagalpur, by ridge ventilation. At the Presidency Jail improvements are being carried out to the ventilation of the main building and hospital at a cost of Rs. 10,762. At Purulia the ventilation of one of the main sleeping wards has been much improved. At Rangpur the lowering of the outer wall and the extension of the inner area by throwing back portion of the outer wall were in progress during the year. At Bankura unnecessary high walls were lowered to allow of better perflation of air. At Comilla the jail enclosure wall is being thrown back to give more air and room. The following extracts from the Annual Report of the Superintendent, Bhagalpur Central Jail, show briefly what sanitary improvements are being carried out there:

Ridge ventilation to roof of No. 14 sleeping ward has been a very great improvement, and sanction has been given for carrying out ridge ventilation on several other sleeping wards and worksheds. Six-inch water-pipes have been laid down by jail labour from the main outside the walls to the central tower. A locked wire-gauze milk house has been built near the dispensary for keeping milk and dahi, so that the milk, etc., may be entirely under the control of the medical subordinate.

The object of these milk houses, which are being introduced at many jails, is to provide a cool, airy place, removed from the contaminations of living rooms, cow-houses, etc., and of flies, where the milk and milk food shall be in view of the responsible officers of the jail and under the control of the Civil Hospital Assistant, who will account for its collection, condition, and distribution. It is intended that peculation and mismanagement of the milk from jail dairies shall be stopped.

The 25 male cells and 4 female cells have had their high surrounding walls lowered, thus materially improving the ventilation of the cells. A new Alipore pattern cooking range has been erected in the hospital cook-house, and is a great improvement. An Alipore pattern iron truck on short rails has been built into hospital wall. It enables us to quickly remove excreta, and soiled clothing at once outside the jail. The new iron 'cage' latrines have been erected in each hospital building, and sheds for them are being added. A new workshed has been built in A class female enclosure. A portable railway 440 yards has been laid down in garden from trenching ground to night-soil depôt.

The cage latrines referred to are designed to allow of the night-soil and urine receptacles remaining in the open air, and not inside the wards, thereby avoiding the breathing of air laden with the products of putrefaction. The provision of these latrines with outside receptacles is a work of great necessity. The details and specification of the jail pattern day latrine (Pabna pattern) have been recently worked out with great care, and this form of latrine would probably meet with much favour in other institutions and for municipal and general purposes.

The following paragraphs are extracted from the report of the Superintendent of the Dumka Jail :

1. The new store-house outside the jail enclosure was completed early in the year.

2. The old hospital ward has been converted into a hospital for male prisoners.

3 A new Pasteur filter with pipe to cook-shed, etc., has been erected, and is now in working order.

4. The old post-mortem shed in outer garden has been converted into a cholera shed.

Mat ceiling to corrugated iron roof of workshed was put up before the hot weather.

Land was acquired at the following jails to extend the clear space round the jail and to allow of the cultivation of vegetables :—At Hooghly and Ranchi the jail gardens were extended at a cost of Rs. 5,444-1-7 and Rs. 1,848-10. Rs. 200-10-1 were given for a plot of land in the outer grounds of the Dacca Central Jail for constructing a shed for the segregation of suspicious cases. At Gaya the extension of a tank cost Rs. 317. Rs. 750 were expended for a site for a cholera camp for the Alipore and the Presidency Jails, and Rs. 42-7-10 sanctioned for a similar purpose at Bogra. The extension of the jail garden at Cuttack cost Rs. 1,479-4-10.

In conservancy, other principal improvements are the substitution, in accordance with the rules of the Jail Code, of lime-washing for the insanitary custom of washing with cowdung, which is a device for covering in and retaining indefinitely dirt and disease germs, both from the latrine or ward and its contents and from the cowdung itself. The invention of a turnstile for the ready removal of hospital stools after disinfection through the outer wall for incineration outside. There is further evidence in favour of the use of Donaldson's night-soil ejector. At Bhagalpur the excreta of 1,600 prisoners was inoffensively removed by this means daily before 8-30 A.M.

The funds available yearly for sanitary improvements are only sufficient to remove a very small portion of the defects of construction, which are very evident.

Gratuities to Hospital Assistants.

98. The amount expended this year was Rs. 4,936-4-8 against Rs. 4,802-1-0 last year, and was distributed among 54 Civil Hospital Assistants attached to jails of this province. This reward, as reported in previous years, is much appreciated and is an inducement to Civil Hospital Assistants to pay careful attention to every condition of jail life calculated to improve the health of the prisoners.

99. The following table gives the mortality among prisoners of all classes from 1844 to 1896 for each year, and also for each decade:

The table gives the information that, calculated by groups of years, the mortality of Bengal jails for the last 20 years shows a progressive reduction. The mortality for the ten years ending 1883 was 61·5 per mille, that for the ten years ending 1893 was 40·7 per mille, that for the last five years was 35·8, while that of the last year, 1896, was 28·7. The average death-rate per mille of population from cholera in the decade ending 1863 was 1·4; in that ending 1873 it was 10·8; in that ending with 1883 it was 8·3; in that ending 1893 it was 4·7. The average for the last five years is 3·0 per mille and for the last year 3·7. Exclusive of cholera, the mortality ratio 25·0 per mille from all other causes is the lowest recorded.

General health.

100. The reports of the district medical officers show that the year 1896, especially in the first six months, and owing to increased prevalence of fever, bowel-disease, influenza, and measles, was not nearly so healthy as 1895. In some places there was an extraordinary absence of malarial diseases in the autumnal months owing to the scanty rainfall and increased dryness. In the Presidency Division, Calcutta shows a lower death-rate, but cholera was very prevalent. In the Midnapore district there has been an increase of cholera and fever. At Bankura the public health is said to have been worse than it has been for seven years except the phenomenally bad year 1894. The chief diseases were dysentery and ague; the autumn months, on account of their unusual dryness, were comparatively healthy. Except for influenza, which was very prevalent in the beginning of the year, the districts of Murshidabad and Nadia were fairly healthy. The failure of crops in the Kaliganj and Sadar thanas of the Jessore district in the tract between the Copodak and Shipsa has resulted in the people there suffering from scarcity and insufficiency of food, which will have a marked effect on their health. In the Rajshahi Division the district of Rajshahi is reported to have been extraordinarily unhealthy during the first quarter of the year and very unsatisfactory for the whole year. The Medical Officer of the Central Jail is of opinion that the health of prisoners on admission has greatly deteriorated during the last three or four years. The health of the Dinajpur district is described as very bad, and that of Rangpur as one of the most unhealthy on record. The Darjeeling district was less healthy, and bowel-complaints were more common than in 1895. In the Dacca Division the year is reported as unhealthy in Dacca, where influenza caused a widespread condition of debility and depressed health. The town of Dacca suffered, the death-rate being 2½ times that of the jail. In Faridpur malarial fevers were more frequent and deadly. The health of the Mymensingh district was comparatively good as compared with 1895. In the Chittagong Division in the district of Chittagong the deficiency of rainfall brought increased sickness and prevalence of fever among the outside population, though the health of the prisoners remained comparatively good. In the Noakhali and Tippera districts the public health is reported to have been worse—in the Tippera district as being much worse than in 1894. In the Patna Division the death-rate from fever in the Patna district was extraordinarily high, but in the jail there were fewer admissions than in previous years. The Gaya and Saran districts were very unhealthy, but the health of the Shahabad district was good. In the Muzaffarpur district the year was a sickly one; on the other hand, the condition and general health of the prisoners was excellent and the death-rate never so small. The health of the Darbhanga district is said to have been worse than in any of the four preceding years. In the Bhagalpur Division, Bhagalpur and Monghyr were fairly healthy, but Purnea is reported to have been less salubrious. In the Chota Nagpur Division the Hazaribagh district as a whole and the immediate neighbourhood of the town of Hazaribagh were extremely unhealthy in the early part of the year, but the rainy months were unusually healthy; fever was almost unknown both among the outside population and in the jail; the health of the Lohardaga and Palamau districts was worse; in the latter influenza and measles were prevalent, and there were many admissions into jail from diarrhœa, enlarged spleen, and other diseases. The higher death-rate in the Chaibassa district is thought by the Magistrate to be due to unremitting attention to the work of registration.

101. The daily average sick among prisoners of all classes decreased from 716 in 1895 to 678 in 1896.

Daily average sick.

102. The proportional number of admissions to hospital decreased from 1254·0 in 1895 to 1152·2 in 1896. The jails which showed the largest proportion in the number of admissions to hospital were—Dinajpur 3276·8, Bogra 2515·7, Chapra 2402·0, Barasat 2236·6, Rangpur 2232·6, Malda 2148·2, Jessore 1981·4, Bankura 1927·1, and Berhampore 1916·8.

The ratio of daily average sick per mille to daily average population decreased from 43·5 in 1895 to 39·6 in 1896. The jails which have returned the highest ratio of daily average sick were—

Dinajpur	90·2	Dacca	70·8
Chapra	88·6	Comilla	65·4
Purnea	86·5	Jessore	64·7

103. The annual statement No. XV (Vital) appended to the report having been amended under Home Department Resolution No. $\frac{3\text{-Jails}}{120-1.50}$, dated the 9th March 1896, no detailed comparison of certain diseases between the figures of 1896 and of previous years can be made. The only heads which have been retained are cholera and anæmia and debility.

Principal diseases causing sickness and death.

	Admission.	Deaths.
Malarial fever	4,643	58
Dysentery	3,692	114
Other diseases of group A, sub-group I, including small-pox, mumps, simple continued fever, etc. ...	3,059	17
Diarrhœa	1,598	19
Abscess, boils and ulcers of all kinds	1,010	5
Other respiratory diseases, other than pneumonia, tubercle of lungs, etc.	576	8
Pneumonia	257	46
Anæmia and general debility	234	20
Tubercle of lungs, hœmoptysis and pneumonia, phthisis	165	53
Cholera	112	60

104. The prophylactic treatment of malarial diseases described in paragraph 104 of last year's report was continued. As the indefinite results reported in 1895 might have been due to the smallness of the dose—3 grains of sulphate of cinchonidine—given daily, circular instructions were issued to increase the dose to 6 grains, combined with the sulphate, or the tincture of the perchloride, of iron. Attention was also drawn to the remarks made by experimenters in other countries that the best results had been obtained by large doses two or three times in the week. Having regard to the negative results obtained in 1895 in many jails, it was recommended that the prophylactic should not be given in the dimness of the early morning, as had been done hitherto, but at one of the mid-day parades, when the responsible officers of the jail were present. It is very necessary that the Superintendent and Medical Officer keep themselves acquainted with the working of this parade, or it is apt to become a sham, and no results will be observed. Many medical officers have submitted full reports, and have evidently given the subject careful attention. The majority are of opinion that much benefit has been derived, and the number of cases of intermittent and remittent fever has diminished. In some cases in which the number has not decreased the attacks have been of a milder type. The good effect extends to all diseases

Prophylactics.

associated with malaria, and malarial cachexia and malarial dysentery have been less pronounced and severe. Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel C. J. W. Meadows says—

One of the principal causes of jail dysentery is undoubtedly malaria and resulting cachexia. I consider this prophylactic treatment to be extremely valuable, and I am of opinion that the comparative immunity of the prisoners in this jail (Cuttack) from dysentery, at least that of a pronounced and severe type, is in a great measure due to this precaution.

Surgeon-Major R. H. Whitwell, at Bankipore, has arrived at the same conclusions, and attributes the lessened severity and mortality from dysentery to this cause. In some jails malarial fever and dysentery were almost absent during the latter months of the year, which is partly attributable to the unusual dryness of the season. Several medical officers are unable to trace any good results from the administration of the prophylactic, or consider them so doubtful that opinion should be reserved until a more extended trial has been given. The Medical Officers of the Presidency, Mymensingh, and Muzaffarpur Jails cannot ascribe any definite influence or general or marked effect to its administration. The Medical Officer of the Dacca Jail thinks, on the whole, the measure was beneficial. Surgeon-Captain C. R. M. Green of the Bankura Jail has furnished a detailed report. After careful experiment with sulphate of cinchonidine and iron in full doses, continued throughout the fever season, he is of opinion that no markedly beneficial effects are to be observed on the incidence of bowel-disease, but the liability to malarial fever has much decreased.

Vaccination.

105. The rule that the date of vaccination and result shall be noted on the history ticket is beginning to have a good result in ensuring more prompt and careful vaccination. In the Indian Medical Gazette for March 1896, Surgeon-Captain W. J. Buchanan drew attention to the large number of successful vaccinations among apparently protected prisoners in the Bhagalpur Central Jail. Further observations on susceptibility to vaccination, published in the Indian Medical Gazette for July 1896, have been recorded by Surgeon-Captain D. M. Moir while Medical Officer of the Presidency Jail in 1894 and 1895. In this period 2,151 prisoners were vaccinated with the following results:

	Number of prisoners vaccinated.		Ratio per cent. of successful cases.
	1894.	1895.	1894.	1895.
Previous inoculation	286	132	53·14	74·24
Previous inoculation and small-pox ...	50	31	42·0	45·32
Previous vaccination	450	28	40·0	40·82
Previous vaccination and inoculation ...	128	77	44·53	41·58
Previous vaccination and small-pox ...	68	70	45·37	42·85
Previous small-pox	238	181	45·37	48·61
Previous small-pox inoculation and vaccination.		11	10·0	36·36
Unprotected	36	60	77·7	75·0

In 1895 the ratio per cent. of successful re-vaccinations amongst those previously inoculated, 74·24, was almost as high as that of the unprotected, 75·0, i.e., inoculated prisoners were almost as susceptible to vaccination as the unprotected. They were also more susceptible than those who only bore marks of previous vaccination. This would seem to indicate that previous inoculation or small-pox does not necessarily destroy the susceptibility to subsequent vaccination, and that primary successful vaccination renders people more refractory to re-vaccination than is the case with either inoculation or small-pox, or both combined. Dr. Moir remarks: Immunity from, or susceptibility to, vaccination is a different thing from liability to small-pox, and the question is still unsettled whether prisoners with marks of small-pox or inoculation are as prone to suffer from small-pox as those who have been successfully vaccinated and re-vaccinated.

Dysentery.

106. Owing to the alteration in the classification of diseases directed by the Government of India, no exact comparison can be made with the figures of previous years. Dysentery and diarrhœa, which were previously shown under the same heading, are now recorded separately. In the jails and subsidiary jails of the province in 1896 there were 3,693 admissions and 115 deaths from dysentery, and 1,598 admissions and 19 deaths from diarrhœa, or 5,291 admissions and 134 deaths from both causes, as compared with 5,666 admissions and 155 deaths in 1895. Dysentery was less frequent and fatal, while diarrhœa was more prevalent. Owing to the extremely dry autumn months, malaria and malarial dysentery were not so noticeable, and in many places were almost absent. Dr. Meadows at Cuttack, writing in January 1897, remarks that not a single case of dysentery or diarrhœa had occurred since October. This was also noticeable at Dacca, Bhagalpur, and Arrah. At the Hazaribagh Central Jail there were only 19 cases of dysentery in the year, and for weeks together there were no cases showing distinct symptoms of dysentery in the hospital, although all cases of dysentery, however slight, were treated there. This is very remarkable, considering the large number of weakly and old prisoners confined there. Bowel-disease was much lessened at Burdwan during the latter months of the year. Brigade-Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel Flood Murray remarks of the Arrah Jail—

> The sickness has been less than in previous year. This is specially marked as regards fever and dysentery. There were 107 admissions from the former and 31 from the latter disease against 181 and 96 respectively in the previous year. This is to be attributed to the dryness of the year, to which is due the better health of the surrounding population.

Under Dr. Flood Murray the health of the Arrah Jail prisoners, which was formerly very bad, is now better than the average. Dysentery was worst in the Midnapore Central Jail, where there were 310 admissions and 10 deaths; Alipore Central Jail 309 cases and 6 deaths. There were 2 deaths at Dacca out of 237 admissions. The number of admissions at the Bhagalpur, Buxar, and Hazaribagh Central Jails was very small, as also the mortality. The largest ratio of admissions per mille in District Jails occurred at Bogra, Jessore, Comilla, Dinajpur, Barasat, Purnea, Rangpur, and the highest mortality ratio at Chapra, Dinajpur, Comilla, and Purnea. There was no mortality from dysentery in the following jails:

Presidency—European.	Bogra.	Muzaffarpur.
Berhampore.	Noakhali.	Darbhanga.
Khulna.	Gaya.	Monghyr.
Darjeeling.	Arrah.	Malda.

No death from dysentery in the Orissa Division Jails—or in the Chaibassa Jail. The medical officers of jails have much to say as to the large number of prisoners in whom the disease has recurred and who had suffered from dysentery prior to admission to jail. Very slight causes are sufficient to cause the disease to reappear. The Medical Officer of the Hazaribagh Central Jail remarks—

> A very large proportion of all classes of prisoners have at some time or other suffered from malarial dysentery; consequently the slightest fault in cooking or dietary shows itself with wonderful rapidity.

In the Faridpur Jail 14 prisoners were admitted suffering from dysentery. At Mymensingh 30 per cent. had suffered from this disease before admission to jail. At the Darbhanga Jail of the total number, there was no history of a previous attack in 40, or 29·20 per cent. There was a history of dysentery a month or less prior to conviction in 16, or 11·68 per cent., a history of dysentery from one to three months prior to conviction 19, or 13·87 per cent. A history of dysentery from three to six months before conviction in 23, or 16·78 per cent., and a history of dysentery more than six months previously in 39, or 28·47 per cent., that is, of the total number treated for the disease, 29·20 had not had dysentery before admission to jail, while 70·80 had suffered previously. At Chittagong the Medical Officer remarks—

The patient who died was subject to chronic dysentery prior to admission. None of these cases were dependent on causes connected with jail life, but occurred in prisoners who had suffered from the disease prior to their admission into jail.

Anæmia and general debility.

107. The admissions and deaths under this head show a decrease, the numbers being 234 with 20 deaths, against 546 and 30 deaths in 1895. The prisoners in the following jails suffered from this cause during the year:

Dacca	...	...	...	...	53 with 2 deaths.
Mymensingh		...	...	...	27 „ 3 „
Alipore	...	...	...	...	17
Motihari	...	...	...	...	15
Chapra	...	...	...	...	11
Comilla	...	...	...	...	5 with 3 deaths.

Of the 234 admissions, 53 and 27 occurred in the adjoining districts of Dacca and Mymensingh; 15 admissions from this cause are reported from Motihari, a jail in a district in which famine relief works have been necessary.

Cholera.

108. The number of admissions from cholera increased from 47 to 112, and of deaths from 26 to 60. This was principally due to two outbreaks of cholera which occurred at the Darbhanga Jail, 28 admissions and 22 deaths, and at the Bankipore Jail, 36 admissions and 12 deaths. At Darbhanga the disease was first caused by drinking the water of a tank in the outer grounds, which on examination was found to be teeming with comma bacilli. The standing orders for out gangs to take sterilized water had been disregarded. The outbreak lasted from 31st March to 15th April. On hearing of the outbreak, Professor Haffkine, who happened to be in Calcutta, started the same night for Darbhanga, and the next day inoculated 86 prisoners out of 160 who were in camp. No compulsion was used nor was any reward offered to induce the prisoners to come forward; the prisoners were eager for the operation, and those passed over for want of sufficient virus considered themselves badly used. Professor Haffkine also inoculated 25 out of 53 prisoners remaining in the jail. Eleven cases of cholera occurred in camp after Professor Haffkine's visit, of which 8 occurred in prisoners, who had not been inoculated. As the number of the inoculated and uninoculated was about the same, this is strong presumptive evidence in favour of inoculation, especially as all the uninoculated prisoners died, whereas only one died of the 3 inoculated prisoners. All the 8 cases in camp, after Professor Haffkine's visit, occurred within a few hours of the time of the inoculation of the other prisoners, whereas the earliest of the 3 cases among the inoculated occurred on the third day after inoculation, and the last on the fourth day. The immunity of those inoculated is not more remarkable than the immediate increase in the number of attacks among those not inoculated. No such definite results were observed among those inoculated in the jail. Of 53 prisoners, 25 were inoculated. There were 5 attacks among these 53 prisoners after the time of inoculation, 2 being inoculated and 3 uninoculated. All these 5 prisoners died.

At Bankipore there was an outbreak of cholera on the 24th May, which lasted till the 5th June. Altogether there were 20 cases of cholera and 38 of choleraic diarrhœa—15 prisoners died, or about 26 per cent. of those attacked.

Of 274 souls in jail, 193 males, 14 females and 5 children were removed into camp. Among the prisoners in camp, 15 were attacked and 4 died. Professor Haffkine arrived on the 31st May and inoculated 113 prisoners of both sexes and of all ages the same evening. The usual precautions were taken to ensure that no compulsion should be used to induce the prisoners to come forward for the operation. No increased immunity can be ascribed to the inoculation.

Mortality.

109. The total number of deaths among convicts in jails and subsidiary jails (including 4 moribund prisoners who were released under rule 504 (a) of the Jail Code, of whom 2 were alive at the end of 1896) was 461, against 418 in 1895 and 754 in 1894. Of the 450 convicts who died in jail (including 2 who died out of hospital), 125, or 277·8 per mille, were received into jail in good health, 165, or 366·7 per mille, were found to be in indifferent health, and 160, or 355·5 per mille, in bad health. Out of 10 convicts who died at the Burdwan Jail, 2 were admitted in good health, 4 in indifferent, and 4 in bad health. Out of 9 deaths at Suri only 2 were admitted in good health. At Bankura, out of 13 deaths (including 1 under-trial) 2 were received in good health, 7 in indifferent, and 4 in bad health. At Hooghly, out of 10 deaths only 1 was admitted in good health. At Alipore, out of 36 deaths (including 2 under-trials) 12 were admitted in good health, 15 in indifferent, and 9 in bad health. Seven prisoners died within seven days of their admission into the jail and jail hospital. Of these 7 deaths, 1 died from cholera (within nine hours), 2 died from tetanus (within twenty-four hours), 1 died from acute dysentery (within five days), 1 died from pneumonia (within twenty-four hours) and 1 died from cholera (within four days). Of 6 deaths (including 2 under-trials) at Berhampore, 2 were admitted in indifferent and 4 in bad health. Surgeon-Lieutenant-Colonel G. Price remarks—

> There were 6 deaths during the year against 1 in 1895. Of these 6 cases, 1 was a cholera case (the only one of which a separate report has been sent in the prescribed form) and 4 of the others were admitted in bad health and sent straight to hospital, three of the four being hopeless cases which died soon after.

At Jessore, out of 8 deaths only 1 was admitted in good health. Out of 16 deaths at Dinajpur only 2 were admitted in good health. At Rangpur, out of 10 deaths (including 1 under-trial) only 1 was admitted in good health. Of the 2 deaths at Bogra, 1 was admitted in indifferent and 1 in bad health (under-trial). At Faridpur, out of 5 deaths only 1 was admitted in good health. At Barisal, out of 23 deaths (including 2 under-trials) 8 were admitted in good health, 6 in indifferent, and 9 in bad health. The 1 death at Chittagong was in a prisoner admitted in indifferent health. At Chapra, out of 13 deaths (including 3 under-trials) only 1 was admitted in good health and 12 in bad health. Out of 17 deaths (including 3 under-trials) at Motihari, 4 were admitted in good health, 4 in indifferent, and 9 in bad health. Of 5 deaths at Muzuffarpur, only 1 was admitted in good health. Out of 10 deaths (including 1 under-trial) at Bhagalpur, 3 were admitted in good health. At Hazaribagh, out of 26 deaths, 10 were admitted in indifferent health and 16 in bad health. Out of 9 deaths (including 2 under-trials) at Ranchi, 1 was admitted in good health, 2 in indifferent, and 6 in bad health. Of the 8 deaths at the Daltonganj Jail, 3 were admitted in indifferent and 5 in bad health. The Barisal Jail has been particularly unfortunate in receiving prisoners either moribund or in such a bad state of health that death occurred in a few days or weeks after admission to jail. Seven deaths occurred in this way. There were also 2 deaths from cholera.

Medical Committees.

110. A Committee of Medical Officers visited Chapra and Bogra to enquire into the heavy mortality there, and made the following recommendations:—The Chapra Jail is an old building situated in the middle of a large and dirty town. There are grave defects of site, surroundings, and construction which cannot be satisfactorily removed. The Committee therefore recommended that a sanitary jail be built on a clean site without the limits of the town, for which a suitable place was selected by them. They also asked that the municipality should be called upon to remove the insanitary condition of the lanes and tanks in the neighbourhood; that greater attention be paid to the conservancy and cleanliness of the jail; six out of eight wells to be filled up; and looking to the prevalence of dysentery and diarrhœa, that better food be given to the prisoners. At Bogra the Committee recommended that the outer wall be lowered from 15 to 12 feet, the hospital enclosure wall to 4 feet, removal of walls in the cook-shed, construction of a masonry drain for sullage water and a pipe drain for latrine water, ventilating openings for the sleeping, under-trial, and hospital wards near the roof, a better cooking range, water-proof cover to the well, and improvements to the spill drains and bathing platforms, a night-soil ejector and two masonry platforms, and a night latrine with the receptacle in the open air; enlargement of the under-trial ward.
